Public Companies.

THE DAY DAWN GOLD-MINING COMPANY, Limited, LITTLE RIVER, BRAIDWOOD.

Registered under the Companies Act of New South Wales.

CAPITAL, £15,000, in 30,000 Shares of 10s each, of which 200 fully paid-up were retained by the original promoters.

Authorised increase, £5000, in 10,000 Shares of 10s each.

DIRECTORS: H. S. GANNON, Chairman. H. CHISHOLM. W. J. EVERETT. R. J. C. MADDRELL. JOHN DAVIDSON.

The Company, by special resolution, in conformity with its Articles of Association and the Companies Act, is authorised to increase its capital by the creation and issue of 10,000 new shares of 10s each; of this number the present shareholders have already applied for 5000, and the balance is now offered to the public on the following terms, namely:—Sixpence per share on application, sixpence per share on allotment, and the balance in calls not exceeding threepence per share per month.

Shares will be allotted according to priority of application.

The Company was formed on 1st August, 1888. Its property comprises five gold leases of 4 acres each, machine site, &c., &c.

In October last year, a 3ft. 6in. Huntington mill was erected, and the Company now has the following machinery and plant in full working order:—

1 5ft. Huntington mill } capable of putting through 120
1 3ft. 6in. ditto } tons of stone per week
2 frue Vanner concentrators
2 Berdan pans
Engine and boiler (stationary), 25-h.p.
2 steam pumps
1 Blake vertical sinking pump, capable of delivering 3000 gallons of water per hour
2 automatic ore feeders
1 Dodge rock-breaker, capable of breaking 2½ tons of stone per hour
Large tanks, holding about 3000 gallons of water
Dam, capable of holding about 1,000,000 gallons of water; this dam is almost always full
Whim, tramways, machine-shed, manager's house, store, and other tenements; forge, retort house, assay plant, lavatory, &c., &c.

Since the machinery was started in October, 1888, 752oz. of free gold have been obtained. This gold has averaged, according to the Mint returns, £3 18s per oz.

This yield would have been much larger but for the great amount of prospecting work necessary to be done during the first seven or eight months. This rendered the output comparatively small, as the company's capital was not sufficient to employ a large staff of hands, its calling power being only £250 per month.

The reef has been tested to a depth of 120ft. and drives has been put in along the line of reef a total distance of 380ft. Everything goes to prove that the reef is getting richer and more defined as we go down. At present the average width of crushing stuff is about 3ft., and continues to show payable gold.

The Company has commenced sinking a main shaft 300ft. deep. The contract for the first 150ft. is already let, 60ft. having been sunk to date.

It is to enable the company to sink this main shaft and to generally expand the company's operations that an increase of capital is necessary.

From the present prospects of the mine it is confidently believed that with a little further development the company must soon be dividend-paying.

Early application is necessary to the undersigned, from whom forms of application and other information may be obtained.

W. M. H. QUIRK, Legal Manager.

ENGLISH GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Sept. 27.

After their usual Continental tours and visits to fashionable foreign centres of society, many distinguished persons of the "upper ten" are returning to their English homes and estates. Cub-hunting has commenced with considerable spirit in various parts of the country, partridge shooting is still an active sport, and there are many social functions in which country ladies are engrossed. Congresses, too, are being held in provincial cities, and attract many distinguished people. The social and hospitable society of congresses developes pleasant dinner parties, five-o'clock teas, and excursions to interesting and picturesque places. The British Association has concluded its scientific picnic at Newcastle-on-Tyne, where many great subjects have been discussed by great authorities. A congress devoted to sanitary science is sitting this week at Worcester, while "gallant little Wales" is having its Church Congress at Cardiff. We shall learn from Worcester all about the correct and proper sanitary arrangements of towns and cities, and the engineering requirements in connection with drains and sewerage. There will be lighter subjects thrown in, as regards the chemistry of food and other domestic affairs. Wales will be informed of the legitimate ecclesiastical attractions of the Church and its progress. The principality, considering it is largely a dissenting community, has lately heard a good deal about the Established Church. Lord Randolph Churchill began it, and the Church Congress will keep the ball rolling. It may be said, however, as a good sign of the times, that Church and Dissent have come much closer together of late years. The ministers of all denominations, Church included, are willing to meet on charitable platforms, and to combine for the temporal and spiritual good of the community. This is the case throughout the kingdom, and it may be said to considerably weaken the opposition to the Established Church. As Mr. Joseph Chamberlain himself pointed out the other day at Birmingham, the Established Church is no longer a persecuting Church: the only complaint against it on the part of Dissenters is, that it is a State Church. In Wales there is probably less cause for complaint than in some other parts of the country, for the reason that the Church in Wales is what is popularly called the Evangelical or Low Church. The services are as simple as the Prayer Book will permit, and are not allowed in any way to approach what is considered to be the dangers of the Ritualistic or High Church. It is in the social life of towns and cities that Dissent is supposed rather to suffer, but this is very much of an old story. Five and twenty years ago Dissent was "looked down upon," but to-day the Chapel holds its own in most places with the Established Church itself.

The Queen continues to be much better in health. Scotland agrees with the Queen; and it is also satisfactory to state that the Prince of Wales is once more in fairly good health and spirits. The leg trouble, which has been more or less of an anxiety for some years, is now almost at an end. The Prince's doctors advise him not to take violent exercise, but his Royal Highness has been indulging in those country sports and pastimes which he has always enjoyed. One day this week, with his son, Prince Albert Victor, and Lord Cadogan, he went deer-stalking in Ballochbine Forest, on the Balmoral estate. He brought down three noble stags to his own gun, the rest of the party killing one each. At night there was a torchlight dance in front of the castle, in which several of the royalties took part. The Prince, after the fatigues of the day, found himself unable to join the party. Her Majesty frequently sees the Empress Eugenie, who, a correspondent informs us, looks weak and sad, and walks by the aid of a stick with something like the gait of an old lady. She attends the Roman Catholic service at St. Andrew's, Braemar. On Sunday last she went to mass, accompanied by Madame d'Arros, and the Duc de Bassart. The Honourable Miss Stornor and General Macdonough were also present. The church was crowded by a large number of strangers, excursionists, and visitors.

Mr. Edison, the famous American electrician, has been for some time staying in Paris, where he has been much lionised, interviewed, and talked about. While he was there an important company connected with electric lighting, and for other purposes, was introduced to the investing public, and accepted with much éclat. The Daily News, in a series of articles on the electric lighting of London, surprises the town with the announcement that the London Electric Supply Corporation at Deptford, which is to begin the lighting of certain districts of London on the 1st of October, is far ahead of anything of the kind in the United States, where we are led to believe the use of electricity is far beyond anything we have dreamed of in this country. For the moment, we are told, Deptford, in England, is really the hub of the electrical world. The house-lighting department of electric supply in the United States numbers 2,600,000 incandescent lamps; but this single company at Deptford, called the London, has made arrangements to light two millions of glow lamps throughout its district of the metropolis, and this company is only one out of 11 companies which are being formed for the lighting of London. On the 1st of October Deptford will turn on its electric tap to supply its first series of orders which number only 20,000 lamps, but every day the officials are besieged with fresh demands for the electric supply, and once the light begins to be used it will rapidly become general throughout the metropolis. Mr. Edison has this week arrived in England to remain a few days as the guest of Sir John Pender, at Foots Cray-place, Sidcup, Kent, for the purpose of inspecting the stations of the electric light company of which Sir John is the chairman. Mr. Edison was taken ill on his arrival, the result of a severe cold, and has been laid up for a day or two. He hoped, however, to get through his work during the week, and to return to Paris at the end of the week. Mr. Edison, it seems, is occasionally troubled with deafness, and the recent chill from which he is suffering has very much aggravated this affliction. His interviews, as published in some of the English and foreign papers, rather represented him as exaggerating the wonders of Paris and the Eiffel Tower at the expense of reflections upon England, a country which he had never seen. No doubt Mr. Edison's views of the Eiffel Tower and the exhibition were pitched in somewhat high-flown language, and it is possible that, not being a traveller, that he could conceive of no other great city being equal to the most important of European centres which it had yet been his lot to visit. He is not likely this week to see much of London, being engaged on what seems to be a business visit; and unfortunately, were it otherwise, the weather has suddenly broken up. We have had five or six weeks of delightful, dry, sunny autumn days, in which London and her suburbs have looked as gay and bright as pleasant weather can make them. During the last 48 hours, however, the rain has fallen in a steady downpour, and the prospect ahead seems similarly depressing. At the same time fishermen on all our lakes and rivers are welcoming the rain with delight. For weeks past the waters everywhere have been too clear and bright for angling, and while the close time of certain fishes has arrived the opening seasons in connection with others have commenced, and the present rain will considerably enhance the universal and popular sport of fishing.

The London critics seem to have entered upon a career of genial toleration. They have praised "Day by Day" at the Adelphi; they have said kind things of "A Man's Shadow" at the Haymarket; and they have made a great effort to describe "The Royal Oak" at Drury Lane as a fine historical play. The truth is, none of these pieces are worthy of the intelligence of the age in which we live, or of the lavish treatment they have received in the way of stage decoration. "London Day by Day" (the title taken from a daily column in the Telegraph) is just as scrappy as its title, a series of what may be called dramatic paragraphs, each more or less disconnected from the other, but all of them brilliantly decorated and working up in an inconsequential kind of way to a dénouement that is quite dramatic. "The Royal Oak" has a better theme than "Day by Day," and is more or less historical, the central idea being Charles's escape and hiding in the traditional tree which gives us, in our more or less national observance, Oak-apple Day. The story is not well told, nor particularly well acted; but it is surrounded and decorated with fine dresses and impressive scenery. If the public is satisfied with this kind of panoramic work there is probably no more to be said, although thoughtful persons regard it as a pity that so much good scenery and so many artistic dresses should not be associated with worthy dramatic work. "A Man's Shadow" at the Haymarket, Mr. Buchanan's version of "Roger la Honte," is less of a scenic display than the two pieces just mentioned, but is a dramatic version of a French story which, after all, is only one of police—the committal of a murder, the arrest and punishment of the wrong man, and the hunting down of the right one. To-morrow night "The Dead Heart," at the Lyceum, promises great things. Mr. Irving and his powerful staff have been at work on Watts Phillips's well-known and admirably-constructed drama for some months. The theatre has been closed during several weeks for rehearsals. The dresses are designed and modelled on the three periods of France which are illustrated in the play, the artists engaged on this work being Mr. Roger, Mr. W. H. Margetson, and Mrs. Comyns-Carr. The chief members of the cast are Mr. Irving, Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Bancroft, Mr. Arthur Sterling, Mr. Righton, Miss Kate Phillips, and Mr. Gordon Craig, the last named being the son of Miss Ellen Terry, who plays the young man in the last act for whom Robert Landry sacrifices his life on the guillotine. Mr. W. H. Pollock, editor of the Saturday Review, has revised the original book written by the late Mr. Watts Phillips, the production of which some 30 years ago was the theatrical sensation of the time. Mr. Benjamin Webster played Robert Landry, Mrs. Alfred Mellon (Miss Woolgar), the countess, who is now to be represented by Miss Ellen Terry. The play was an enormous success, Mr. Webster's acting commanding universal praise and admiration. The phrase "psychological study," which is now so common in criticism both of plays and novels, was, so far as I remember, used prominently for the first time by Mr. John Oxenford in the Times as applicable to Mr. Webster's delineation of the aged prisoner brought forth from that living tomb, the Bastille, the taking of which was the great sensation scene of the time, as it will be to-morrow night in Mr. Irving's production of the same piece. The Gaiety Company, returning from its travels in America and the colonies, have been welcomed back this week with great demonstrations of pleasure and delight at the popular house in the Strand. The new extravaganza, "Ruy Blas," turns out, however, to be a mere vehicle for the fun, drolleries, and dances of Miss Nellie Farren, Mr. Leslie, Miss Lettie Lind, Mr. Lonnen, and the other burlesque performers who have so large a following of the jeunesse dorée in the stalls, and of the ordinary public in the pit and gallery. The "gods" hung out a banner inscribed, "The boys welcome back their Nellie." Mr. Willard, at the Shaftesbury, has proved himself the fine actor and excellent stage manager everybody expected. "The Middleman" is an emphatic success, and promises to have a long and steady run. In the meantime Mr. Willard will give several matinees of old and new plays. Notably he will appear himself in Charles Mathews's part in "Used Up," and Robson's very dissimilar character of Daddy Hardacre. Mr. Willard has no rival in his own line; he is an actor of large experience and fine artistic method. Some of the papers, I see, report his engagement for America by Mr. A. M. Palmer. There is no truth in this, although Mr. Willard is considering various offers to make a tour in the States next autumn. His lease of the Shaftesbury Theatre is not a long one, and it is probable that he may take a journey through America, and even visit Australia, before opening the new theatre which is at his disposal. The Shaftesbury has made its first success under his management, and will probably now do well, seeing that the new avenue is becoming a well-known thoroughfare. When Mr. D'Oyly Curtis's new theatre, opposite the Shaftesbury, is opened, the new street will be still better known. Among all the new London theatres the house which is nearing completion, opposite the Shaftesbury, will in every way be the best and most artistic. It is not settled yet whether the new opera by Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan will be produced at the old house, the Savoy, or at the new theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue.

The death of Mr. Wilkie Collins removes from literary life and enterprise a remarkable and amiable gentleman. Mr. Collins had been a sufferer for some years from gout and other ailments, but had borne his physical trials with courage and resignation. He will live in the history of fiction, not so much a master of literary style like Bulwer, Dickens, and Thackeray, but as a genius in the art of dramatic construction. His "Woman in White" and "The Moonstone," from the storyteller's point of view, are two of the most exciting novels in the language. He had also a rare sense and feeling for characterisation; his Count Fosco, Captain Wragge, and Geoffrey Delmayne are three fine examples of his capacity in this direction. No novelist worked with greater care. He wove his skilful plot with laborious conscientiousness. His method was entirely different from that of Sir Walter Scott and Charles Dickens, much, however, as he admired those magicians of fiction. He was a great friend of Dickens and of Charles Reade, loved the stage just as much as both of his contemporaries, and would no doubt have done great work for the drama had he devoted himself to the study of that class of literature. His plays "The New Magdalen," "The Woman in White," and "Poor Miss Finch," while they adhered perhaps too closely to the novels for dramatic effect, were excellent dramas, in connection with two of which Miss Ada Cavendish made a distinct mark in the history of the stage. Her "New Magdalen" was as striking a performance as "Miss Finch," although both characters were entirely opposite creations. The deceased novelist, although he lived in a very modest and retiring way, was not rich. He leaves, it is said, something less than £10,000, his executors being his doctor, Carr-Beard, and Mr. Watt, the literary agent. Mr. Collins never married, and he has bequeathed all his property to an intimate friend. He had but one relative whom he knew—an old aunt in Dorsetshire—and he died with only his physician and housekeeper to minister to his last wishes and requirements; but the latter had been in his service for 30 years, and the former was a lifelong attached companion and friend.

Australia will probably find more to admire and cherish in Eliza Cook's poetry than the London critics seem willing to discover. The aged poetess, according to the memoirs of her which appeared yesterday, outlived her time; she lived only in the pages of Chandos Classics as a guide to this century's poetical literature. "The latter day critics," we are told, "make no mention of her, though Matthew Arnold has a few smart words about her as a poet of the Bourgeoisie, whose songs would give more delight to a Dissenting minister at the grave side than would the words of our Litany," and so on. This, at all events, is how the Daily Telegraph writes of her yesterday; but thousands of the "largest circulations" readers will entirely disagree with this very superfine criticism. It is more than probable that some of Eliza Cook's songs will live as long as those which Matthew Arnold has written. The critics are clearly no guides in these matters. There are men of light and leading who scoff at Matthew Arnold just as much as he scoffed at Eliza Cook, and just as much as certain current critics of the moment scoff at both. "The Old Arm Chair," "Song of the Carrion Crow," "The Old Mill Stream," "The Flag of the Free Land of my Birth," "Prayer," and many another bit of "household warbling" are not of such plebeian mould as the worshippers of Swinburne and Walt Whitman would have the world think; and there is in Eliza Cook's collection a dramatic poem called "The Sacrilegious Gamesters" that is a really fine bit of dramatic composition. A community that is full of praise of Wilkie Collins might fairly find a wreath for the dead poetess, while it is throning the grave of the dead novelist, and even going so far as to suggest that the latter should find his last resting-place in Westminster Abbey. Poor Matthew Arnold might have spared the world a sneer at his brother minister, though the Rev. Mr. Barfield, the Walsall clergyman who was thought to have fallen a victim to his anti-Irish league opinions, and whose disappearance from his cure of souls has been one of the grave topics of the day, turns out to be a vagabond, and worse. He has eloped with a young girl from Walsall, with whom he had been consorting improperly during some of his lecture tours, which were devoted to the maintenance of the union between England and Ireland.

PARISIAN GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Sept. 26.

That the elections of last Sunday passed off with the utmost order and quietude, notwithstanding the scenes of fisticuff that had preceded the great day, will already have been announced to you by telegraph; also that the upshot, altogether favourable to the Government and fatal to Boulanger at least for the present, will not be definitely known until some ten days hence, when the 177 ballots will have taken place. As far as can be judged of beforehand, the Republican candidates will probably be successful at nearly all these ballotings. If the Radicals and moderate Republicans could decide to lay aside their differences, and vote together against the common enemy, their victory on Sunday week would be certain; otherwise they would be playing the game of those who, in order to pull down what is, make common cause with the advocates of a Dictatorship, by which they hope to rise to power. The "brav' Général" sends word to friends and foes on this side of the Channel, assuring them that his game is not lost, that the new Chamber will repeat all the errors of the last one; that the parties therein will continue their quarrels, pull down Cabinet after Cabinet, and bring the country to the verge of ruin, when a general cry for his intervention will be raised with such intensity that he will come back, take possession of the reins of power, drive out M. Carnot and take his place, and forthwith inaugurate the new régime that is to clear the Government of rogues and rascals, and render France more glorious, powerful, and prosperous than ever. With all these assurances, not a word defining the new régime that is to accomplish these marvels. In point of fact, with the exception of those who hope to climb to power on the shoulders of the would-be Cæsar, no one seems to regard the latter otherwise than as a vanished phantom.

As far as can be foreseen, it is thought that the new Chamber will consist of 200 Conservatives, 300 supporters of the Government, and that there will be a small but compact group of Boulangists on the watch for every opportunity of giving trouble, unencumbered with scruples, and diligent in preventing the success of those in whose shoes they are impatient to place their own feet.

To see how calmly, and almost with indifference, the men of Paris deposited their votes with the functionary at each voting place charged to deposit them in the urns, one could well wonder whence arises the wild and furious violence which so often forces onlookers to regard some new outbreak of revolutionary violence as being within the possibilities of things. The persistent interest taken in the Exhibition, and which seems to increase as its closure approaches, has undoubtedly done much to quiet the metropolitan mind during this crisis. Despite cold and wet, the great show is crowded; and whenever a fine day is vouchsafed us, locomotion becomes difficult in and around its various centres. Grand visitors are still making their appearance, are officially conducted over the place and up into the Tower, are lunched and dinnered, and favoured with every attention supposed to be likely to win their favour and that of their senders. But other business is diligently carried on also; the arrival of delegates to the innumerable International Congresses prompting to displays of the matters which they specially represent.

Thus, a few days ago, the delegates to the Railway Congress, to that of engineers, and to other kindred gatherings, went out in a body to witness the experiments in the rapid forming of a steel bridge, composed of moveable segments, specially in view of the necessities of war, and the rapid transit of troops and stores, though equally adaptable to the needs of peace and commerce, and constituting the latest inventions of M. Eiffel. The Minister of War, and a company of generals, were present at the experiment, in the grounds of M. Eiffel's great establishment at Levallois-Perret. This bridge, with a total weight of 86 tons, had been set up, by a party of workmen without the help of machinery, in 50 hours; it bore, without any appreciable bending, a weight of 225,000 tons. Having served the need of an army, the bridge can be taken down in 10 hours. All present warmly congratulated M. Eiffel on this new triumph of his inventive genius, and did justice to a comfortable lunch before returning to Paris. Next day, the Minister conveyed 450 members of the railway congress to Fontainebleau, to present them to the President of the Republic. They arrived in two special trains, found the station literally covered with flags of all nations in honour of their visit, took their places in 60 carriages of all descriptions, and were driven to the palace, where they were cordially received by Mr. Carnot in the reception-rooms known as "The Pope's Apartments." Placed alphabetically, by nationality, they were presented individually to the President. Some ladies who had accompanied the party were presented to Madame Carnot, and offered her a superb bouquet of roses, brought with them to this end, from Paris. After a handsome lunch they were shown over the palace and the gardens, wandered for an hour in the beautiful forest, and then were conveyed back to Paris, enchanted with the Presidential couple and with their day.

The members of the British Iron and Steel Institute are being cordially and handsomely received by their French brethren, under the presidency of M. Eiffel, who loses no opportunity of insisting on the bonds of sympathy that should unite members of the same profession in all countries. The Britons thus handsomely fêted, one of whom has read at the Congress a remarkable paper advocating the erection of a steel bridge across the Channel, have just given a splendid banquet to their French confrères.

One of the latest of the international congresses, "for weekly rest, considered from the point of health and social influence," has just held its first sitting. A considerable number of influential persons, presidents of companies, directors of important enterprises, of railways, gas and other companies, of educational departments, chambers of commerce, &c., of various countries, urgently demand the establishment of a rest-day for each week, and are making arrangements for the discussion of the matter by the press, in order to influence public opinion. It is evident that, however beneficial such a suspension of labour might be, the practical difficulties in the way of stopping all branches of labour on the same day would be almost insurmountable.

The delegates to the International Congress of Maritime Works are being fêted in the same handsome and cordial way. While all this pleasant fraternising is going on, a leading member of the new Chamber is addressing the public on the absolute necessity for that body to refuse to renew the treaties of commerce which expire in 1892, to prepare a general tariff that will put an end to the benefit of the most-favoured-nation clause now enjoyed by Germany, and, "as far as possible, safeguarding the interests of French trade and industry;" in other words, shutting out the trade and industry of the rest of the world.

Meantime, Paris has given itself a Commercial Exchange, a handsome building, erected on the site of the old wheat market, officially inaugurated by Minister Tirard, and now open for business. When we learn that England imports one billion and a half of eggs yearly, and that France, by the port of Marseilles alone, imports six millions and a-half of tons of eatables—principally vegetables—in the same space of time, the impossibility of successfully carrying out such admonitions becomes apparent. The greater part of this enormous import comes from Algeria, where market gardening has been greatly developed of late. In consequence of the tariff-war between France and Italy, the Italian export of vegetables into this country has been almost put a stop to, and Turkey and Egypt have been proportionally drawn upon. The import by sea is mainly of artichokes, peas, beans, and tomatoes. The Marseilles importations are forwarded to Lyons, Paris, and other French centres, and also to London. Last year four million tons of vegetables were sent off by rail from that port.

The great Polar explorer, Nordenskiold, is being made much of by the Academy of Sciences and the devotees of geography and mineralogy, the latter being the special passion of the great despiser of snow and ice, who fully counts on renewing his adventurous researches in their domain. An American—John Muir—who has been exploring Alaska, considers the laying down of a railway round the globe to be a perfectly feasible project, bridging Behring Strait, which is only 60 miles wide at its narrowest place, escaping the attacks of icebergs by making the segments of the bridge to swing easily on their approach, thus keeping the line clear, so that the round-the-world trains of carriages could run without stopping! Such an arrangement might aid the various peoples of the globe to visit one another before their ancient social landmarks are completely obliterated—a process evidently going on with constantly increasing rapidity, and which, in the course of ages, may slacken the desire to travel, as one's journeyings would mostly show one only a repetition of the same things. Thus, European bankers have been recently informed that their trade is as old as the hills, the oldest banknotes known to this planet being the "flying money," or "convenient money," issued in China 2697 B.C. These notes were originally issued by the Treasury, but experience led to their issue by banks under Government inspection. The early Chinese notes were similar to the modern banknotes; they bore the name of the bank, the date of issue, number of the note, signature of the official issuing it, indications of its value in words, in cyphers, and in the pictorial representation in coins, or heaps of coins, equal in amount to its face value, and a notice of the pains and penalties following counterfeiting. Over and above all was a laconic exhortation to industry and thrift, "Produce all you can; spend with economy." The notes were printed in blue ink, on paper made from the fibre of the mulberry-tree. One of these notes, issued 1396 B.C. is carefully preserved in the Asiatic Museum in Petersburg.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF SOME AUSTRALIAN READING BOOKS.

By Viator.

No. II.—IN SCHOOL.

My experience in several representative schools which I visited clearly proves that the Australian reading book is that most favoured by teachers, at any rate, of the more advanced classes. This is natural, for, as I have pointed out, these reading books are much superior to the alternative books of the Irish National series. The only number of the latter which is comparable to the Australian reading books in breadth of choice and interest of matter is the "Fourth Supplement," apparently an after-thought of the compilers of the series. Occasionally, more frequently among the lower classes, I was informed, the Irish National series is used. The Australian series does not pretend to contain anything like Scriptural or religious teaching. It is purely secular, with the exception of permitting the name of the Deity to appear wherever it occurs in the passages which the books contain. Though there is no obtrusion of religion, it is not boycotted, as is the case in the Victorian books. What wretched taste has governed the framers of the expurgated edition of the "Royal Reader" of Victoria will be evident from the mutilation of Longfellow's popular ballad, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," by the excision of a verse, which, though from an artistic point of view it adds little, perhaps, to the merit of the poem, was yet thought necessary by the generally very cultivated and critical judgment of the poet—

> "When the maiden clasped her hands and prayed
> That saved she might be,
> And she thought of Christ who stilled the waves
> On the lake of Galilee."

What is there in the verse to offend the ears of any child? How can it possibly be that it can be construed into religious teaching, when the very poet who wrote it, pure, exalted, and religious as he was, disbelieved in the divinity of Christ? The same policy has been pursued with regard to Burn's "Cotter's Saturday Night" and Tennyson's "May Queen." This sad and curious attempt at the complete secularisation of the Victorian schools does infinite dishonour to the neighbouring colony. It has the appearance of a ludicrous parody on the action of the French revolutionaries, who solemnly interdicted the name of God, and deposed Him in this way from His position in the universe. The folly of such an attempt is only equalled by its ignorance, for, take away from the literature of the world all that which is based upon a recognition of Christianity, and what will be left? It would be almost as difficult to excise the name of Christ from the literature of Christianity as to eliminate the idea of God from the mind of man. The present Minister of Public Instruction in Victoria, no friend himself to religious teaching in the Public schools, characterises this attempt as "a lamentable blunder," and this is only half expressive of its character.

It is not, however, because the Australian series does not contain systematically arranged lessons of a religious nature that it is in favour with the teachers; but because of the more interesting character of the matter. At the first school which I visited the boys read the story of the discovery of America by Columbus from a classic work by one of the best of men and writers, who won Thackeray's admiration for his own simple and childlike qualities of heart—Washington Irving.

It was at Fort-street school. Class after class of boys filled the long room, ranging from boys abutting on 15 years of age to those yet under seven. Bending over slates or reading from books, every young head held a laborious brain, working for exercise now, before many years to throb with the pressure that lays its hot hand on every participator in the struggle for life. No doubt the schoolboy's life has its mimic cares and labour—no doubt the schoolboy's head rests wearily at night sometimes upon his pillow from the weary pursuit of illogical irregular verbs, or the endeavour to solve an equation which cannot by any means be made to balance. Probably, too, it is difficult to sit or handle the cricket bat with ease by reason of the small yellow wand, which they tell me is fast vanishing as a common instrument from the hands of our schoolmasters. The birch may be used too frequently; but in properly administered doses there is traditional evidence that its effect is good. In discountenancing its use we are not training our boys to bear in the best way the stripes which experience, the hardest master of all, will assuredly visit them with; we are, in fact, risking the chance of making them effeminate. During my visit to the school I did not see a single boy caned, though several received courteous but seemingly ominous invitations to visit the master when the classes should be dismissed at lunch hour. Throughout the room a broad busy hum pervaded the atmosphere, broken every now and then by the short and pointed interrogatories or explanations of the teachers. Across the wide playground and through the open window came the monotonous chorus of classes in outbuildings repeating some lesson en masse, and the sharp instructions of the drill-master indicated that embryo soldiers were undergoing military instructions in some part of the ground. Through the open windows the boys could see the broad, bright sunshine pervading all without; could feel the breath of spring blowing in with the breeze; and once in a while were taunted by the clear whistle of a joyous bird dashing about outside, and probably exulting in the confinement of his traditional foes. Everyone who remembers his boyhood knows how hard it was, under similar circumstances, to resist the shrill challenge of birds, the bright blandishments of sunlight, and the broad banalities of spring.

The reading was quite as good as could be expected. Not strained or affected, but easy, natural, and correct. It was not difficult to see that the extract was one in which the boys delighted, telling how Columbus saw a light glimmering at a distance over a wide waste of unknown ocean, and fearing that his eager hopes might deceive him, "called to Pedro Gutierrez gentleman of the king's bed-chamber, and inquired whether he saw a light in that direction," and on being answered in the affirmative, called a corroborative evidence, "Rodorigo Sanchez, of Segovia, and made the same inquiry." The courteous master of the school informed me, in answer to an inquiry, that the extracts relating to travel, natural history, and exploration are those which the taste of the schoolboy most inclines to. This I quite expected, as it is a natural inclination of boyhood to delight in such things. The girls, on the contrary, prefer domestic pieces, those dealing with the affections, and others relating to art and flowers. Although there is a difference between the books read by the girls and those read by the boys of our schools, this is by no means as marked as, considering the wide difference between the masculine and feminine nature, it might be. Nor are the differences apparent by any means remarkable for judgment or discrimination. To take one example. The "Village Blacksmith" is a number in the boy's fifth book. Everyone knows this familiar poem and song, it is as much a favourite with one sex as with the other. It is, however, absent from the girls' reading-book. Its place is supplied by the "Girl and the Drowning Lamb," one of the most insipid results of Wordsworth's sometimes over-acted naturalness. There is plenty of room for the compilation of a new and thoroughly Australian reading series both for girls and boys. It was quite natural to hear that the chapters on Australian exploration are those for which the girls have least taste. On the other hand, they generally delight in history, perhaps because the characters of famous personages are held up to the light in an unsparing fashion, though this, let us hope, is a delight confined more closely to the school-girl grown into womanhood. The histories and historical sketches which adorn our literature might be levied upon to provide extracts for the girls' reading-books with greater freedom than at present, while the distasteful record of exploration and solely-masculine action with which girls are naturally much out of sympathy, might be dismissed. However, to enter on the task of suggesting materials for this purpose would not be wise. Suffice it that these materials are as wide as the world. What women have done in art, in literature, in science, the narratives of these alone would fill a fairly-sized volume, and there is nothing of such information in the books in question. This is a grave oversight, for the power of example and the spirit of emulation are the two things which conduce most towards framing the character of the young. The boys of our schools are better off than the girls, for as I have indicated man's achievements and not woman's form the topics or many of the lessons which they have to peruse daily. It is a very slight thing sometimes which gives a lasting bent to the after life of a boy. A lesson on science, geography, literature, war may place the germ in the youthful soul which is to blossom out afterwards into mature purpose and determine what its life shall be. These boys, ranged behind their formal-looking desks, so much alike, and at the same time so very unlike, have all their possibilities as well as all their troubles before them. This is a stupendous thing to think of. It is not probable, but is is still possible, that there may be here some statesman or military commander in embryo, whose fame will go resounding down the centuries like Cromwell's or Washington's; there may even be a Milton or a Newton among them. Without doubt here are living growing souls who will largely influence the national life of the country—who will hold within their hands the power of making one, perhaps many human souls happy or miserable for life. Each of these in God's good time will probably be a man, with a man's power and a man's responsibilities about him. As to how he will comport himself as a man, and do his devoir in life as becomes a man, much of that depends upon his training. Something, no doubt, will be due to heredity and the force of inevitable association, but most will be due to the character of his education. It is not a light thing, then, which the State undertakes when it accepts as its own the responsibility of training its children, for upon the manner in which that responsibility is discharged the future of the State greatly depends. If the State educates its youth badly it is laying up a rod for its own back; if well, it is taking the most far-seeing and politic measures for its aggrandisement. Already other States are feeling the truth of this, and in the howl of the anarchist and the shriek of the atheist resounding far above all other sounds of popular tumult, may trace the results and hear the condemnations of the system which Victoria is endeavouring to make her own—the system under which the name of God is made an exile from the knowledge of childhood.

The "general religious teaching" in our schools consists of the Scriptural lessons, mainly historical, in the Irish National Series, and the extracts from the Scriptures contained in that known as the "Scripture Lesson Series." These are filled with extracts from the Old and New Testaments retaining the Biblical phraseology. Dogma is carefully excluded from the explanation of these extracts, which devolves upon the teachers. As I heard the master expounding the lessons, the process was confined altogether to the subject matter. The younger classes are, of course, not required to read these books, as the matter and the language are necessarily beyond their comprehension. With these, I was informed, it is customary for the teacher to explain simply the events narrated in the lessons. The boys were not, it must be confessed, as interested in this part of the curriculum as in the ordinary reading-books, judging from their familiarity with the subject matter. Before the lesson began the master summoned those boys who objected to the Scripture instruction to leave the class. Three boys obeyed. Whether this teaching result in any very close acquaintance with the Scriptures or not, I am unable to say, but at any rate the opportunity is given them, and the State emphasises its Christian character. The practice of thus giving literal extracts from the Bible may not be a permanent practice in our State schools; but at any rate the spirit of the Scriptures seems likely to be taught in the schools for a length of time. Should the day ever come when this is abandoned, it will be an evil one for the State. Litera Occidit; spiritus est qui vivificat.

Even regarded from the lower point of view as history or as literature, and setting aside the Divine origin of the Book, it is wise that the youth of the country should be made acquainted with it. Even the modern infidel of the aggressive type of Swinburne or Huxley cannot but eulogise the secondary inspiration of the Bible. Perhaps its claims to historical value are not so evident as its literary excellence, but even these are not likely to be set aside. At any rate, the Sacred Book itself stands as the symbol and the source of the faith of the world—our world at least. It is well that our youth should feel that they are part of this great system upon which our laws and customs are founded as upon a rock. Such instruction binds them to nothing, and when the time comes for them to make their life choice they will be free to do so untrammelled by anything they may have learnt in school. Upon the broad grounds of a belief in God, who will assert that it is evil for children to meet? When the child emerges from school and takes up the weapons of man he will need all his early instruction to resist the spirit of scepticism. Whether his resistance is successful or unsuccessful he will at least not labour under the perilous disability of having had his very childhood vitiated by the negative scepticism of a State which ignores while not denying God.

COLOUR INFLUENCE.

By Faustine.

> "When we sat in the sunlight, Annie,
> I dreamt that the earth was green."
> "Then the rays of the sunset glinted
> Through the blackwood's emerald bow,
> On an emerald sward, rose-tinted,
> And spangled, and gemm'd—and now"—
> Gordon.

Poor Gordon! How he revelled in colour! How, as he grew older, sadder, and more reckless, his most pathetic plaint seemed to be that the "blue and the green" had gone from everything, and only cold, neutral tints stretched away before his tired and longing eyes. How he mourned the "bright hues" and "rich colours" of his hot youth—in vain!

"They have flown," he cries, in bitterness of spirit.

> "They have flown, if e'er they existed—
> It matters not why or how,
> It matters not where or when, dear—
> They have flown, the blue and the green;
> I thought on what might be, then, dear—
> Now I think on what might have been."

Unhappy, wilful, suffering soul! Perchance in that new Jerusalem, with the sheen of its pearly gates, amidst the jewelled radiance of emerald, sapphire, and amethyst—with the sunlight of God's love shining over all—happy at last!

Strangely inherent this love of colour in human nature the world over. To-day, now, is a grey day. The earth, the sea, lie lifeless under a leaden sky, and we gaze hopelessly around in search of some gleam of light, some bright spot on which the eye may rest pleasantly. In vain. Worse still, our mind seems to have taken the hue of its surroundings, and refuses to evolve for our consolation any of those bright visions of hope or pleasure, those changeful fancies and happy illusions that cheer our more favoured hours. Grey, dull, unmistakeably grey everywhere. Yes, it is strange when we look back how inextricably the happiest events of our existence seem to be interwoven with blue skies, green trees, and the varied tints and perfumes of flowers; days on which, perhaps, some dear friend departed and left us sorrowing—days on which grief, disappointment or failure touched us with its withering hand. There are no rainbow hues of memory around these; only a mournful veil of sombre, grey silence. But on that memorable day, say when we left school for good, and felt that life, with its pleasures, was opening for us—that we stood on the threshold of dear, unknown delights, and untold mysteries of romance and enchantment. How the earth laughed, and donned her gayest dress, in sympathy with our glad youth. And again, the fair morning, or rose-tinted evening, when our ears drank in the first whispered vows of love we had ever heard—why it is set in very gems of colour in our recollection. It was not so in reality, perhaps. It is just possible that on that identical occasion we caught a bad cold through undue exposure to the wind that whistled through the trees, or the rain that pattered from the eaves; but these small penalties of such supreme delights we remember not. We call to mind only the new joy that our life was learning to hold, and imagination furnishes the atmosphere for the sweet experience, its very pleasantest, naturally. Happiness refuses to drape itself in sombre tints. Our own poet-laureate, like the rest of us, shared poor Gordon's love for the "blue and the green." "It seems that I am happy," he sings when love smiles upon him,—"that to me

> A livelier emerald twinkles in the grass
> A purer sapphire melts into the sea."

And good old Addison, nearly two centuries ago, thus gives vent in his old-fashioned, dignified style to his admiration for colour, "We are everywhere entertained with pleasing shows and apparitions; we discover imaginary glories in the heavens and in the earth, and see some of this visionary beauty poured out upon the whole creation; but what a rough, unsightly sketch of nature should we be entertained with did all her colouring disappear, and the several distinctions of light and shade vanish? In short, our souls are at present delightfully lost and bewildered in a pleasing delusion, and we walk about like the enchanted hero of a romance, who sees beautiful castles, woods, and meadows, and at the same time hears the warbling of birds and the purling of streams; but upon the finishing of some secret spell the fantastic scene breaks up, and the disconsolate knight finds himself on a barren heath or in a solitary desert."

How significant are some colours! White for instance—(for with its numberless shades from the transparent-looking bluish to the creamy yellowish tinge of it, it is permissable to call white a colour). The white robes of the communion, the bridal, or the altar seem almost inseparable from these offices. We are so deeply rooted in custom, indeed, in this respect, that I fancy we have almost begun to believe that white attire, under ecclesiastical patronage, possesses a special charm for the preservation of purity and innocence. And yet the Holy grail, renowned in song and poem as the mystical realisation of all purity, is supposed to have been so named because its contents were red—red as blood. For "grail," as we know, is simply a corruption of "sangreal," and the sangreal, according to a modern and most scholarly American writer, was believed in the middle ages to be a cup of the greatest sanctity used by Christ at the Last Supper, and thenceforth containing his own blood. He considers the etymology of the name to be simply a combination of the French "sang" (blood), and "réel" (real)—the real blood of Christ. Be that as it may, whatever its associations, red to me, is a splendid colour—rich, warm, generous, life-giving. Blue and green—yes; they are absolute necessities; but red is the very luxury of colouring, shining against their colder setting like a jewel. The red coat of the soldier, we say, suggests rather life-taking than giving. True; but blood spilled in a sacred cause gives new life to many, and the war-note, sounded for liberty or right, is neither a mean, nor an unworthy one. It makes men; it makes heroes; and heaven knows we need them as sadly now as ever in the old days of chivalry. "Peace sitting under her olive," is no doubt a pleasant object for contemplation, when individual rights are respected and honour dear. But, there comes a season in every nation's history—let us hope that it will be long in coming to ours—when this is not so; when peace is purchased at the price of its dignity and manhood, when a taste for luxury has generated selfishness and self-indulgence, when peace itself "sits slurring the days gone by," and

> "The poor are hovell'd and hustled together each sex, like swine,
> When only the ledger lives, and when only not all men lie;
> Peace in her vineyard—yes!—but a company forges the wine."

"God protect us from the horrors of war," we may well cry, even while adding "still more from a dishonourable peace." But apart from the contemplation of the "crimson tide" of battle; apart from the saddening, yet inspiring, thoughts of ancient martyrs, who shed the precious crimson drops of their heart's blood for the sake of what they believed to be true, red has many fair and bright associations. The soft scarlet flush upon the cheeks and lips of youth, the rich damask in the heart of the rose, the flood of rosy light pouring through the stained window of some stately cathedral, all suggest the fair and lovely side of this often dull existence. And the red fluttering out to the breeze in that good old British flag above our heads bears to us across the centuries many memories of good and noble deeds done in its name. If its colours have ever been for a moment dimmed, if here and there a spot has smirched it, it is held at least to-day in every civilised country on the globe in honour and renown.

When Jove wooed Danaë under the form of a shower of gold, he but paved the way for those men and women of less mythical and more modern origin who hold the yellow treasure earth looks away so carefully in her deep and secret hiding-places as far fairer than any blue and green she may deck her surface with. Ah! those golden-yellow gleams that cost poor King Midas such a world of worry have much to answer for! What heartburnings, what falseness, what envy, hatred, and all uncharitableness, have not the struggle for a share of the droppings of Jove's golden shower engendered! The yellow rays of sunlight pouring down their bounteous warmth on the cold earth are not more eagerly watched for. And yet yellow—yes, altogether, yellow is a fine and pleasing colour. If it impress us less with the idea of warmth than the more sensuous red, it gives a greater sense of light and freshness. It reminds us of the early primroses of spring, of the soft, flaxen curls that cluster round baby faces, of the birth-time of the day when "Morn, in the white wake of the morning-star, comes furrowing all the Orient into gold." It reminds us of long summer afternoons when, from the shadow of some sheltering rock, we felt the fresh breeze blow across the water, and watched the shadows creep gently down the long stretch of shining, yellow sand, to lose themselves in the blue of the sea, fast changing into grey. And it reminds us, perhaps, of some lovely, dark girl-face loved long ago, blossoming out against those yellow draperies, that we used to say harmonised with the warm brown of the eyes and hair so well.

Purple has few associations somehow, at least, comparatively. It is a regal colour, but cold. We feel, as we approach it, that we are drawing nearer to the region of darker tints altogether. The great Cæsar, folding his purple mantle round his kingly form, hardly gives a touch of brightness to the thought of it, when we muse upon his tragic end, and those cruel rents and stains, that in the end disfigured it. No; we admire purple, but we cannot love it. It is cold and stately, and gives us a sense of aloofness that we can never altogether overcome. But when we gaze upon the face of Nature, we know full well that only in the most artificial and restricted sense do we depreciate its charm. Looking on the purple heather of the moors—the purple of the distant hills—the delicate purple of the shadows of approaching night, we feel that words are indeed poor to do justice to the rainbow-glories of the Universe.

I recollect, when a little child, being taken to church on a day when it was mourning for a well-loved minister, who had died in the week suddenly. It was draped everywhere in heavy folds of black, and when I entered, the organ was giving forth the solemn, muffled strains of the "Dead March in Saul." The air of mystery and sadness, the weeping eyes, the unfamiliar form in the pulpit, the child's horror of that nameless, incomprehensible evil they called death—all filled me with a chill sense of dread and terror that I have never forgotten; the black folds of crape round the pulpit held me spell-bound. I remember I have always hated black crape since. Indeed, for years after I disliked black in any shape or form; such is the unconscious influence of colour, sometimes, on a child's mind especially. And yet the years come in which we are thankful for the "sable mantle of night" to fold down upon the busy day, when the quiet greys and neutral tints are a relief to our tired eyes after the light and glare of the dusty highways of life. Brilliant colouring is youth's prerogative, and bravely it shines out against the soberer background that age affords for it. The years, if they steal little else from us, steal colour; and complainings, even complainings as musical as poor Gordon's, are useless. And we Australians can ill spare any colour, either from our lives or our landscapes. Just here, on the shores of our world-renowned harbour, truly the "blue and the green" never fail us; but farther inland, as the late Marcus Clarke beautifully writes, "The Australian mountain forests are funereal, secret, stern. Their solitude is desolation; they seem to stifle in their black gorges a story of sullen despair. No tender sentiment is nourished in their shade. In other lands the dying year is mourned, the falling leaves drop lightly on his bier. In the Australian forests no leaves fall. The savage winds shout among the rock clefts. From the melancholy gums strips of white bark hang and rustle. The very animal life of these frowning hills is either grotesque or ghostly. Great grey kangaroos hop noiselessly over the coarse grass. Flights of white cockatoos stream out, shrieking like evil souls. . . . All is fear-inspiring and gloomy."

"The black and the grey." Ah well, we could not do without them after all, even as frames to earth's brightness. The black and the grey days give zest to the golden ones, as the sunlight shines out gladder and freer after the thunder shower, and the "weeping that endures for a night" is lost in the joy that morning brings. How often too, has night itself, brought healing in its wings, for weary, suffering hearts, that have been forced to smile all day, and now are free to seek the blessed relief of solitude and, maybe, tears! How softly it carries sleep to tired eyes, and rest to weary limbs! So gently and refreshingly its black curtain falls around us, that often, gazing out from among its folds to the spangled sky above, and drinking in its cool and fragrant breath, we feel peace and hope stealing into our hearts, and say that of all fair seasons night is the fairest. Even the grey, cold, winter days bring us hope—hope for coming sunshine—and without anything to hope for we should be indeed unhappy. And so all hues are blended, dark and bright, by that supreme artist Nature, into the curiously-woven fabric of our daily life.

GERMANY AND ZANZIBAR.

The Foreign Office has issued further correspondence respecting Germany and Zanzibar, the title of the white paper being "Africa No. 1, 1889." The correspondence extends to 97 pages, and includes 162 despatches, ranging from November, 1888, to June, 1889. Lord Salisbury, in a despatch to Sir E. Malet, of the 7th of December, 1888, states that on that day the German Ambassador had discussed with him the question of the admission of arms and munitions of war for the use of the British and German East African Companies, and they "eventually agreed that each company should state to its own Consul-General what amount of arms and ammunition it required for a specified time, and should give an undertaking that they were entirely for the use of the company and not for trade in the interior. If the Consul-General should decide that the demand is reasonable and genuine, we would furnish a permit, and will indicate a ship, presumably a ship of war, by which the arms shall be conveyed to their destination." The date of this interview and agreement was that of the telegram from Colonel Euan Smith at Zanzibar announcing that Bagamoyo had been occupied in force by the Arab ringleader, Bushiri. The concluding despatch, dated Zanzibar, the 24th of June last, is from Acting-Consul General Portal, and it gives a summary of events on the coasts of the mainland within the German Concession. Mr. Portal states that there has been the most friendly intercommunication between him and Captain Wissmann, who has shown anxiety to respect the interests and protect the property of missionaries and of British Indian subjects. In the beginning of June it was known that the power of Bushiri had been broken by the successful German attack of the 8th of May. Bushiri's Arab followers were leaving him, and he was wandering from village to village, eluding all attempts of the German forces to capture him; but not succeeding in his endeavours to induce the tribes to take up arms. Relieved of opposition in the neighbourhood of Bagamoyo, the German authorities turned their attention to Saadani, where the English lay missionary, Mr. Brooks, and 15 of his followers were murdered in January. There was no hope of peaceful submission, and on the 7th of June the town was bombarded from the ships and a force of over 1000 men was landed—Zulus, Europeans, blacks, and German sailors and marines. The town was set on fire, presumably by a shell, and the Arabs fled from their entrenchments and retreated into the interior. Captain Wissmann then endeavoured to make peace with the people of Pangani, but the immediate withdrawal of the German forces from Saadani was misinterpreted as a sign of weakness, and encouraged a party who were in favour of active opposition to the Germans, and so increased the difficulty of coming to an arrangement. All remnants of opposition had disappeared from the neighbourhood of Bagamoyo, and Captain Wissmann had invited British Indian traders to resume their ordinary peaceful avocations under his protection. They flocked to meet a caravan of ivory which arrived at the ruins of Saadani; other caravans were arriving at Pangani; and as the question of Pangani was disposed of, everything pointed to a revival of trade. For the two or three months following June Captain Wissmann would be employed in pacifying and developing trade in the northern part of the district; and then he would turn his attention to the south, intending to inflict on Kilwa severe punishment for the murder of two Germans there in the autumn of last year.

HOT WEATHER.

To counteract the enervating, relaxing, and evil effects of the heat and depressing nature of the climate in this country during the summer months, no remedy has ever appeared before the public to equal or even that would bear comparison with

CLEMENTS' TONIC.

It prevents fever, malaria and ague, keeps up the appetite, assists digestion and assimilation, stimulates the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels; thus preventing liver and kidney disease, and warding off their unpleasant symptoms, as headache, constipation, piles, gout, rheumatism, dropsy, apoplexy, &c.

The summer is the time when

is the medicine par excellence for the people. It prevents the relaxation and depression so prevalent in the hot weather in these latitudes; it enriches the blood, aids perspiration, and restores all lost nerve-power; is the only reliable anti-febrifuge and pick-me-up prepared in the colonies, and can be depended upon to do good and cure disease.

The action of

is certain, sure, and prompt; Relief is felt immediately after taking the first dose; it acts direct on the seat of disease and cures the cause, and then the effects of that cause cease. Most other remedies offered are prepared with a view of treating the symptoms, consequently as soon as the effect of the medicine passes away the trouble returns, and the patient wants another bottle of medicine. This may be very good for the maker of the remedy (?) but it is no at all satisfactory to the patient.

CLEMENTS' TONIC

positively, effectually, and permanently cures; it does not only relieve, like most of the narcotic mixtures sold, but radically effects a cure; and if the patient only avoids the course from which he or she contracted the illness in the first place, a relapse is impossible.

Moreover,

does not constringe the gastric vessels of the stomach or cause indigestion, and will not injure nor discolour the teeth.

We shall be glad to enter into particulars with any correspondents who like to address us at Newtown, Sydney, personally or by post.

THOMAS GARRETT, Esq., M.P.
(late Minister for Lands), suffered from
WEAKNESS! INDIGESTION!
and
POOR APPETITE!
he procured
CLEMENTS' TONIC,
and gracefully acknowledges the benefit he derived.

"Sydney, October 19, 1889.

"Dear Sir,—I have used Clements' Tonic with very great advantage. It is very stimulating, and a powerful aid to appetite and digestion.—Yours truly,

"THOS. GARRETT."

If you are a sufferer follow Mr. Garrett's lead, take CLEMENTS' TONIC and you will derive the same benefit.

JOHN PLUMMER, ESQ.,

"That Mrs. Plummer has frequently derived great benefit from the use of CLEMENTS' TONIC, and as a result of her experience, has much pleasure in strongly recommending it."

"THOUGHT HIS CASE BEYOND THE POWER OF MEDICINE."

"Kangaroo Valley, N. S. W., April 8, '89.

"Dear Sir,—I have very much pleasure in bearing witness to the great value of CLEMENTS' TONIC in cases of LASSITUDE, NERVOUSNESS AND CONSTITUTIONAL DEBILITY GENERALLY. For more than 12 months I was a martyr to extreme lassitude, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, and their concomitant train of physical troubles, so much so that I feared I should have to abandon my profession as a journalist, writing being particularly irksome and laborious to me. I tried several advertised tonics (!) with little or no good result, and began to think my case beyond the power of medicine to cure. However, seeing your TONIC advertised in some of my Exchanges, I concluded to try it as a 'dernier resort;' and I am pleased to say the result was most satisfactory. After taking one bottle I found my appetite much improved; I could sleep more soundly, and felt refreshed next morning. I continued the medicine, taking in all six large bottles, and gradually all my distressing symptoms disappeared. I now feel myself stronger than ever, and as near perfect health as a man who has to bear the strain of constant literary work can expect to be. I can confidently recommend CLEMENTS' TONIC to all persons suffering from loss of nerve force through sickness or mental overwork, and am most happy to support my testimony with my signature.—And remain, dear Sir, Yours faithfully,

"F. JEFFERSON WALLACE,
"Editor and Proprietor 'Kangaroo Valley Pioneer.'"

MORE EDITORIAL TESTIMONY.

"Gazette Office, Windsor, N. S. W.,
"July 22nd, 1889.

"Sir,—For some time I have been testing the efficacy of CLEMENTS' TONIC, and have proved this preparation to be one of the most valuable ever placed before the public. I have for some time been suffering from the effects of overwork, and noting that CLEMENTS' TONIC was very highly spoken of in many of my exchanges, I decided to give it a trial, with the result that I speedily became re-invigorated, secured a return of my usual activity, and was relieved of the lassitude and nervousness which had afflicted me for some considerable time. I can really recommend CLEMENTS' TONIC, more particularly to brother journalists, whose professional duties, if not altogether arduous, are at least continuous, and demand a deal of their time and attention. Newspaper work carries with it a deal of responsibility and care, and a stimulating brain tonic is actually necessary; but the question is—what is best? Out of all I have tried, I must decide that CLEMENTS' TONIC has been the most invigorating, and to journalists and all of sedentary habits it must prove a great acquisition, and a boon of the most valuable character.

"I am, yours truly,
"J. CHAS. FITZPATRICK,
"Proprietor, Gazette, Windsor."

GAVE HIM NEW HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

"75, King-street, Sydney, March 19, 1889.

"Dear Sir,—Kindly send me two more bottles of CLEMENTS' TONIC, and permit me to express my thanks and gratitude at the results obtained by taking two large bottles. I had had a great amount of business worry to contend against, which, together with the long hours I had stuck to it, completely undermined my constitution, and made me feel very tired, weak and ill, my nerves being quite shattered. I was so nervous that the accidental slamming of a door would cause me to start violently, my heart would beat very rapidly, and I would break out in a profuse perspiration, afterwards having a sensation of extreme weakness, lasting for some hours; my sleep at night was disturbed; I awoke in the morning with headache and aching limbs, and quite unrefreshed. I had no appetite, no strength, and no inclination to work, and was completely run out. I was persuaded by your advertisement to try CLEMENTS' TONIC, and am a different man ever since; it gave me new health and strength, increased my appetite, and made me relish my food; I increased in flesh, I lost all nervous feeling, and now feel stronger than ever, and I am glad to bear testimony to the value of your wonderful remedy."

"Yours, &c.,
"W. D. BRAHAM."

When influential men like these allow their names to appear in endorsement of a medicine, it proves beyond all question, the bona fides of that preparation. If you are still sceptical, you can write to all or any and they will answer you. No other medicine can show such proof, although there are scores of counterfeits on the market; it rests with the public to guard itself against impostors. Only meritorious articles are imitated and pirated, that is why so many substitutes for CLEMENTS' TONIC are on sale. Such imitation is the greatest proof of the reliability of CLEMENTS' TONIC.

ART, MUSIC, AND THE DRAMA.

"Report me and my cause aright."
—HAMLET.

From the dramatic portion of this article I transport the discussion regarding window-pictures, lithographs, and hoardings to the art area. "Triumvir" was be-rated by some gentlemen this week for stating that the theatrical pictorial advertisements are done badly here. They triumphantly point to some pictures that have been prepared for "Sophia" and "My Partner," &c., as examples. It is easy to understand why these protesting and earnest champions should be hurt at criticism, and should seek to defend native talent, but they should not be fatuous. There may be good workmen here—we shall go so far as to say that there are, because work of promise has been produced; but what is achieved generally is not sufficient to warrant anything like satisfaction.

"There are hills beyond Pentland
And streams beyond Forth."

Speaking broadly, coloured printing and lithography is done very indifferently here, in spite of the statement of our critic that there are artists "competent and ready to produce any description of theatrical printing that theatrical managers may order." Ready, yes, and competent, perhaps; but surely these gentlemen, if they be artists, are not satisfied with what has been done. If so, then we must doubt their competency. Let it be told to "the marines" that the pictorial advertisements done here compare with English and American printing; but those who really understand know better. The colouring in one-half the instances is bad, the drawing we leave alone. Theatrical pictures for windows and hoardings require different treatment from any other kind of lithography, drawing, and artistic representation. The work is an art that must be studied, like scene-painting, and there are not many good scenic artists, as managers also can testify. That there are attempts to produce good lithography and theatrical pictures we admit freely, but the work is only begun here. If there is any doubt about that, let anyone who has had experience in drama or art consider even the local printing that is now upon the walls.

One wonders often why in this country people furnish their homes after an English manner instead of that of the south of France, of Spain, of Algeria, or the Southern States of America. Heavy curtains, thick carpets, papered walls, plush furniture, dark and deep colours, are the rule. It is not often that one sees a drawing-room in Australia furnished in a Southern manner. Sometimes Brough and Boucicault have presented one upon the stage, and Mr. George Rignold has once or twice presented an airy and not too-heavily draped and padded an apartment; but how many rooms may be found in Sydney where in the summer one finds Indian matting instead of carpets, cane furniture instead of repp and velvet and all that, liberty silks and light and fleecy hangings instead of weighty curtains? We furnish our houses as we dress, ponderously, and as if for all time, instead of for "sojourners as all our fathers were." It would be possible to reduce the effects of the heat of summer by one-half if we lived according to what is natural, and not what Northern tastes transplanted demand of us. It is such things as these that prevent the development of a distinctive character to this country.

In Queensland alone of all the colonies they have adopted something of what the climate and the country suggest, that is, few cloths, rugs, and carpets, but plenty of beautiful matting and polished wood, and broad verandahs and wooden blinds. I have a room in my mind which has matting for carpets, matting for dado, huge fans, Japanese panels, light silks for draping and decoration, and cane furniture in tasteful designs, with stained glass in the windows, admitting the abolition of curtains, and the effect is not only striking but cool and refreshing. I have another home in Queensland in my mind, something Moorish in structure, and with what might be called a grand corridor in the centre, which in the summer can be thrown open at both ends, the rooms all round being cool—and it is worth living in, you may be sure. There is a residence, also, in Sydney with a cool corridor, half conservatory, half arbour, between the drawing-room and dining-room, with tiled floor, and in summer and winter it is a place of comfort and airiness and colour. We build huge blocks of houses, and miss comfort. Less money often would produce comfort, and that which is far more artistic and sensible. Arcades, colonnades, courts, verandahs, built as parts of the houses, a good union of Queen Anne architecture with what might be called Gothic, and also Moorish, with plenty of wood decoration, and little of tapestry cloth, &c., would tend to give us character in keeping with our environment and pleasure as well.

The idea of securing for Sydney a permanent orchestra analogous to the institution of the "National Orchestra" in Melbourne has already been advocated in this column. Perhaps some people have been taking the matter into consideration, but if so, they seem to have been acting on the principle of "Festina lente." Up to the present there has been no grand rush of the wealthy art-patrons to support so desirable a movement, but only an initial effort very much resembling what the up-country showman facetiously speaks of as "a rush of one." Unfortunately, almost coincident with the praiseworthy offer of Signor Riccardi which appeared on Monday last, came the advertisement announcing that to-day's orchestral concert is to be the finale of the present series. Alas! how are the mighty fallen! Since the publication of the advertisement referred to I have heard, on all sides, that our metropolitan city of Sydney must henceforth be considered as "eternally disgraced," and "shamefully behindhand," etc., etc., etc., because of the financial non-success of the orchestral concerts. But, however much their failure be regretted, let us hesitate to brand our city as hopeless until some united action has been attempted. Thus far the orchestral concerts have been a private enterprise. As such they have only appealed to the populace privately and personally. Let a public meeting now be called, and let the voice of the people be heard. Melbourne spent many months before the decision was made upon, and the funds provided for the institution of her National Orchestra. Is it not possible that Sydney may yet accomplish something worthy, in the same direction, if only time be allowed, and if public action be rightly directed?

During this week it has been announced that the Metropolitan Liedertafel Society has held its annual meeting, and has again elected its musical conductor. In all kindness it may be pointed out that the practice of annual election of a conductor is a most pernicious one, and that, for the good of the society the rule which necessitates it should be abolished. In no other society with whose working I am familiar is a similar course pursued, and it is hardly possible to see that it is of the least advantage since there are plenty of constitutional ways of getting rid of a conductor if desired, supposing he should prove in any way obnoxious. On the other hand, its disadvantages are manifold. If a conductor, on his appointment, be empowered to look upon himself as henceforth permanently associated with his society, he is far more likely, for the sake of his own reputation, to work for its future and permanent success than if he be only engaged for the term of half-a-dozen concerts. Annual election must, therefore, tend to discourage him from interesting himself about the future. Then, again, annual elections must have a tendency to encourage disaffection amongst members, for it must tempt every one who experiences any discontent—personal or otherwise—to bestir himself to excite opposition at the next annual meeting, and, perhaps, to nominate some musician with whom, in his opinion, there would be less likelihood of friction in the future. The Metropolitan Liedertafel Society may, therefore, be counselled to abrogate its rule about the annual election of its conductor, for its abolition can entail no loss, while it may result in considerable gain.

"The Waterman," which is to be heard at Her Majesty's Theatre, during this month, with Mr. Charles Santley as Tom Tug, calls forth a host of interesting memories. Its author was Charles Dibdin, 1745-1814, the most famous member of a famous family. Born near Southampton Water, he came to London in his boyhood and there wrote hundreds of songs, mostly of the sea, and all redolent of royalty. His "Poor Tom Bowling" and "The Bay of Biscay, O," are some of his best-known songs. The latter belongs to his "ballad opera," "The Waterman," produced in 1774. This piece is really a play with songs interspersed. "Farewell, my trim-built wherry," and "Have you not heard of a jolly young waterman?" also belong to it. Dibdin also wrote "Lionel and Clarissa," "The Quaker," and other pieces, in addition to innumerable songs and musical entertainments. As an actor, he excelled, his Mungo in "The Padlock," and Ralph in "The Maid of the Mill," being his most noted impersonations. His sailors, it has been aptly said, are too much addicted, when storms rage and billows roll, to sling the flowing bowl. From his description, landsmen might fancy that Jack's life consisted of thinking of Nancy afloat, hugging her ashore, drinking to her health unceasingly, and taking a turn of duty with a hornpipe sort of air, as if the galleries were clapping him enthusiastically. His work, however, was always honest, and his sea songs will last as long as there is salt water. Pitt encouraged him to write, and George III. granted him a pension, of which he was deprived by a succeeding Ministry. He died in poverty in Arlington-street, Camden Town, and was buried in Pratt-street, hard by. There has been a lively discussion of late in consequence of a threat to convert the old burial ground into a pleasure-garden, and so obliterate all trace of Dibdin's grave.

The first Tom Tug was Charles Bannister 1738-1804; the second, Benjamin Charles Incledon, 1764-1826; the third, John Braham, 1774-1856. Braham's father was a Portuguese Jew, his stage appellation being an abbreviation of Abraham. Sir Walter Scott said of him,—"He is a beast of an actor, though an angel of a singer." Braham's voice was a tenor of the purest quality, of extraordinary power, and of singular sweetness. It was enlarged in compass by the falsetto, and its whole range of really good and useful notes extended from A in the base to E in alto, a scale of twenty notes. This use of the falsetto, indeed, seems to have been very remarkable. When in the zenith of his powers, from a facility of taking up the falsetto on two or three notes of his compass at pleasure, he had so completely assimilated the natural and the falsetto at their junction that the hearer was unable to detect where the falsetto commenced. "No man understood better," it has been said of Braham, "or more thoroughly appreciated in others, purity of style; yet no man oftener violated the canons of good taste." Mrs. Trench thought his rendering of the "lamentation" in "Jephthah" one of the finest pieces of tragic singing of her time. It is worthy of note that Dibdin, Bannister, Incledon, and Braham, all lived to a ripe age. The former was 69 years old at the time of his death, Bannister was 66, Incledon 62, and Braham 82 years old. The appearance of Mr. Santley in Australia in a character associated with these famous men, will be of unusual interest.

The good work at present being done for the local stage by Messrs. Robert Brough and Dion Boucicault, jun., is deserving of more than passing attention. This week they have given us "Kerry" and "Our Boys," a bill of great excellence; for six nights, commencing this evening, "The Squire," one of the best of Mr. A. W. Pinero's plays, will be presented; and on next Saturday, "Diplomacy," the English version of Sardou's "Dora," will be staged. All these pieces, it should be borne in mind, are standard works of sterling merit, so that herein Messrs. Brough and Boucicault give examples of the foremost efforts of three distinct styles of authors. The late Mr. Byron wielded a pen entirely his own; Mr. Pinero, in quite a different way, is at the head of his profession; while Sardou is an acknowledged master of stage-craft; his "Dora" is a celebrated play, and the English version of it won fame and vast financial prosperity for the Bancrofts. Nor is this all. Messrs. Brough and Boucicault do not content themselves with bringing out well-known pieces and trading on their titles or their London reputation, but they take care to mount each piece, not only lavishly, but carefully, with the strictest attention to detail; and, so far as the acting is concerned, they invariably give a good all-round performance, while not infrequently there is in the representation one or other impersonation of special merit. They have a capital comedy company, and the play-goer may always rely, on visiting their theatre, in witnessing a tried and valuable play, always appropriately, sometimes magnificently, mounted, and generally acted admirably.

TRIUMVIR.

THE CENTENNIAL AT 6.

By VAURIEN.

The Centennial Park is meant, and the hour 6 a.m. Lest it might be supposed that I advocate the getting up at such an indecent hour, it might be as well to say at the very start that people who make a noise in the world seldom get up before noon. Of all the myths that have come down the ages, causing desolation and heartburning in their descent, this fable concerning the benefits of early rising is the most insinuating and dangerous. The savage that started it in the remote past was no friend to mankind. Then the poets took it up with their customary disregard of the most obvious facts, until one—more malignant than his fellows—crystallised it into the vulgar couplet—

"Early to bed and early to rise,
Makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise."

There never was a greater mistake. People that see the sun rise every morning nearly all die young—most of them in benevolent asylums. Again, look at the poets themselves. Nice people they, to preach rising betimes! A few of them, no doubt, might have seen the matutinal twilight once in a way; but it was only when they were up all night. Take our two greatest—Shakespeare and Milton. One wouldn't see it, and the other couldn't. For all the "Swan" has said about the lark, and regarding Morning's habit of standing tiptoe on the mountain-tops, there is sufficient evidence to shew that his knowledge of either morning or the lark was secondhand information. It was necessary to enter into this slight explanation, lest strangers at a distance and persons who do not know me might imagine that I was one of those busybodies who are so doubtful about the sun's rising that they must see for themselves.

The Centennial Park is that large plot of ground just behind the Paddington butts, and extending from the Waverley-road away towards Randwick. Early last year it was dedicated to the people of New South Wales "for ever;" and it must be confessed that the people of this favoured land have come in for a piece of property that would make the mouth of an Irish landlord water to build a 20ft. wall round, with broken glass on top, and placards every few yards warning trespassers that, even if they climbed over, they were bound to run against the man-traps and spring-guns inside. This is but another way of saying that the Park is charmingly situated, and possesses a surface pleasantly undulating. In a few years, when the trees have grown and the coarse herbage has been replaced by a more attractive turf, the Centennial will become one of Sydney's show-places. Although the hour is early, the stone-cutters are already chipping away at the blocks intended for the boundary. Strange pursuit that of knocking pieces off a stone with a hammer and a chisel! Surely the time cannot be far distant when quarries will be discovered with stones ready cut. It is absurd to suppose that nature, which has done so much for Australia in the way of mineral deposits of all kinds, would neglect this obvious requirement. When she was laying the foundations of the globe in the remote past, it was just as easy for her to size and trim the materials as to throw them together in unsightly boulders. Still, it would be as well, perhaps, not to make too sure of finding quarries like the foregoing, so that for the present it might be unwise to discountenance stone-cutting. This same nature is a capricious mistress, and never lets one into the whole of her secrets. But she is generous, withal, and spreads her wares profusely before you as if inviting examination. It is when you put the question, "Yes, madam, beautiful, all beautiful, but—how were they made?" that she wraps herself in silence as in a garment.

But how comes it that the masons are out so early? It is not the wont of Australian workmen to begin the day so young. It was only a few weeks ago that a contractor, anxious to push on his work, demanded an hour's earlier attendance daily. He will probably hesitate before again trying this method of putting a job through rapidly. For the hodmen deposited their hods in a row, the bricklayers stuck their trowels in the mortar and left them there, while the carpenters contented themselves with sawing the air. After a little pleasant jocularity and an exhibition of wholesome humour, all put on their coats, lit their pipes and started for a day's rational enjoyment. So the contractor sat on the lower rung of one of the ladders, and said he was glad he came to Australia, because employers had it all their own way. What, then, means all this industry at the Centennial, while the sun is but a few degrees above the horizon, and the western-pointing shadows extend far? For an hour or more other mechanics may be observed passing through the gates or waiting for trams. There is surely nothing so attractive in knocking a corner off a rock as to induce men to get up an hour or more earlier than their fellows in order to accomplish it? Before some Sydney people would arise at such an hour for such a purpose, stones would remain untouched and hammers idle till the centrifugal force gave out and our planet, like a wandering child, fell once more upon the bosom of its parent. I would have asked for information; but it is not wise to disturb the industrious with questions, especially when you are idling. It is far better to sit over against them about the distance of a bow-shot and speculate. There was one square-set, serious-looking handicraftsman whom at first I thought of approaching for enlightenment. But the emphasis with which he brought down his hammer, and the spirit he threw into his work, suggested that if interrupted too abruptly he might miss the chisel and hit something else.

Away to the south the haze disturbs the vista, but every now and then from out the gloom emerge dim gigantic shapes, which assume their proper proportions as they approach and destroy the illusions that hung round them while they were shadowy and indistinct. One is a bread-cart, and the next a man on a bicycle. The person apparently in charge of the waggon appears to be in no hurry to deliver his messages. I seldom see a vehicle of this kind without thinking of hungry Jae Atlee as he took the first bite out of a stale loaf and observed with pardonable irritation: "They say bread's the staff of life. I really b'lieve it is—for this is devilish like a walking-stick." But the man on the bicycle seems determined to reach his destination with despatch. Down the far slope he comes at a gallant pace that appears capable of carrying him without effort over the long succeeding rise. Yet, with bicycles, as with life, it is ever so much easier to go downhill than to ascend. He is but half up the incline, and already the struggle has begun to tell. The machine is not one of those with an immense forewheel and a wee hind one. It rather resembles the "bone-shaker" of 20 years ago. Articles of this class with small wheels almost equal in diameter seem to be coming into fashion again. They are constructed, of course, on far superior principles to the early ones, the rider's feet, indeed, coming so near the ground that, but for the look of the thing, he might as well walk. Indeed, as the equestrian of a couple of days ago wobbled up the Centennial hill, he was no inapt representation of the Irish gentleman that went to George the Third's levée in a sedan chair without a bottom. No doubt one of the great advantages of machines of this class—particularly to stout men with large families—is that an accident is not like a fall off a house, as in the case of the large wheelers. The latter should be ridden by feather-weights only. The wood pavement of our streets is upon its trial, and is none too durable. But if heavy men, under a mistaken notion of reducing themselves, take to using high bicycles, no thoroughfare will be long safe. For the little wheels when obstructed in any way have a knack of lifting the rider into the welkin. The worst of it is that in the vast majority of such cases the jockey sticks to his steed instead of letting go and trusting to luck. The inevitable result follows. He takes it up with him, and it naturally comes on top. It is almost unnecessary to point out that no pavement, not even an old Roman road, would long stand a succession of such misadventures to persons of generous developments.

It is by no means improbable that when this splendid recreation ground is enclosed and regulations framed for its preservation, there will be found among the latter a clause prohibiting smoking. The wide world over, in no other country where tobacco is used at all, would a cigar be tabooed in such a spacious area as that of the Sydney Botanic Gardens. The more one tries to get at the rationale of the prohibition the more mysterious it appears. Be sure, the same will be tried with the Centennial if smokers do not hold out for their rights and rise in their might. Look at the Yankees when they pitched the tea into Boston harbour, and by so doing inaugurated the liberation of a continent. Let the Sydney authories take warning in time. Desperate men try desperate remedies when the ultimate straw is placed upon their backs. Should the outrage to which allusion is made be really perpetrated, there is certainly a sufficient number of devoted men in the New South Wales capital to line the outside of the Centennial and smoke through the railings.

It is just 6.30 and—sure enough, there is a sound that carries one back to eighteen-hundred-and-ever-so-long-ago. There is no mistaking that note—there is but one bird in the world could produce it, and there the tiny thing is circling and singing above my head. The incomparable skylark has been sung in every tongue from the creation, but in none so incomparably as in ours. Mr. Shelley's ode is not by me; but if you can show anything to compare with—

"That from heaven or near it,
Pourest thy full heart
In profuse strains of unpremeditated art," produce it. At any rate, it is hard to choose between them—the skylark's song and the Englishman's. But what is the meaning of the red flag that has just been hoisted on the hill yonder, and of the fusillade of musketry that follows its elevation? To be sure, there is a great rifle match in progress, and as the hill is low, a stray bullet might happen to come this way. Even a skylark's ditty may be bought too dear. Besides, next to being run over by an empty hearse driven by a kanaka, there is probably no more humiliating death than being shot on one side of a hill by a man on the other.

A few years ago a Royal Commission on Railways was appointed in Canada. This commission, after taking a considerable amount of testimony, has presented its conclusions in a report which has been recently issued. Some of the facts and conclusions are interesting. It appears that railway construction and operation began in Canada in 1837, when 16 miles were open for traffic. The total mileage in Canada at present is over 13,000 miles, and the tonnage of freight carried last year was 17,173,700 tons. According to the commission's figures, the cost of railway building is about the same in Canada as in the United States, the cost being lower in those two countries than in any other. The cost is greatest in Great Britain, and next highest in France. In accommodation proportionate to population, the commission reports, Canada came next to the United States in 1884, and is now in advance of it—there being a mile of railway to every 470 or 480 inhabitants. In average charge for freight, Canada's showing is said to be 93c. per ton, as compared with 1dol. 4c. in the United States, 1dol. 50c. in Holland, 1dol. 70c. in Germany, 2dol. in England, and 2dol. 14c. in France. The lowness of the rate in Canada is ascribed to competition by water, and to competition by American lines at all points accessible by Canada's navigable waters. The commission devotes some space to the importance of maintaining and developing the foreign traffic passing through Canada. Among other things considered by the commission is the practical working of the principle of controlling railway corporations by State-appointed commissions. The conclusions of the commission on this head are favourable to the system.

CADBURY'S COCOA is absolutely pure. The public analysts, have submitted Cadbury's cocoa to close tests, and the result has always proved its great value as a sustaining and nourishing beverage. Cadbury's cocoa is wholesome, nutritious, and a universal favourite from the cottage to the palace.—[ADVT.]

PAPERS ON COMMON SUBJECTS.

V.—CLOTHES.

Dress, dress, dress! How it mingles with our life from morning till night, from the birth hour to the death, occupying our thoughts, devouring our substance, and, falsely or truly, affecting our position in the eyes of others and our own. It is in vain to say that raiment is vanity and vexation; however much it may be despised, it has had to be attended to since the days of Paradise, for "man's earthly interests are all involved and buttoned together and held up by clothes." Where is the father with a quiverful of daughters who does not feel how this necessity for apparel, narrows his means and leaves but little margin for saving. Ah, the lands he might have acquired, the Mount Morgans gone into, but for bonnets, boots, and tailors! And what leisure for art and culture might wives and maidens enjoy were it not for these inevitable winter costumes and summer cottons which must be made up in the newest fashion if the family are "to be like other people." Why it is necessary always to be like those "other people," many of whom are not at all desirable models to copy, is a social problem not easy to solve, but the bravest of us do not like to wear a coalscuttle at a fête when flowery toques are the rage, or, if a man appear in a suit whose outline shows the cut of other days.

"Would the p'liceman put us in prison if we didn't do the fashion?" asked a child. "Something very like it—in social exile" might have been the answer in frivolous Sydney, where outside show is so much more thought of than inner excellence. "Be stupid, be wicked if you will," says society, "but dare not to be dowdy!" so each aspirant makes her little effort, and plasters her body with moiré, feathers her head with plumes, or grows a flower garden above her frizzled curls. As to how far that p'liceman, the world, is justified in its dictum that it is better not to be at all, than not to be à la mode, is a question capable of very diverse answers. If the fiat "Be her beauty her sole duty" is binding on woman, she is certainly right in adorning herself, though it is by no means evident that fashion is always conducive to beauty. There is no doubt that a damsel arrayed in a dainty adaptation of "the last sweet thing" is more likely to be a joy to the eye than an ill-dressed female; and an assemblage where vanities and costumes are despised, is apt to be a ghastly spectacle—almost it makes one wish for less soul and more dressmaker! Happily æstheticism has taught even authors that mind should express itself harmoniously in the bodily vesture, and the era of frowsy blue-stockings is passing into oblivion.

Carlyle has devoted a volume to the philosophy of clothes, embracing their symbolical rather than practical aspects. To him all forms and names are the garments of ideas, and as such their scope is unlimited. Speaking of them in a narrower sense, "Clothes," says Teufelsdröckh "give us individuality, distinctions, social polity—clothes have made men of us, they are threatening to make clothes-screens of us." After an amusing chapter on "Adamitism," he continues:—

"Strange enough, it strikes me, is this same fact of men being Tailors and Tailored. The Horse Tribe has his own fell—a perennial rain-proof court-suit upon his body. . . . While I—good Heaven—have patched myself over with the dead fleeces of sheep, the bark of vegetables, the entrails of worms, the hides of oxen or of furred beasts, and walk abroad a moving rag-screen, over-hampered with shreds and tatters raked from the charnel-house of Nature. Day after day I must thatch myself anew; day after day this despicable thatch must lose some film of its thickness and be brushed into the ashpit, and I, the dust-making Rag-grinder, get new material to grind down. . . . . Perhaps not once in a life-time does it occur to your ordinary biped, be he gold-mantled prince or russet-jerkined peasant, that his vestments and his self are not one and indivisible; that he is naked without vestments till he buy or steal such, and by forethought sew and button them. . . . . For my own part, these considerations of our clothes-thatch, and how, reaching inwards even to our heart of hearts, it tailorises and demoralises us, fill me with a certain horror at myself and mankind."

Yes, they are a clumsy, humiliating contrivance, these garments, a never-ending worry, especially when boys must be suited and school-girls clad in tear-resisting fabrics. What finger-pricked mother does not envy the cats and cockatoos whose progeny are provided by nature with white coverings which require no making, washing, nor mending. But whatever the evils, there is one advantage, which even the philosopher considers final.

"Are we opossums? Have we natural pouches like the kangaroo? Or how, without clothes, could we possess the master organ—soul's seat and true pineal gland of the body social—I mean a purse?"

According to Carlyle the original object of clothing has been that of ornamentation, but in a common-sense paper another aspect of the subject must be considered, the relation to health. From this point of view the necessaries for a king or carman are alike, "for dissect them with scalpels, the same viscera, tissues, livers, lights, and other life tackle are there; examine their spiritual mechanism, the same great need, great greed, and little faculty."

Of course in the opinion of doctors everything is as it ought not to be with regard to the covering of the human body, and had some their way they would order all feminine patients—carefully excepting their own daughters—to appear as seen at a gymnasium in dual garments, with uncorsetted wide waists, and square-toed shoes; but as yet vanity and custom are too much for sanitary science, and though clothes do not only "tailorise and demoralise" us, but squeeze our organs all awry, even compressing the hearts of fashionable dames. A due compromise between hygiene and hideousness on one side, and elegance on the other, is the utmost that can be hoped for in these contradictious days.

Perhaps there could scarcely be a greater contrast than Mrs. Haweis's book on dress considered from an æsthetic point of view, and the treatise on the influence of dress upon health, by Frederic Treves. Yet on many points the two agree, and both are illustrated with the usual picture of Venus di Medici side by side with a taper-waisted lady. In the opinion of Mrs. Haweis, artistic harmony, as an outward sign of inward and spiritual beauty, is of the first importance; while the surgeon opines that the primary purposes of clothing are to afford a general protection to the body, and maintain it everywhere at a proper and equable temperature. This result depends upon the texture, quantity, and colour of the materials employed. It is a matter of the very commonest observation that certain garments are warm, while others are described as being cool. It is, perhaps, needless to say that articles of clothing possess neither warmth nor coldness in themselves. What is meant by a warm garment is one that is capable of retaining the natural heat of the body; while the cool garment, so called, allows that heat to escape, and brings the surface of the body more immediately under the influence of the cooler atmosphere that surrounds it. The average temperature of the external surface of the body is 98·6 Fahr. This temperature is subjected to certain but slight variations. Active exercise raises the temperature, but not more than 1, or at the most 2 degrees Fahr. The sensation of heat after exercise may be great; but it is only a sensation. In like manner, the animal temperature in summer is never more than from 1·5° to 1·8° Fahr. above that in winter. This temperature must be regulated, for the body would become unduly heated if means were not afforded for a constant loss of a certain amount of animal warmth, and this is effected mainly through the influence of the skin. It is lost in three ways. Heat is conducted away from the surface of the body; it radiates also from that surface, and a great deal is dissipated by evaporation.

It is now necessary to consider how clothes contribute to warmth. In the first place, those materials that are bad conductors of heat will the best maintain the body at an equable temperature. In cold weather their non-conducting properties do not permit the natural heat to escape in any but the tardiest manner; and, on the other hand, in a very hot atmosphere, they are slow to conduct to the skin the caloric which is without. Taking the ordinary materials used in dress, it will be found that as bad conductors of heat woollen textures rank first, and with them furs and downs. Then come silk and cotton, while lastly, as the best conductor, comes flax, the material of which linen is made. Many experiments have been conducted from time to time to estimate the comparative conducting powers of these various materials, and not among the least interesting are those recorded in the "Philosophical Transactions." As a result of these researches it may be said that if the conducting power of linen be represented by 100, then the conducting power of wool would be from 50 to 70. Thus, speaking solely of this matter of conduction, wool has twice the "warmth" as an article of clothing that linen possesses. Between calico and linen there is not so great a difference, which was proved by the following experiment: Observations were made as to the comparative time of cooling of certain materials that had been heated to a given point. It was found that the time of cooling of linen was represented by 10¼ minutes, that of calico was 11¼ minutes.

The influence of colour upon the warmth of clothing is a subject of considerable interest. Colour makes very little difference with regard to heat radiated from the body. The colour of underclothing, considered solely from the standpoint of warmth, is a matter practically of no moment. It makes no difference if the garment worn next the skin is red or blue or black, so long as it is a material that will, as a bad heat conductor, maintain for the body a proper temperature. With regard, however, to warmth that acts upon the body from without, colour involves a considerable difference. As a chief example of this the heat from the sun may be taken. Experiments made upon this point show that the same material will absorb very different amounts of heat when dyed with different colours. The greatest amount is absorbed by black and dark blue, and the least amount by white. The following table records the proportion absorbed in a given time by "shirting" of the same quality, dyed with the various colours mentioned:—White received 100° Fahr.; dark yellow, 140°; light green, 155°; Turkey red, 165°; dark green, 168°; light blue, 198°. An interesting demonstration of the different powers of absorbing heat is afforded by the following experiment:—Put a fragment of the common willow-pattern plate into a bright fire, and allow it to become heated to redness. Then remove it with tongs, and hold it up in a dark room, when the pattern will glow white upon a dark ground. This simply demonstrates that the dark colour of the pattern first absorbs and then gives off more heat than the white ground. A more direct and personal illustration of these facts, however, is afforded by common experience. The laws of the influence of colour upon heat underlie the selection of white and brightly tinted materials for summer wear, and the use of the more sombre tones for the cold days of winter. The brilliant colours of the tropics, and the less vivid tints that pervade the cooler zones, bear without doubt upon this same inter-action between colour and heat.

Another point to be noted in connection with the warmth of clothing is its effect upon the evaporation from the skin. It has been already stated that the body is cooled, among other ways, by the constant steaming of moisture from its surface. It is obvious, therefore, that any material used for dress that interferes with this evaporation must be considered as possessing qualities of warmth. Certain fabrics absorb the moisture from the skin with rapidity, and allow it to evaporate from the surface. Such textures would tend to expedite the natural cooling of the body, and would be termed "cool" materials. Impermeable cloths, such as macintoshes, on the other hand, will not allow of the escape of perspiration; they keep the air that is in immediate contact with the skin saturated with moisture, evaporation becomes more and more difficult, and if a garment impermeable to moisture be long worn it will cause a profuse sweating of the skin and produce an unhealthy form of heat.

As the contrary to this, the hydroscopic properties of clothing materials are of much importance. By the long word hydroscopy is meant the power of certain substances to absorb moisture. The advantages of materials that thus accept moisture readily are these:—When an individual perspires freely the garment promptly takes up the watery matter, and diffuses it through its meshes. The water so absorbed undergoes, of course, evaporation, but the cooling effect of this process is removed from the skin where it might prove harmful, to the dress material where it is comparatively harmless. A texture that has feeble hydroscopic properties, when worn next to a perspiring skin, simply gets wetted; it does not remove the moisture from contact with the flesh by taking it into its substance, and proves a source for chilling the body. Investigations showed that the maximum hydroscopic properties of wool (flannel) were represented by 174, and the minimum by 111; while with linen the maximum was represented by 75, the minimum by 41. The practical outcome of these facts teaches us that an individual who is perspiring freely is much less likely to catch cold when clad in wool than when dressed in linen, especially when exposed to changes of temperature. The porosity or power of admitting ventilating air is another advantage of flannel, though silk also possesses some of the same properties, with the advantage of being less irritating to the skin. According to one authority, a night-dress should be of linen or cotton. Such a material is advisable, inasmuch as it gives rest to a skin that may have been unduly stimulated by woollen undergarments during the day. It is, moreover, worn under conditions that favour inactivity of the functions of the skin, and is therefore little concerned in the process of evaporation; also, while in bed, the necessary warmth is supplied by bed-clothes, and the use of woollen fabrics may promote perspiration under circumstances when it is not controlled by ready evaporation. For quite young people, and for the old, where the animal heat is but feebly maintained, woollen night garments may be of advantage.

There are a few general facts mentioned by Mr. Treves which may be interesting:—1. Loose-fitting clothing is—other things being equal—warmer than tight-fitting. A woollen shirt made loose would be much warmer than a like garment constructed to fit the body quite tightly. In the case of the close-fitting garment the material is kept in direct contact with the skin, and is therefore able the more readily to conduct away the heat of the body, while in the loose-fitting there is a stratum of warm air between the integument and the article of dress, which has an important influence on the bodily heat. 2. A material loosely woven is warmer than the same closely woven. This depends upon the fact that air is a bad conductor of heat, and the open material, by confining air within its meshes, adds substantially to its warming properties. 3. Clothing worn in successive layers is warmer than the same amount of material in a single layer. 4. The neck should not be too much wrapped up, as pressure may lead to compression of the veins that are bringing the blood to and from the brain, and also weaken the organs of vocalisation and deglutition, or affect the glands and tonsils. Moreover, a scanty amount of covering around the neck allows of an opportunity for ventilating the surface of the trunk, and permits all movements to be unimpeded. For this reason the sanitary value of sailor-dress for boys cannot be over-estimated. 5. The weight of clothing should be borne by the shoulders and all constriction avoided. 6. The hat should be light and well ventilated, as the scalp is dense, and being more liberally supplied with blood than any other part of the skin, the temperature is well maintained, and it is rendered to some extent independent of warm covering. 7. Boots should be made to follow the shape of the foot when it rests on the ground with its parts spread out, and not be of pointed shape "as if the human foot had a great toe in the middle and a little toe at each side, like the foot of a goose." The sole should not be rigid, as flexibility is necessary to allow play for the 26 bones and innumerable ligaments, and the heel should be as large as the natural heel, and not placed abnormally forward. Shoes are conducive to health, as they allow the perspiration caused by the exercise of the pedal muscles to escape.

Woman's dress, though it is really almost as rational as that of any bell-toppered beau, comes in for many strictures from the pens of all medical writers. It is, however, certain that many evils of the past have been corrected. Fashionable damsels have not quite made up their minds to allow their waists to attain the Venus proportions of 26in., nor, like her, to wear their hair in a "bob" at the back. But, as hygienic reform has ordained that loose smocks shall be worn until girls are grown up, no damage is done to the figure in early years, and when the soft bones have once set, tight-lacing becomes almost an impossibility. It is no longer à la mode to wear the pointed shoes with high heels, which are now being sold cheap, with a view of enabling maid-servants to cripple themselves and break their mistresses crockery. Hats are all lightness and ventilation, and sleeves are not so tight as to prevent the hand being raised to the head. Some reforms are still needed, and the arrangement of petticoats, which involves an agglomeration of bands and pleats round the centre of the trunk, is a decided mistake. This unequal distribution of heat over the surface of the body is an offence against definite physiological laws, and cannot prove other than injurious. A lady asserts that it is possible for a woman clad in winter attire to have her waist encircled by 14 layers of material. This somewhat alarming announcement is explained by the statement that the garments attached about the waist are usually sewn to a double band in each instance. This multitude of layers above and about the hips tends to keep the region unduly warm, and to lead to congestion of the pelvic viscera, and no doubt many diseases may owe their origin to this ever-dragging coil round the waist. To obviate this and other disadvantages, Lady Haberton has tried to set the fashion of wearing garments whose duality is not offensively apparent, and a generally wholesome arrangement of vestments. But, alas, vain woman will not adopt what is good for her, unless it pleases the eye of beauty-loving man!

On the whole, however, we are much "emancipated" with regard to custom and costume. Delicacy is no longer considered interesting, nor slimness essential; and before long it will need only dual garments to make young men and maidens undistinguishable. Hats, coats, shirts, and cravats are rapidly being appropriated by the girls, and brothers surely cannot object to so great a compliment to their mode of attire. Whether this imitation of masculine habilaments has a deep significance remains to be seen. Teufelsdröckh avers—"As Montesquieu wrote a 'Spirit of Laws,' so could I write a 'Spirit of Clothes.' . . . For neither in tailoring nor in legislating does man proceed by mere accident, but the hand is ever guided on by mysterious operations of the mind. In all his Modes and habilatory endeavours, an Architectural Idea will be found lurking; his Body and the Cloth are the site and materials whereon and whereby his beautiful edifice of a Person is to be built . . . . every snip of the scissors has been regulated and prescribed by ever-active influences, which doubtless to Intelligences of a superior order are neither invisible or illegible."

What is the architectural idea which lurks under our present modes? Does it mean a rejecting of the axiom that the sexes are "not like to like, but like in difference;" and is this idea evincing itself in raiment? Eh bien! It may have an innings for a time, like many other things which "have their day, and cease to be," but in the end sweetness and light, woman's true atmosphere, will prevail, and show itself forth in tasteful apparel not too fashionable, artistic, nor hygienic, but a simple expression of feminine beauty. There have been Demons of Dress in every age may we in this enlightened era see the white wings of a true Spirit of Clothes!

ARDEA.

RIVER STEAMBOAT WHISTLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—On behalf of the great majority of residents on the Lane Cove River, allow me to protest against Mr. Jeanneret's uncalled for interference with arrangements intended for our comfort and convenience. The Marine Board have passed a regulation intended to suppress the steam-whistle nuisance in Darling Harbour, but it is being made an instrument for purposes never intended by the board. For instance, all the heavy goods which the passenger steamers refuse to carry, are conveyed up the Lane Cove River by a special cargo boat once a day, from Lime-street. When the articles are placed on the wharf to which they are addressed, the steamer gives three short whistles, not lasting more than a second each, as a signal for the consignees to come and fetch their goods. Were this not done, the consignees would have to await, perhaps for a couple of hours, the arrival of the steamer at the wharf, the time being always uncertain, by reason of the varying destinations of the goods on board the vessel. There have been no complaints from anyone save Mr. Jeanneret, who does not reside on the river; but there has been a general outburst of indignation at his attempted interference with what is practically no concern of his. If the system of which he complains was in any way objectionable to us, we could suppress it without any assistance on his part, or invoking the aid of the Marine Board. I am, &c.,

November 1. JOHN PLUMMER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your correspondent, Mr. C. E. Jeanneret, considers that I lose my case in admitting that a regulation can, when applied to one part of the harbour, prove salutary, and, when to another, unnecessary, a view that needs more support than that given, and more consideration of circumstances.

It is a broad, but at the same time unthinking, argument, that what is good for one place, is good for another; but, surely no man of reason can maintain that a regulation really directed against the "Syren" and other shrill whistles, which a short time ago undoubtedly were a nuisance on the chief line of traffic of vessels to Sydney wharfs, and at the wharfs themselves, should be dragged away to do duty on the quiet waters of the Lane Cove River, where the three or four small boats running have comparatively inoffensive whistles, which are used with discretion. As it is neither the population nor the wharfs that do the whistling, Mr. Jeanneret's comparisons under this head are as harmless as they are irrelevant to the matter at issue. I shall feel grateful if your correspondent will fulfil his promise to furnish me with the names of those he "champions," in return for which I believe I can promise that at an early date he shall receive convincing proofs that his action is distasteful to the majority of residents, and in addition is regarded as savouring of the proverbial mischief found for hands not temporarily overburdened with business. Thanking you for space accorded, thus closing the correspondence on my part,

I am, &c.,

November 1. HENRY CHAPMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. C. E. Jeanneret's remarks upon the steam whistle nuisance are hardly apropos, for, as a steamboat proprietor of many years' standing, he must have authorised more whistling than any other resident of the quiet little suburb of Hunter's Hill, where he has resided so long, and for so many years patiently submitted to this alleged nuisance.

I venture to assert that in our quiet little suburb, where we have no "clock" nor public means of knowing the exact time, that the timely warning of a short and not discordant whistle, is a great convenience to those who do not carry even a Waterbury, and have no other means of knowing the correct time. I feel I am not far out in asserting that there are hundreds on Hunter's Hill who set their clocks and regulate their movements by the "first whistle." I am, &c.,

S. E. SQUIRE.

The Builder says:—"The Cathedral of Worms is to be restored. The question has been locally discussed for the last three years, and, although experts who were consulted agreed that there was serious mischief going on which was endangering the structure, they differed as to the cause. Thereupon the Dean, Mr. Fehr, took the matter in hand by causing a number of faulty places to be uncovered, and then published the result and his opinion in a pamphlet. His arguments appearing unanswerable, the building committee have determined to go to work at once, and have called in Professor Freiherr von Schmidt, of Munich, the architect of the recently restored Church of St. Catherine, in the neighbouring little town of Oppenheim, also on the Rhine. Professor von Schmidt has been requested to submit by May 15 next a complete set of plans of the cathedral in its present state, along with another set showing his suggestions for the completion of the structure, together with the estimates of cost. Most of our readers need not be reminded that the building is one of the most interesting cathedrals on the Rhine. It is mostly in the Romanesque style of the 12th century, the dimensions being 423ft. by 87ft., by a height of 105ft. in the nave; it has four towers, two domes, and a double choir, and abounds with rich carving. It is to be hoped that any work done on the existing portions will be confined to necessary repairs, or Worms will cease to be 'a Romanesque cathedral.'"

COLLEGE FOR WOMEN WITHIN THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY.

The following has been sent us for publication:—
"Among the measures passed by Parliament during the recent session is 'An Act to Establish and Endow a College for Women within the University of Sydney.' The establishment of such a college is needed to give full effect to the principle affirmed in the University Extension Act of 1884, by which it was enacted that 'The benefits and advantages of the University and the provisions of the Acts relating thereto shall be deemed to extend in all respects to women equally with men.' Women had been already admitted to the University, by order of the Senate, in 1881; and since that time they have in increasing numbers availed themselves of the opportunity of a university education thus offered; and have shown themselves fully capable of profiting by it. Many have already proceeded to a degree, some of whom have taken honours. But they have hitherto been excluded from the advantage enjoyed by male students in the existence of colleges which supply a place of residence under suitable supervision, and provide supplementary tuition and individual guidance. The movement to establish a College for Women originated in a number of representative and influential gentlemen, including professors and members of the Senate of the University, forming themselves into a committee for that purpose, with the Chancellor as chairman. A public meeting, convened by them, was held in Sydney on the 27th May, 1887 (his Excellency Lord Carrington taking the chair), and was largely attended by those interested in the higher education of women. At this meeting the following resolutions (the second of which was necessitated by the impracticability of establishing separate denominational colleges for women, as has been done in the case of the more numerous male students) were unanimously carried:—1. That this meeting affirms the desirability of establishing a College for Women within the University of Sydney, on the basis of the Colleges Endowment Act of 1854. 2. That the systematic religious instruction required by that Act shall be subject to the following provisions—(a) No religious catechism or formulary which is distinctive of any particular denomination shall be taught, and no attempt shall be made to attach students to any particular denomination. (b) Any student shall be excused from attendance upon religious instruction, or religious observance, on express declaration that she has conscientious objection thereto. 3. That the governing body be composed of twelve members (of whom not less than four shall be women), to be elected in the first instance by the subscribers, and subsequently in such manner as may be determined, together with two members of the Senate of the University to be appointed by the Senate from time to time. 4. That subscriptions be forthwith invited from the public with a view to raising the necessary sum of £5000. 5. That a deputation be appointed to wait on the Government with a view to obtaining the co-operation of the Legislature in the establishment and endowment of a College for Women within the University of Sydney. That the deputation consist of the following gentlemen: Sir W. Manning, Dr. Maclaurin, Hon. E. Barton, Hon. Dr. Garran, Mr. G. H. Reid, Mr. A. B. Weigall, Professors Gurney, M'Callum, and Scott, Mr. J. R. Fairfax, the Revs. Canon Sharp, Principal Kinross, C. J. Prescott, Dr. Jefferis, and H. L. Jackson.

"The deputation nominated by the meeting waited upon the Minister for Public Instruction for the time being, and laid before him the draft of a bill, which bill has now, with certain modifications, been adopted by the Legislature. The Act directs that 'The college shall provide residence and domestic supervision for women students of the University of all religious denominations whatever, together with efficient tutorial assistance in their preparation for the University lectures and examinations;' and that while systematic religious instruction shall, in accordance with the general Affiliated Colleges Act, be imparted to the students, 'no religious catechism or formulary, which is distinctive of any particular denomination, shall be taught, and no attempt shall be made to attach students to any particular denomination; and any student shall be excused from attendance upon religious instruction or religious observances on express declaration that she has conscientious objection thereto.'

"The Act further provides that the college shall become incorporated as soon as subscriptions to the amount of £5000 shall have been in part paid, and in part secured to be paid within three years, towards a building fund, and twelve councillors shall have been elected by the subscribers for the government of the college; and that as soon as the incorporation has taken place, there shall be paid out of the public revenue, in aid of the building fund, a sum not exceeding £5000 in the whole, nor more than shall have been from time to time actually expended by the college out of the subscribed funds for the purpose of building. It further grants the sum of £500 per annum in perpetuity for the salary of the principal of the college.

"The Senate of the University has by anticipation agreed to receive the college into affiliation on the same terms as the existing colleges for male students, in the event of its being legally established and endowed; and also to dedicate to its use a site for necessary buildings and recreation grounds within the University Domain, provided that the college shall have been established by March, 1892. A committee of ladies, of which Lady Carrington is president, was formed shortly after the public meeting, for the purpose of aiding in the collection of the necessary funds, and has already given valuable assistance. Up to the present time the sum of £1000 has been subscribed and secured, and thus all that is now needed to bring the Act into full legal operation, and establish the college, is the subscription of a further amount of £4000. As soon as this sum shall have been in part contributed, and in part secured to be paid within three years, the college will become incorporated, and will come into the command of a building fund of £10,000, a site of land, and a salary of £500 a year for its principal. Practically, however, the full sum of £5000 is required to bring the college into full operation, as an amount equal to the present contributions will be required for furniture and appliances.

"It is beyond question that the college will be of the highest usefulness as a means of forwarding the cause of education. Women attending the University need, even more than men, a suitable place of residence, together with the personal care and superintendence, and the guidance in their studies, which will be supplied by the lady holding the position of principal. Those who will derive the largest benefit from the establishment of the college will be women whose homes are elsewhere than in Sydney; and the provision of a college for them will place a university education within the reach of many who are at present debarred from it. The expenses of residence in the college have not yet been precisely determined: but they will be kept as low as is compatible with the advantages to be secured.

"The benefits of the college will not, however, be restricted to those who become residents in it; for the tuition and guidance supplied will be equally open to women students residing elsewhere in Sydney. And, while the college is intended primarily to supply the needs of university students, the existence of such a centre for the higher education of women will unquestionably have a far-reaching influence for good on the education of girls throughout the colony, and on on the tone of society generally.

"It is hoped that the generosity of patriotic citizens will readily provide the necessary funds. A single donation of £5000 would cover all that is needed to bring the college into operation, including initial expenses. Contributions, or promises of contributions extending over three years, are earnestly invited, and may be sent to Professor Scott, University; to the Rev. H. L. Jackson, St. James's parsonage; to Miss J. F. Russell, Observatory, Sydney; or to the Commercial Banking Company of Sydney.

THE MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In yesterday's issue of your paper you published a list of the successful candidates in the examinations in music arranged by Trinity College, London, and in to-day's issue you call attention to their importance and significance. Now, in the published results of the University public examinations there is attached to the name of the pupil the name of the school from which he has come or the tutor by whom he has been trained. In the list of the Trinity College examinations it is true there is given the name of the lady who trained the two most successful candidates; but all others are either purposely suppressed or are not considered worthy of publication. Whether this is due to the action of Trinity College, or of the local secretary, or of the local committee, it is not for me to say. I take it for granted that you published the list as sent to you. Considering that, of the 51 successful candidates, no fewer than 14 came from the school I represent, I shall probably be pardoned for thinking that the suppression of the names of the schools and tutors is unfair. I have the less hesitation in calling attention to this matter, as in the preparation of the candidates I have had no personal share. I am, &c.,

CHAS. J. PRESCOTT,
President Wesleyan Ladies' College.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OPINIONS.

The following correspondence has been handed to us for publication:—

"31, Wentworth-court, Phillip-street, Sydney, New South Wales, 20th June, 1889.

"To the Hon. Sir Richard E. Webster, Kt., M.P., Attorney-General, &c., &c., London, W.C., England.

"Dear Sir,—I shall be extremely obliged to you if you would direct information to be sent to me as to the English practice in dealing with the opinion of the law officers of the Crown.

"The points upon which I desire information are as follows:—1. Whether the opinions of the law officers of the Crown are or are not treated as confidential communications? 2. Whether a Government is justified in making public, or ever does make public, the opinion given by the law officers of a preceding Government? 3. Whether any department does publish or would be justified in publishing an opinion given by a Crown law officer upon a matter for departmental guidance? 4. Whether the Speaker would allow a member of the House of Commons to move for the production of any opinion given by a law officer? 5. Whether, if such motion were made, there is any instance of its having been acceded to?

"My reason for asking for this information is that a question has arisen in these colonies as to the nature of the opinions of law officers; and although, of course, English practice is not conclusive on the point, still our Parliamentary practice being founded so largely on that of England, an authoritative statement of the English practice will be of great value.

"My own impression is that all opinions must, from their very nature, be strictly confidential; and that if an opinion is wanted for public use the Crown law officer should be informed of the fact before he writes it, in order that it may contain in itself a full statement of the circumstances under which it is given, and may be expressed with those limitations which would be understood by the persons to whom it is particularly directed, but which might escape the notice of the public who are ignorant of its occasion.

"I have also an impression that the Speaker of the House of Commons has more than once, and that recently, refused to allow a motion for the production of the opinion of the Attorney-General to be put in the House; but I cannot lay my hand upon the report of this incident in the Hansard.

"I trust that I am not troubling you excessively in making this request. My excuse must be that there is no other source from which an authority stating the practice as to a matter of general interest to the legal profession can be obtained.

"Yours truly,
"B. R. WISE."

"The Attorney-General's-chambers,
"2, Pump-court, Temple, London, E.C.
"19th September, 1889.

"Dear Sir,—I duly received your letter of the 20th June. I must apologise for the delay in replying thereto, but owing to great pressure of work it was impossible for me to give sufficient attention to the matter at an earlier date.

"There is not, I think, any substantial doubt upon any of the points upon which you ask for information, and I will answer the questions seriatim:—1. Whether the opinions of the law officers of the Crown are or are not treated as confidential communications? The opinions of law officers of the Crown are invariably treated as confidential communications. I will add that if they were not so regarded, both the Government for the time being and future Administrations might be seriously embarrassed. 2. Whether a Government is justified in making public or ever does make public the opinion given by the law officers of a preceding Government? As a general rule I should say that a Government is not justified in making public the opinions given by law officers of a preceding Government. There have no doubt been cases in which the effect of opinions of the law officers has been stated, but as far as I know these statements have been made by some member of the Government to which and at or about the time when the opinions were given. It is not very easy to conceive a case in which a Government would be justified in making public the opinions given to a previous Government upon a matter as to which the previous Government has treated the communications as confidential. 3. Whether any department does publish or would be justified in publishing an opinion given by a Crown law officer upon a matter for departmental guidance? Speaking strictly, I doubt whether a department would publish an opinion given by a Crown law officer as such, though there probably are cases in which such a course might be adopted. The more usual practice is for the department to adopt the purport or effect of the opinion, and to issue directions or instructions as by the department or the head of the department by which the opinion has been taken. 4. Whether the Speaker would allow a member of the House of Commons to move for the production of any opinion given by a law officer of the Crown? 5. Whether, if such motion were made, there is any instance of its having been acceded to? 4 and 5. No definite rule can be said to exist on the point. As far as I know, no precedent can be found for a motion for the production of any opinion given by a law officer of the Crown. I may mention that during last session the Speaker declined to allow a question to be put framed to elicit the fact whether the law office s had given a particular opinion. In my opinion, the refusal of the Minister to produce the opinion would be taken as final.

"I am, faithfully yours,
"RICHARD E. WEBSTER.

"The Hon. B. R. Wise."

MEETINGS.

"OUR RESCUE WORK."

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual public meeting of the mission known as "Our Rescue Work" was held last evening in the Centenary Hall, York-street. The movement comprises the Home of Hope for Friendless and Fallen Women, the Open-all-Night Refuge for Women, and the Discharged Prisoners' Mission. The Hon. E. Vickery, M.L.C., occupied the chair. There were also present on the platform, Mr. G. E. Ardill (director of the work), the Revs. T. B. Tress, A. J. Clarke, A. J. Soper, J. Hill, and S. Wilkinson; and Messrs. Henry Varley, G. Verey, C. E. Wigzell, W. E. Wilson, R. W. Conway, W. U. Carpenter, J.P., J. G. Treseder, and S. F. Blackmore. There was a fairly large attendance of the public.

The meeting having been opened with prayer, the chairman called upon the director of the movement to read the report.

Mr. ARDILL then read the report, from which we extract the following particulars:—Home of Hope: During the year we have received 154 inmates, 42 of whom were handed over to us by the police magistrates at the various city police courts. The total number of meals provided for women during the year in this home was 23,717; and there were provided 7576 beds for women, and 3041 for children with their parents. Ninety of the women were sent to service. Open All-night Refuge: During the year 8038 beds were provided for women, and 2619 to children, while 16,557 meals were supplied; 131 situations secured, and 681 days' work obtained by the inmates. The value of the institution will be evident to the most casual observer. That untold misery has been averted, that terrible crimes and outrages have been prevented by the provision of the open doors of our refuge, we have good reason to believe. Many young women, driven by stress of circumstances to seek the shelter offered, have been led to the entire abandonment of the vicious and sinful course which they had entered upon. The friendly hand of a kindly policeman has often been the conduct of a frail one to our doors. To our police officers we desire to render our thanks for their uniform kindness in connection with our work. Discharged Prisoners' Mission: The extension of this branch of our mission has been referred to already. The opening of the new gaol at Biloela, and the consequent release of a large number of men and women each morning at the Circular Quay, led us to consider the wisdom of increasing our work so as to embrace them. After consulting with the Comptroller-General we were induced to do so. The benefit that has accrued may be seen faintly through the statistics of the Home of Welcome, 3 George-street North, for the past six months: Meals provided, 4369; beds provided for men, 1466. At the Home of Welcome, Belgrave-lane, 250, Forbes-street, we have still pursued our purpose with steady and earnest determination. During the year we have given 12,060 meals, and provided 4077 beds for men; 139 have been supplied with clothing, 99 with employment, and 72 with free passes. To tabulate the success of the work, as viewed either from the standpoint of this world or that to come, were impossible; but we can affirm that many who were notorious criminals have been influenced for good, and are now professing Christians, earning an honest livelihood. The work at the Parramatta Branch Home has been well sustained. Though the numbers discharged are not very large in proportion to the city gaols, yet much good work has been done. Number accepting invitation, 175; meals supplied, 1,240; beds provided, 271; pledges taken, 107. We are pleased to note that the friends at Bathurst have inaugurated a mission to prisoners there, and we do trust that ere long an association for this specific object will be formed in every township where a gaol exists. Contributions and donations in kind: Our income from donations and subscriptions, apart from that contributed in the open-air, has been £970, of which £98 was given by former inmates. The proceeds of the inmates' work in the homes has amounted to £237. It is impossible to state the value of the donations in kind (bread, meat, groceries, clothing, &c.) that has been willingly given. Finance: A serious hindrance to the success of the work is an accumulated indebtedness of £1400, which is owing partly to the director and partly to various of the workers for salary, and also to the landlords for rentals. It is hoped that the amount will be considerably reduced immediately, and as speedily as possible entirely paid off. The director has generously offered to give a subscription, £227 of the amount due to him, and several other promises have already been received. The income necessary to sustain the work in full vigorous operation is £2500 per annum.

Mr. WIGZELL, honorary treasurer, read the balance-sheet, some of the particulars of which were referred to in the report. He laid special stress upon the fact of there being £31 6s. to the credit of the building fund, and said it was hoped that the finances would at some future time warrant the erection of special premises for the work.

Mr. VARLEY said he was very glad to be present to utter a few words to help on the good work in which Mr. Ardill was engaged. In all largely populated cities the increase of wealth and poverty went on side by side. He thought that the more wealth there was the less poverty there ought to be. However, so long as there was a large mass of poverty and distress to deal with it was of the greatest importance that there should be amongst us such a movement as that in which his friend had been engaged for the last seven years; but no matter what people said, it had always been an unpopular course to help the poor. There were, no doubt, many men who valued such works as this, but it was a reflection upon Sydney that this movement had been allowed to go on without the manifest assistance of wealth. No considerable financial help had been given to this work. After quoting from the report, he observed that he was not sure to what extent the number of beds and meals supplied represented individual persons, but the figures showed that there were a large number of poor in Sydney who ought to be helped. There were, certainly, several charitable institutions here, but the results shown in the report demonstrated that there was an opening for outside work. It was astonishing how many persons came to these shores and very soon afterwards found themselves in need of help, wanting to be tided over a temporary difficulty. He had seen it in Melbourne, and in Sydney. It was not because these persons would not work, but because they could not obtain it. The rescue work was one that could not be thought too highly of. When persons came out of gaol they were supposed to be, and generally were, on the highroad to further crime; but, if they were taken notice of and offered a home amid Christian associations, and told that they would be found employment, very good results must follow. He did not suppose that it could be shown that 10 per cent. of ordinary life was a success, so that the needs for aid were many. He warmly commended the registry office branch of the work. He hoped that some of the sympathisers with the movement would either help them substantially, or else use their influence with their more wealthy friends to do so. He trusted that at the end of the next financial year there would be a credit balance instead of a deficiency, and that a still greater record would be able to be shown. He had much pleasure in moving that the report and balance-sheet be adopted.

The resolution was seconded by the Rev. Mr. HILL, and carried unanimously.

A collection was then taken up. The donations and promised gifts amounted to £151 12s. 8d.

The Rev. Mr. TRESS moved,—"That the following gentlemen be elected the committee of management for the ensuing year:—Messrs. G. E. Ardill, W. E. Wilson, H. G. Swyny, J. C. Taylor, S. F. Blackmore, R. W. Conway, Hon. E. Vickery, C. E. Wigzell, U. W. Carpenter, J.P., F. Kemp, George Verey, Revs. A. J. Clarke, J. Hill, M.A., and J. W. Holden." He was sure it was a right and proper course to relieve Mr. Ardill from his great responsibilities. Since the work had been going on, his confidence in the director had increased; but the duties were too heavy for one man. There were those around us in danger and in trouble who needed rescue, and therefore, there was great necessity for the work. The conditions essential to this were that persons should believe in the possibility of rescuing, and in the strength of the Living God, that proper methods should be employed, that suitable places of refuge should be established, and that the careful location of persons in places where there was safety, or at any rate reasonable security from temptation should be attended to.

The Rev. Mr. CLARKE seconded the resolution, and before resuming his seat, presented Mr. Ardill with a well-fitted dressing-case and letter, both on behalf of a few of the former inmates of the Home of Hope, who expressed their sincere thanks for the great kindness they had received while in the institution.

The resolution, on being put to the meeting, was carried unanimously.

The meeting then terminated.

BETHESDA HOME FOR FRIENDLESS WOMEN.

A meeting of the friends and supporters of the institution was held yesterday at the Home, 452, Oxford-street, Paddington. The Rev. Mr. Savage presided. Several ladies and gentlemen were present. A statement of the work of the Home was given by Mr. Nicholas S. Downing, from which it appears that good and valuable work was being wrought, and that whilst the necessity for its operations was clearly established, it had attained very marked efficiency. Several handsome contributions were reported, amongst them being a valuable and timely gift of tea, sugar, and flour from Mr. Kidman. An interesting discussion took place as to the best means of extending the work of the institution; when it was determined to adjourn the meeting for a week, and to invite a number of ladies and other friends to aid in carrying out the plans proposed. The laundry and needlework undertaken are giving most valuable assistance, and the meeting determined to promote such plans as will make this society self-supporting. Mrs. Alfred Allen and the other ladies present undertook to invite the attendance of the ladies of Woollahra, Paddington, and Waverley to the adjourned meeting on the 7th November at 4 p.m., and the ministers present undertook to make it known to their respective congregations.

The monthly meeting of the Animals' Protection Society was held on Wednesday last. There were present, Messrs. B. Cocks (in the chair), W. Beaumont, C. H. Myles, the secretary (J. Sidney) and Inspector G. Webber. Complaints having been received that the horses employed at the works in duplicating the Illawarra line were illtreated, the secretary and inspector reported that they had examined all the horses at work between Waterfall and Sutherland, and, with few exceptions, found them free from wounds and in good condition. Summary of society's work for the month:—Prosecutions, 15; convictions, 11; cases withdrawn, 2; dismissed 1; complaints received and investigated, 5; cautions issued, 42. Analysis of convictions:—Working horses suffering from wounds, 4; working lame and decrepit horses, 6; cruelty to cockatoos, 1.

The New South Wales Zoological Society held a meeting yesterday afternoon, when the following gentlemen were present:—Hon. R. H. D. White (in the chair), Captain Ghest, Mr. Charles Moore, Mr. William Beaumont, Mr. Neil, and the secretary, Mr. W. H. Cathlett. The secretary presented his report, which was received and adopted. The total receipts for the four weeks ended the 31st October were £142 2s. The number of visitors that passed through the stiles during the month numbered 6474, of whom 4074 were adults. In addition to this 3507 school children, accompanied by 87 teachers, visited the Zoo during the month. On October 8 the society received four very pretty grey squirrels from America. On October 25 the Parliament of this colony voted the very liberal sum of £3000 to the society, which was paid into the City Bank by the Colonial Treasurer. This sum had enabled the society to pay off its heavy overdraft at the bank, and the balance was just sufficient to cover all outstanding debts (except the aquarium fund) for the current year. The most noteworthy donations received during the month were:—Four tench (two of which are very fine indeed) from Mr. E. B. Woodhouse, of Mount Gilead, and a penguin from Captain James Skimmin, of the schooner Bessie Maud. The society had also purchased an American eagle. All the gentlemen present were unanimous in their opinions with regard to a Government subsidy, stating that unless the society received an annual subsidy from the Government it could not carry on. Mr. Chas. Moore moved, and Mr. Neill seconded,—"That a deputation, consisting of Mr. White, Captain Ghest, Mr. Brore, and the secretary, wait upon the Colonial Secretary and submit to him a statement in writing of the probable income and expenditure of the society, and point out that unless an annual subsidy of £3000 be granted to it, such as was done in Victoria to the extent of £3800, and in South Australia to £2000, it would be impossible for the society to exist." The whole of the gentlemen present said that the Government should regard the society as an educational agency, and should certainly assist them. They believed that if a sum could be placed on the Estimates for such a purpose it would be carried, as a large majority of the representatives of the people were in favour of it. It was also decided that in future the superintendent of the gardens should report all deaths of any of the animals, no matter how small they were.

BOARD OF TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

A special meeting of the Board of Technical Education was held on Wednesday afternoon at the offices, 301, Pitt-street. The following members were present:—Mr. Norman Selfe, M.I.C.E. (acting-president), Mr. James Barnet, Mr. Jacob Garrard, M.L.A., Mr. Alexander Kethel, Mr. J. N. Oxley, and the secretary (Mr. Edward Dowling). A communication was also received from Dr. Belgrave, expressing his willingness to co-operate with the Minister in the new scheme. Amongst the correspondence submitted was a communication from the Under-Secretary of Public Instruction acknowledging receipt of letter intimating that the members of the board have no objection to offer to the date selected by the Minister for bringing the new arrangements into effect, and stating that he is directed by Mr. Carruthers to request (1) "that you will be so good as to move the Board of Technical Education to cause the necessary intimations to be given that no change will be made in regard to existing classes, examinations, teaching, &c., until the 1st January next at the earliest, and (2) that the board will oblige him by nominating three or five of their members willing to assist him until the whole proposed scheme is thoroughly introduced." It was resolved to inform the instructors and teachers accordingly; also (2) that, inasmuch as the board is ignorant of the powers or duties of the proposed advisory body, it regrets that it is unable to nominate any of its members to serve thereon, moreover, the board does not find itself able to make recommendations affecting its members individually. Another letter from the Under-Secretary of Public Instruction intimated—with respect to certain land recently pegged out in allotments at Broken Hill, and which formed the best site for a technical school at that place—that steps had been taken to have the land reserved and set apart for purposes of technical education. The acting president reported the steps which had been taken by him since last meeting towards securing the proposed site for the Sydney Technical College. The following resolution was passed:—"That prior to the conduct of technical education being transferred to the direct control of the Minister of Public Instruction under new arrangements approved by the Cabinet, the Board desires to place on record its appreciation of the valuable services rendered by the instructors and teachers of the Sydney Technical College and branch suburban and country schools in successfully conducting the classes placed under their immediate supervision. (2.) That the Board also desires to express its high appreciation of the services of the officers employed on the administrative staff, and trusts that the Minister will retain them in their present positions." The calendar of the Technical College for 1890, with the alterations recommended by the committee of instructors, was ordered to be forwarded to the Minister of Public Instruction, with an intimation that the curriculum for next year has not been settled by the board owing to the impending change of management. The secretaries of the Parramatta Fruitgrowers' Union and the Wagga Wagga Agricultural and Horticultural Union were ordered to be informed—with regard to their respective applications for science lectures and technical classes—that the Department of Public Instruction has now these matters in hand. The action which had to be taken by the acting-president in urgent business was confirmed. Returns were received of lessons given and lectures delivered in the Technical College and branch schools, also a return showing that 240 persons attended recent lecture by Mr. David Silver, in the Temperance Hall, on "The use of the slide-rule." It was resolved,—"That arrangements be made for the examination of any students who desire to sit for freehand drawing, third year." Other business of a routine character was transacted, and the meeting terminated.

HONOUR LISTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you permit me to suggest for consideration the desirableness of the re-arrangement of the honour lists of the University senior and junior examinations with a view to the fuller recognition of all round work.

At present "general proficiency" honours are limited to one male and one female. For pre-eminence in special subjects there are some ten or a dozen medals, any one of which places the winner in the honour list. I have no wish to see the medals abolished. But I think it would be well in future examinations to give some mark of recognition, not necessarily expensive, such as a special certificate or a book, to a few of the most generally proficient pupils, together with a place in the honour list.

In these days, when the work of life is so much divided, I know there is something to be said in favour of a special training, which may be stimulated by medals in particular subjects, but I think most people will agree with me that the conditions of the country favour a more general training, such as is implied in the passing in the maximum number of subjects. At present it is quite possible for an inferior boy, or a clever boy with little work, to obtain a medal with the accompanying honours at these examinations, while many others, who make a much more creditable all-round pass, receive no recognition beyond that of the general certificate. Two B's, perhaps low B's, and an A, which entitles the pupil to a medal, can hardly be thought as creditable a pass as say seven B's, much less four, five, or six A's and a B; yet under the present arrangement the one may appear in the honour list, while the other may not. I have no doubt many cases could be cited in proof of this. Within my own observation, in the girl's division, Ashford College passed four pupils, two with five A's and two B's, indicating roughly at all events that they passed near the top. Two other names connected with other schools appear to have passed equally high. Now while it would have been quite possible for any pupil to have passed low in two subjects, and high in a third, gaining a medal and "honours," no one will say that such a pass was comparable to any one of the other four, whose merit is not recognised, nor credit given to the schools in which the pupils were instructed. The bestowal of "honours" on this restricted basis is calculated to encourage special, and to discourage general, education. Scholars and schools may be tempted from the broader to the narrower method of training by this defect in the honour list.

It is to be remembered, moreover, that the junior examinations are now a big thing, embracing hundreds of pupils. General proficiency prizes, limited to two winners, one a boy and the other a girl, are becoming increasingly difficult of attainment. An honour list that was suitable for 100 competitors seems hardly adequate when the number has reached over 1000. Dr. Badham's infant has become a giant, and some expansion of the old "honour" conditions would not be inappropriate. I am told that in somewhat analagous examinations at Cambridge "general proficiency" passes get a good show in the honour list. I am aware that our University authorities have frequently displayed liberality by adding to the prize-lists for the most proficient. Without much extra expense, however, they might arrange some simple scheme of "honours," which would no doubt be valued by those whom they are at present compelled to pass unnoticed.

I am, &c., PROGRESS.

AMUSEMENTS.

RETURN TO LONDON OF THE GAIETY COMPANY.

The members of the Gaiety Theatre Company made their re-appearance in London on Saturday, September 21st, in "Ruy Blas and the Blasé Roué," a new burlesque by A. C. Torr and Herbert F. Clark. The new piece, which is described as not possessing the "faintest glimmer of reason, parody, point, or coherency," though it "pleases the Gaiety boys just as though the play were as amusing as the actors and actresses identified with it," was not a hundredth part of the attraction felt in the return of the popular players to their old home. The scene was notable in every sense, as may be judged from the following account printed in the Daily Telegraph:—"The 'home-coming' of the Gaiety wanderers, who have been half round the world since they last faced the London footlights and their beloved 'boys,' led to one of the most remarkable scenes that have been witnessed in a London theatre for many a long year. The mot d'ordre had gone forth that it was to be a night of welcomes, and from an early hour in the evening enthusiasm reigned supreme. They hung 'out their banners from the outward walls' of the gallery; they sang convivial strains and roared in unison in the pit; whilst in the stalls the more excited of the Gaiety patrons yelled their welcomes in fox-hunting fashion, and carried on an audible conversation with their favourites across the orchestra. On each side this tribute of mutual regard and demonstration of a well-tried and well earned popularity was clearly prearranged and premeditated. On the stage, Miss Marion Hood sang the pathetic strains of 'Home, Sweet Home,' with tears welling to her eyes; the dialogue allotted to the evergreen and marvellous Miss Nellie Farren was carefully provided with sentimental allusions to the welcome long expected and come at last; whilst at points of advantage in various corners of the theatre were posted fuglemen, who roused their comrades to fresh enthusiasm when vigour flagged, and gave the time for the cheering that seemed as if it would never cease. The first to receive the shout of acclamation was Miss Sylvia Grey, who, tripping down the steps of a Spanish palace, was arrested in her course by a roar of applause that literally made her stagger for a second or so. It came thundering down with such a clap that the graceful young lady seemed positively startled by its suddenness and force. Then came the turn of Miss Marion Hood, who looked sadly delicate and overworn by her long journeys; but who was in splendid voice, and declaimed the old English ballad of home with genuine force and dramatic emotion. But it was a long time before Miss Hood was allowed to sing a note. Again and again she came to the footlights and kissed her hands, this way and that, each action being rewarded with a fresh torrent of applause, and, luckily for her, she had sensibly concealed a small bottle of smelling-salts in the bouquet of violets that she carried, or the fragile form might have broken down under this strain upon her nervous system. But the height of the enthusiasm, the culminating point of this attack of goodwill by combined forces of friends and admirers, were reserved for Miss Farren, who bounded upon the stage as the boy lover, Ruy Blas, in a complete Spanish suit of black velvet, apparently younger, fresher, brighter than she was when she opened this same Gaiety Theatre, now over 20 years ago. Australia and America combined have evidently done no harm to our English Déjazet, and hard work only seems to increase her amazing vitality. What wonder that 'the boys' should pay her special homage, waving their hats and handkerchiefs, inscribing banners to her honour, hailing her familiarly as 'Nell,' and compelling her to bow and smile, and smile and bow again? What wonder that in her should be recognised the phenomenon who has in her career led a dozen or more Gaiety companies to success, has been the head and front of the best of the honest and harmless fun that has delighted youth this score of merry years, and who remains to defy old Time, and to be accepted now as then as one of the most remarkable artists of this or any other period of English dramatic art? When Mr. Fred Leslie, attired in picturesque rags, looking wonderfully well, with just a suggestion of the old 'Rip' in his smiling face, the audience was fairly tired of cheering. So they took to singing instead, and the bright and newly-decorated house echoed with the strains of 'For he's a jolly good fellow,' sung in capital unison, and ending with the traditional English cheer, three times three, and one little one over." An equally cordial welcome was bestowed on Miss Letty Lind, who has as many admirers in London as the other artists of the Gaiety Company. It was natural that such an inordinate display of enthusiasm as that described could not be sustained throughout the evening. "The long-expected evening wore itself out. Excitement and anticipation were exchanged for the reaction of weariness, which neither the china-blue house, the electric light, nor the beautiful costumes designed by Mr. Percy Anderson could wholly dispel. The first descent of the curtain suggested renewed shouts from the 'boys,' baskets of choice flowers for the favourites, and a cheery, sensible speech from the popular manager, Mr. George Edwardes. But this was not enough. They were determined to hear Mr. Leslie and equally bent upon seeing the popular Miss Farren once more. 'Come, give us a word, Nell,' was echoed with approving shouts; and the popular little lady, who can chaff and laugh with the best of them, when the curtain was up murmured a few words of heartfelt thanks, and then, spent by the excitement and exertion, fairly broke down, and disappeared to conceal her very natural emotion."

THEATRE ROYAL.

Miss Jennie Lee, in her clever, vivacious impersonation of the hero of "Jack-in-the-Box," has, during the week, infused even more spirit into the part than she exhibited on the first night. Her portraiture is exceedingly bright and lively, and eminently pleasing. The company supporting her is of unusual strength. Mr. Herbert Flemming gives a vivid realisation of the revengeful Italian, Taroni; and Mr. J. H. Clynds, Mr. George Walton, and others contribute considerably to the success of the piece. The earnest, impassioned, consistent, and natural acting of Mr. H. Diver in a comparatively small part, is also of great value to the play. "Jack-in-the-Box" will be acted for another week. It will be succeeded, on Saturday next, by "The Grasshopper."

HER MAJESTY'S.

"Held by the Enemy," with its stirring scenes and sensational situations, also enters upon its last week to-night. Mr. Gillette's drama has been much appreciated during the week, but it gives way on Saturday next to Mr. Dion Boucicault's drama, "The Flying Scud," in which some artists just arrived from England will make their first appearance in Australia. After the run of the latter piece is over Mr. Charles Santley is to be seen in "The Waterman." Then will come Mr. Edwin Thorne, the American actor, for a short engagement. Mr. Thorne will be succeeded by Mr. Robert McWade, another actor from America, as "Rip Van Winkle; and at Christmas, as previously announced, Mr. Rignold will produce "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

CRITERION.

We have already printed the cast of "The Squire," Mr. Pinero's clever play, which is to be acted here to-night for one week only. On next Saturday "Diplomacy," the English version of Sardou's famous "Dora," will be brought out with the following disposition of the characters: Count Orloff, Mr. Robert Brough; Baron Stein, Mr. G. W. Anson; Henry Beauclerc, Mr. G. S. Titheradge; Captain Beauclerc, Mr. Percy Lyndal; Algie Fairfax, Mr. Dion Boucicault, jun.; Markham, Mr. H. Chichester; Marquise de Rio Yares, Miss E. Rome; Comtesse Zicka, Miss Fanny Enson; Lady Henry Fairfax, Miss Lucia Harwood; Mion, Miss Lilian Seccombe; and Dora, Mrs. Robert Brough.

GAIETY.

The clever, unique entertainment given here by Mons. Perron and Miss Ada Fitzroy, has drawn good and highly appreciative audiences throughout the week. Mons. Perron's conjuring is so neatly done, and the majority of his tricks are so novel and wonderful, that this part of the evening's amusement is alone worthy of a visit. But Professor Perron's marvellous "memory test" and the inexplicable thought-reading of Miss Ada Fitzroy—not to mention the astonishing "cabinet" manifestations—are of equal value. The entertainment is thoroughly good in all respects, and it is so refined that it cannot offend the most hypercritical of people. A matinée is announced for this afternoon, and several important changes are to be made in to-night's programme.

MR. SNAZELLE'S ENTERTAINMENT.

The clever and varied programme provided by Mr. Snazelle at the School of Arts continues to grow in favour, as it certainly should, for it is original, instructive, entertaining in more senses than one, and productive of much mirth. It embraces song and story, recitations and pictures, and it forms a really enjoyable and healthy evening's amusement.

COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT TO MR. SANTLEY.

The complimentary concert to Mr. Santley, to which reference has already been made, has been fixed for Wednesday, the 13th instant, and the concert will be given at the Darlinghurst Hall. The affair gives promise of being unprecedentedly successful. The greatest possible interest is taken in it by most of the prominent citizens. The date has been fixed as above on the recommendation of his Excellency the Governor, who hopes that the Earl and Countess Kintore will then be his guests at Government House, and he was anxious for their presence at the concert, as the Earl is understood to be a personal friend of Mr. Santley. His Honor Sir Frederick Darley, C.J., Sir Alfred Stephen, Sir Henry Parkes, Sir John Robertson, Sir John Hay, and a host of other important personages, including all the members of the Ministry, have given their patronage and promised their support, and his Eminence Cardinal Moran has specially interested himself in the affair. It was hoped that the concert would have taken place in the new Centennial Hall, the Mayor having willingly undertaken to grant its use, if possible, deeming that so important a concert would be worth remembering as the first held in it. But as it has been found that the Centennial Hall cannot be made available for such purposes for a long time to come, arrangements have been advantageously made with Messrs. Harris and Ackman, the proprietors of the Darlinghurst Hall, for the concert to be given there, and since its acoustical properties have been proved to be so excellent, perhaps, after all, no better building could be desired for the purpose. On all sides, Madame Christian, who has generously charged herself with the organisation of the affair, has met with warm support. To ensure the financial success of the concert a number of her friends have guaranteed all preliminary expenses, and cheques and promises to contribute have been received from various persons, including Sir Frederick Darley, Sir Patrick Jennings, Mr. Sydney Burdekin, Mr. Henry Gorman, Mr. Hoffnung, Mr. A. J. Riley, Dr. O'Brien, and many others. No better evidence of the large interest being taken in the matter can be afforded than the fact that already 1000 reserved tickets have been purchased, though the seat plan is not even yet prepared. It is hoped that this will be ready by Wednesday next. There can be no doubt that this complimentary concert will be a grand success, and it is hoped that it will prove so enthusiastic a "send-off" for Mr. Santley as to ensure his carrying away with him at least one very gratifying remembrance of his visit to the premier city of Australia. At present the list of performers is not complete, but promises have already been received from so many of our leading artists that the musical excellence of the programme may be said to be ensured. Further particulars may be reserved until the programme is definitely arranged.

THE ORPHEUS SOCIETY.

The Orpheus Society announces by advertisement the 20th instant as the date of its first ladies' concert of the present season, that day being the earliest Wednesday on which his Excellency the Governor and Lady Carrington would be able to attend after their return from Victoria. The advertisement referred to invites special attention to the terms on which lady subscribers can join the society.

COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT TO SIGNOR LARDELLI.

Signor and Signora Lardelli, being about to visit Europe for a three months' trip, a complimentary concert has been arranged in their favour, and will be given on Wednesday next. Its organisation has been undertaken by Messrs. A. E. Harper and A. W. Green, the hon. secretaries of the two Liedertafel societies, who desire by this means to show their appreciation of the ready help so frequently given to musical affairs in Sydney by Signor Lardelli, and at the same time as an expression of sympathy for the serious ill-health which has rendered change of air a necessity. Among the performers who have promised assistance will be Mr. Henry Stockwell, Mr. Hallewell, Mr. T. Gilpin, Mr. G. Rivers Allpress, Mr. Edgar Straus, and Miss Vida Bernard, Signora Lardelli, whose ill-health has compelled her retirement for a long period, will also reappear on this occasion.

THE OPERA HOUSE.

The programme at the Opera House will be changed to-night, and additional attractions are announced. The public patronage has been well sustained during the week, and the change of bill should bring about revived favour. The first part will consist entirely of selected and popular old Irish ballads, comic songs, &c., recently produced by the Mohawk Minstrels in London with very great success. The items of the second part are also changed. The company now enters on its fifth week.

THE TROCADERO.

The proposed show of beauty at the Trocadero having collapsed, another baby show is on the tapis, the Trocadero this time to be the scene of the exhibition. It opens on Wednesday, and exhibiting mothers are promised many advantages. All previous prizewinners are barred.

THE CYCLORAMA.

The steady attendance at the Cyclorama is a good argument in favour of its popularity. Its position being so convenient to Redfern railway station, it is a favourite resort of country visitors who may have but a few hours to spend in town.

THE HALLS.

The Haymarket Music Hall is likely to be a popular resort during the week, with the "Black Cyclone" and other items on the programme calculated to provoke an immensity of amusement. The hall opens to-night.

Mr. Frank Smith's company at the Alhambra continues to "go on for ever" in a way which his patrons deem very satisfactory. During the week there have been some slight changes of programme, and a new bill is announced for to-night. Mr. Johnson's rendering of "One Hundred Fathoms Deep" has always been rewarded with well deserved applause.

THE ROYAL MUSEUM.

This venture promises to be successful judging by the attendance during the week. A number of interesting little entertainments are provided, and freaks of nature, such as four-legged roosters, giant boys, and many illusions help to pass away an hour. As the museum is added to, and the amusements are expanded, as they will be from time to time, this resort is likely to become popular. "Jo-Jo" re-appears here on Monday.

THE AQUARIUMS.

The prospect of a public holiday has put the proprietors of the different aquaria in good heart. At Bondi, Mr. J. H. Williams, the energetic secretary, is to the fore with a varied series of devices to enable the visitor to enjoy him or herself, whether the visit be a long or a short one.

At Coogee, everything possible is being done to render this charming resort still more attractive, and, with an enterprising management, it seems likely that the approaching season will be productive of satisfactory financial results. The swimming bath opens today.

PROFESSOR PERRON AND MISS FITZROY.

These excellent entertainers have established themselves as favourites at the Gaiety, and have assured a successful season. The already expressed opinion that of its class it is the best entertainment we have had is held by so many who have visited the Gaiety Theatre since Mr. Perron and Miss Fitzroy have been there that little is left to be said. New features are introduced from time to time, showing the entertainers in a still more favourable light. The artists claim to provide "no end of laughter," and they are not far wrong.

The complimentary return ball given to Professor West at Leigh House last night, by his pupils, was very successful. About 60 couples were present, and they went right through a programme of 24 dances. De Groen's band supplied the music, and gave satisfaction to all. Messrs. Bradley, Young, and Eaton ably performed the duties of M.C. The party broke up at an early hour this morning.

Last evening the Burwood Amateur Operatic Society gave the last opera of the season at the Burwood School of Arts. The performance was well sustained throughout, and the audience was large and appreciative. The characters of "Pinafore" are too well known to need recapitulation here. Mr. M. A. Felton appeared as Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B.; Mr. J. Chalmers effected a good representation of Captain Corcoran; Miss Ethel Kennedy, as Josephine, gave every satisfaction. Mr. Charles Deane led the orchestra, Mrs. E. F. Stephen presided at the piano, and Mr. Hector R. Maclean was at the helm in the office of director.

A highly successful gathering took place in St. Philip's schoolroom, Church-hill, last evening, in connection with the Young Men's Club. There was a large attendance, and the schoolroom, which was decorated, presented a festive appearance. The Rev. J. D. Langley presided, and expressed his satisfaction at being present, and stated that his sympathies were in entire accord with the objects of the Young Men's Club. A programme, consisting chiefly of musical items, was gone through. The whole performance was remarkably good, and the various contributors were rewarded by well-merited applause. The proceeds of the entertainment are to be devoted to purchasing apparatus in connection with the gymnasium.

The weekly meeting of the Metropolitan Mutual Improvement Society was held in the society's rooms, Darlinghurst, on Thursday evening last, Mr. G. Frith presiding. A "member's social" comprised the business of the evening.

TRADE MONOPOLISM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I entirely coincide with the views of "R" upon "trade monopolism," and I am sure his opinions are endorsed by the great majority of tradesmen. What, for instance, are our grocers (mostly men of small means) to do if large firms, not content with including in their business almost every trade, open up grocery stores, and by their repute for cheapness, draw custom away from honest folk, endeavouring to make a living? A few people do not trade with these large firms on this account, and do rightly; but more often, even those men who grumble at "trade monopolism" further it by their patronage if they consider it in the slightest degree advantageous to their present interest. I side with "R" in his opinion, that the only way in which the present state of affairs can be altered is an interference on the part of the Legislative Assembly.

November 1. I am, &c., A LANCE.

A report from the Consul-General at Smyrna, which has just been published, contains a number of statistical tables relating to the trade of that port, which are of the usual character; but Mr. Holmwood observes that while these have been compiled from sources which have long been deemed sufficient by the foreign representatives, he finds that they are far from reliable, and he satisfied himself during a recent visit to the interior that the figures given for some of the principal articles are not even approximately correct. But he promises, after another and more comprehensive visit to the vast and fertile region beyond Smyrna, to obtain for himself figures which may be relied on. Under other circumstances, a port situated as Smyrna is should be one of the principal commercial centres of the world.

ALL SAINTS' DAY.

This festival has been always regarded by the Anglican Church as a day worthy of general observance, and in these colonies year by year a greater desire is manifested to observe this and other festivals as they occur, and the number of churches open for services is steadily on the increase. Besides the order of services being observed at the Cathedral there were celebrations of the Holy Communion at a number of the city, suburban, and other churches in the diocese, whilst at some bearing the title there were special services throughout the day. At All Saints', Woollahra, everything that could be done to make the occasion remarkable in the way of tasteful decoration was skilfully carried out. The services were: At 7.30 a.m., Holy Communion, at which there was a very fair attendance; 11 a.m., mattins, sermon, and midday celebration; 7.30 p.m., choral evensong. The clergy present were the Revs. H. Wallace Mort, M.A., incumbent; Dr. Harris, head master of the King's School, Parramatta; H. A. Woodd, B.A., curate St. Stephen's, Edgecliffe; G. E. C. Stiles, B.A., in charge of St. Peter's, Watson's, and St. Michael's, Vaucluse, all districts within the parish; Arthur Rivers, M.A., Precentor; and Canon Kemmis, Minor Canon Rich, G. N. Woodd, B.A., — Symonds, — Horton, and R. M'Keown. The choir was augmented by the choirs from the Cathedral, St. Mark's (Darling Point), St. Mary's (Waverley), and St. Stephen's (Edgecliffe), and was under the direction of Mr. William Biggs, whose assiduous work has been favourably noticed on many previous occasions. The service commenced with the choirs entering the south-western door, singing the processional hymn, Hark! hark! the organ loudly peals. The Preces, for intoning, the responses were sung to Tallis, whilst the Canticles were according to Garrett, the lessons were read by the Rev. G. N. Woodd and Canon Kemmis respectively: the anthem usual for the festival, "What are these?" by Stainer, was rendered with fine effect. The preacher, Dr. Harris, took his text from 1 Epistle of St. John, i, 5 and 6, spoke in brief but eloquent words of the fellowship between God and man. For the offertorium was sung "He shall feed His flock," by Miss Moore with much expression, the concluding anthem being "I will give thanks" (Mozart). The benediction was pronounced by the incumbent.

TOWARDS THE SUN-LINE.

QUEENSLAND.

XIII—(FINAL).

THE PASTORAL INDUSTRY—ON THE DARLING AND THE FITZROY DOWNS—COUNTRY TOWNS—ARTESIAN WATER.

(BY OUR SPECIAL COMMISSIONER.)

I am now fairly well educated in the matter of land conditions in Australia; that is from the standpoint of observation and travel. No man yet, I fancy, was ever thoroughly informed on all the ramifications of the different land laws of the colonies. They have defied the explorations of the most earnest students and politicians, and in such a case where then am I? Just in that region of present experience which has some scare of the past, but no good glossary of all the language of land legislation. From Townsville south, so far as the interior is concerned, one sees much the same kind of land that is seen in New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia. The eucalyptus, the lonely areas where no habitation nor human being is seen, and a desolate background here and there. I heard much in Townsville of the land in the Winton district, of the splendid resources there, of the quickly-developing wealth of the region. But I had not time to touch the heart of it. Still I met at Charters Towers several squatters from Hughenden and beyond, and they had much to say of the hard times through which they had passed. They are rejoicing, however, in a better season now, and look forward to more prosperous times. There is not nearly the trouble over the land question in Queensland that there has been in New South Wales, though there is still going on the process of amending and equalising, and setting bad points right.

There is the same grievance on the part of the squatter about compensation for improvements. Says the squatter in all parts, "I get for my improvements just the then value at time of sale, not their real value. For take a well. I may bore or dig half-a-dozen times, before I get water; I may keep a tank in thorough order, at considerable cost, and yet when my successor comes in he but pays me for the actual labour in construction." There are, of course, many replies to be made to these complaints, and the land legislators make them in unmistakable fashion. Laws must always press here and there heavily on the individual, but the general working is to be considered, as well as the individual movement. To pay for improvements according to the processes of experiments by which they were achieved would in many a case be putting a premium on incompetency.

Under the Crown Lands Act of 1884, the grazing farms which correspond to the New South Wales homestead leases, with the exception that the maximum area is 20,000 instead of 10,000 acres, have proved a success in most districts. There are also agricultural farms, the maximum area of which is 1280 acres, and the minimum 320 acres. Besides that still there are the village settlements, which everybody has told me, from Minister for Lands down, have proved dismal failures. Out in the Mitchell district I saw villages staked out, but there were only stakes, nothing more. Imagine the wild intelligence which said to would-be settlers, "You shall have a lot in the village for your business, and a lot of out "the village on which to build a house and live, and then offering them the land in districts where there was no water within miles, and from which artesian supply would be either impossible or a vast expense. And even if there were water, what would these villagers live on? Station property surrounding them, and barren enough in places at that—why, it is like putting a horse to feed in a cemented tennis-court. The thousands of pounds spent in surveying these "village settlements" were idly spent—were squandered—and the country has had to pay the piper. They were like the homestead leases in the far west of New South Wales—a delusion and a worry. But altogether the feeling in Queensland regarding the land law there is better than it ever was in New South Wales. In 1888, when there was a severe drought, the percentage of agricultural farms taken up had increased by 19·33 per cent., and grazing farms by 170·54 per cent., or about 1,000,000 acres over 1887. The grievances out of which the squatters make capital I consider comparatively small, and certainly they are not vital. Radically the Queensland land law is right; it is only incidentally that it is wrong.

There is one thing most noticeable in squatting in Queensland—there is not so much overstocking as in New South Wales and Victoria. Now the Fitzroy Downs is a far finer country than the Darling district of New South Wales, yet the land is not stocked so heavily. I can put my finger on a station of 1200 square miles at Mitchell where there is carried not more than 30,000 sheep and 10,000 cattle. Compare that with New South Wales, where on land that requires five, six, and seven acres to support a sheep, the land is stocked up to the hilt and beyond it. There is little allowance made for vicissitudes, and the result is that these great losses occur in our western district which have filled squatters and the public with horror. I have seen a station in New South Wales where only 30,000 sheep were saved out of 150,000. That would seldom occur in Queensland, because, in the first place, most of the worst squatting country is better than our worst squatting country, and the land is not stocked so heavily. I might enter into figures to prove this and other things, but this is the last article of this series, and there is not room here to do it. There are many things I would like to review in the Queensland land law, but I can only put conclusions, not the processes by which I have come to the conclusions.

THE DARLING DOWNS.

No one has seen Australia till he has visited the Darling Downs in Queensland, and the Darling River country in New South Wales. I have written twice about the latter; I have now a few words to say about the former. Never shall I forget my first view of them. It was a beautiful morning, and I had had as full a repast of glorious mountain scenery spread out before me as I ever enjoyed. I cannot dwell long on that journey from Brisbane to Toowoomba. My space grows short in which to take my leave of Queensland. But if I had a friend to whom I wished to be kind, I would send him to the Blue Mountains first, and then across the hills from Brisbane to Toowoomba, and beyond to the vast plains. You start early in the morning, and go swiftly by those places that from the river are very pretty, and that in days to come will be what the Hudson River suburbs are to New York—Toowong, Taringa, Indooroopilly, Graceville, and Ipswich, in an hour and 20 minutes; and after a few score miles begins the climbing, Helidon, Murphy's Creek, and Highfields. Let us pause. Saw you anything more exquisite than this? Vast billows of wooded land stretching out and away, away for eighty miles, and you winding round the mountain side where are repeated the marvels of construction, the tunnels and the curves, you saw at Cairns. On one side of a horse-hoe you look across and see the way by which you came—a way cut through the ends of vast mounds like graves driven through great hills, fringing deep chasms, triumphant over nature and centuries of loneliness. There hang in yellow grandeur orange orchards, there droop beside a mountain stream the willow, there hides a quiet home among the bushes, and there while you dream is—Toowoomba. A quiet town and full of possibilities. It is surrounded by farms, little farms varying from 10 to 200 acres. There is "the little German vote;" there dwell the sturdy Teutons who have done wonderful pioneer work in Queensland, who have cleared the Rosewood scrub, who work as Englishmen in this country never do—they and their wives and their children. Away down at Warwick, on the Darling Downs, where I spent a pleasant time, I saw also the houses that the Norwegians had made for themselves in the hills, and on the hills making cultivation far up the range, living their quiet, stupid lives in a frugal and honest fashion, and hated by their English and colonial neighbours, because they make money where others lose it. The Englishman will not toil, and save, and struggle in this land as do the foreigners who come to us. The temper of the country seems against it, as well as the instinct of our race. Throughout Queensland are Germans, Norwegians, and Swedes making a good living, and showing not only their own powers of industry and perseverance, but demonstrating also the capacities of the land.

But the Darling Downs! Leaving Katoomba, we are on them, and far across them I travelled; and across the Fitzroy Downs, a distance of 483 miles, to Charleville. Many a splendid estate was passed, and many a history I heard of the pioneers of that land. I had the good fortune to travel with Mr. M'Farlane, of Waroonga, on the Fitzroy Downs, whose hospitality I enjoyed, and with whom I travelled behind a good pair of horses over many a score of miles of country. There is no land in Australia like parts of the Darling Downs. For fifty miles west of Katoomba I travelled over stations that were simply vast farms, which could be cultivated like a Chinese garden at Rushcutter Bay. It reminded me of the great farms in Colorado, Minnesota, and in Manitoba and the north-west territory of Canada. Hundreds of square miles that could be put under plough—if there were good seasons. There is the rub. That land, like the land of Canaan, might flow with milk and honey, but that the heavens are sometimes like burnished brass and the gates of the sky will not open. And so, though there are some estates on the Darling Downs that are smiling with boundless wheat fields and reeking with fatness, there is the one thing wanting that prevents the gold from being retorted. A broad, free, splendid life it is up there, and a climate superior to any in Australia, in tone and bracing qualities. While I was there the heat in the middle of the day was strong, but it was not oppressive. The air was dry and clear, and as for the nights, they were like those of the Blue Mountains—cold and bracing. And why not? Waroonga, for instance, is 1500ft. above the level of the sea, and the atmosphere is really that of the mountains. One of the most enticing meals I ever ate was one that Mr. M'Farlane and myself cooked between Roma and Waroonga—plain chops that we had carried with us, bread and tea, and a bit of cheese; but the relish of it! Brillait Savarain never thought of anything so choice. It was the air that did it. But it was the horses that came near spoiling it all, for a fine run we had for them afterwards, and if there had not been a wire fence a half-mile off, I might not have been back in Sydney yet. And just here a word about these wire fences.

Rabbits are not unknown in Queensland; but the Government are doing everything possible to prevent their increase, and their incoming from New South Wales. There are 660 miles of rabbit fencing either constructed or in course of construction in Queensland. Already about £92,000 have been spent, and the work is still going on. There are strong suspicions that rabbits are carried into the colony, and from one station to another. And the squatters are not sanguine that they will be able to keep them out. Rabbiting, as I showed last year, is a very lucrative employment, and there are scoundrels enough in this country or in any other to sacrifice the interests of thousands and the general good to their own momentary profit. The Under-Secretary for Lands says that it is impossible to get proper returns regarding the pest, because station-holders are loth, if they have rabbits on their runs, to speak of it because of the probable consequent depreciation in the value of their property. But the official record for last year was 358 rabbits killed. The Government undertake to employ the rabbiters and pay them, providing the stations on which they are at work find rations, shift the camps, and pay an overseer. The Minister for Lands is sure that Queensland will suffer from the plague to the same extent as New South Wales has suffered; and I think he is right. I have never believed in the efficacy of wire-fencing, and the more I think about it and see of it the more convinced am I that my first conclusions were correct. It is like fencing in the Sands of Dee: they will get out in spite of you; and the rabbits will get in in spite of you. Destruction by one way or another is the cure, it is the remedy.

The towns in the far west of Queensland are very like those in the Darling district of New South Wales. Dalby, Roma, Mitchell, are sad-looking places. Each as the terminus of the railway had its day. As soon as the line was opened for traffic to another point, the sails of Commerce were furled, and those who could moved on also. Roma and Mitchell have wide streets, and in the former place a big attempt at dignity is being attempted by planting trees in the streets; but who are to rest in the shade of them? Look through the highways of commerce at any hour in the day, and all that a bullet would hit would be a Government officer. The New South Wales western towns compare favourably with them; Wilcannia, Wentworth, Bourke are far superior to Roma, Mitchell, and Charleville. Yet my recollections of Charleville are pleasant. I had gone there chiefly to see the artesian water supply that had been struck, and that was yielding 2,250,000 gallons of water a day. It was no easy journey there, and when I arrived I found the bore sealed up. What was to be done? Charleville was, in itself, as nothing. I might see some of the station property round it, as I did—weary sand wastes. There was the Warrego, a bed of sand, with spots of water here and there; and I had crossed, two days before, the Maranoa, at Mitchell, without the horses wetting their feet. Dry as the bones of the prophets. I was used to this. I have had my fill of desert country, from the cactus and alkali scrub plains of Arizona to the Mount Browne quartz plains. There was but the old story to tell, of drought and decimated sheep. But this bore was to make things better, men said; it was to turn the land into a smiling garden. I knew better. I knew that the great sum of good that these bores would do was to provide safety for the travelling of stock on stock routes and runs, and be a guarantee against a water famine in a town in the dry time. Irrigation in that Western country! Yes, but only in patches and small lots, and to supply individual needs. Further is all in the clouds, is all moonshine at present. Markets and communication must come ere irrigation in the great plains can be of much service. But this bore was closed by Government order, and there was only the scaffolding and the 8in. pipe on which a huge timber was set, and all sealed up. Well, must I go back to Sydney after travelling the heart of the West to see this harbinger of better things? True it was, that, I could see the prison of the water, I could see the great channel cut by the water down towards the town, a channel like that of a river, but—only that?

No I would not go back without seeing the fountain of joy, as a happy squatter, the owner of the bore at Kerritree, in New South Wales, called it. And I did not. I saw the workmen gathered together, I saw Morrison and Newton, the contractors, put on their overalls and go at it like navvies, and I saw that pipe opened and a column of water eight inches in diameter shoot up into the air like a monster catapult, carrying with it stones and bits of rock. And this water was coming up 1875 feet, warm and pure, to seek the outer world. The thing was managed. I knew the town 10,000 miles away where these contractors' homes were, and—well, you can't wash nationality out of a man's veins.

Sometimes the water would shoot up fifty and sixty feet into the air; sometimes it would be but a solid column up to a distance of twenty feet and then fall over like a monster fountain spray. These men, Morrison and Newton, are doing good work in Queensland. They and their partners work under the title of the Queensland Boring Company. They have sunk wells successfully at Cunnamulla, getting water at 1406ft., at Blackall with water at 1663ft., at Tambo with water at 1002ft., and at Landsdowne Estates at 2580ft., at Brisbane at 1780ft., getting at the last-named place 10,000 gallons a-day. At Blackall there is got 850,000 gallons, at Tambo 280,000 gallons, at Cunnamulla 540,000, and at Charleville 2,950,000, gallons per day. The contractors say they never saw a bore like that at Charleville. It discharges 400 gallons in 14 seconds. The conditions on which the company works are—£1 down to 1000ft., 25s. down to 1500ft., and 30s. down to 2000ft. The machinery is moved by the Government from place to place; but so much time is occupied in transferring it that the company have made no money by their successful work. The tubes used are Stewart's, of Glasgow, and they have been found to work perfectly. Only one accident has occurred since the company began their operations. It is not possible to over-estimate the value these bores will be to the interior of Australia from the standpoint of preservation of stock, which to my mind is their chief present use.

I had intended writing of the Warwick district, another long-settled and most prosperous portion of the Darling Downs, to tell of some of the magnificent country I saw there, along and beyond what Trollope called the sluggish Condamine; but other duties press upon me, and I must leave these Queensland topics here, with pleasant thoughts of the most interesting tour I have taken in Australia, and with gratitude to so many in official and private life who showed me kindness and helped me on my way. Would that I had told my tale better, and had done greater justice to a noble colony. Hail, and farewell!

REVIEW.

The Forest Flora of New Zealand. By T. KIRK, F.L.S. Wellington: George Didsbury, Government Printer. 1889.

Mr. Kirk, who has been Chief Conservator of Forests to the Government of New Zealand, and who now occupies the post of lecturer on natural science at Wellington College and the School of Agriculture, Lincoln, has special qualifications for the task of which the results are embodied in this carefully prepared work. His official experience in the former post, as well as his scientific and theoretical knowledge, indicated him as a fitting person to undertake the duty of preparing a descriptive account of the economic trees and shrubs comprised in the New Zealand flora authorised by the Hon. John Ballance, Minister for Lands, and confirmed by his successor in office, the Hon. G. Richardson. The object the department had in view seems to have been a very practical one. The intention was to draw up such a statement as would form an easy book of reference for information on the subject treated, and in this way to diffuse a knowledge of the forest resources of the colony. One of its aims is to establish a uniform series of common names for timber-bearing trees whose usual descriptions are somewhat confusing, owing to want of method and system in their application. One result of this is that certain kinds of timber are known by different names in different parts of New Zealand, and sometimes this difference is very inconveniently shown in the fact that the name by which a certain wood may be known in Otago, for instance, is not only not the name for the same wood in Auckland, but is used to describe a different timber altogether. Mr. Kirk gives some instances of this:—

At least a dozen kinds of small-leaved trees are termed "birch," with the prefix, black, white, red, brown, grey, or even yellow applied, as the imagination of the bushman may suggest, scarcely any two bushmen being agreed as to the correct application of the qualifying term, while architects and contractors for the most part are little better informed. The brown-birch of Otago is the white-birch of Nelson; the white-birch of Westland, again, is a totally different tree; the black-birch of Auckland is termed red-birch in Wellington, brown-birch in some parts of Nelson, while in Otago it appears to be termed indifferently black-birch or red-birch.

The difficulty of introducing order into this confusion of nomenclature is got over to some extent by the adoption of Maori names for these trees, though now, in the adoption of this system, considerable trouble has been experienced in tracing the old native terms. It is pointed out that Maori scholars have borne testimony to the precise applicability of old Maori names to plants and other natural objects; but their use seems to have declined among the present generation of the native races, except in the case of the commonest kinds. The compiler of this book expresses his acknowledgments to W. Colenso, F.R.S., the Ven. Archdeacon Williams, and others for assistance in this direction. Respecting this use of native names Mr. Kirk says:—

In the great majority of cases, the Maori names are much better adapted for commercial use than those commonly employed; happily, no attempt has been made to replace "kauri," but the unmeaning names of red-pine, black-pine, white-pine, &c., are inferior to "rimu," "matai," and "kahikatea," as they are employed in other countries to distinguish other kinds of timber, and are moreover liable to be confused with each other. This is shown by the fact that the red-pine of the Nelson district is termed black-pine in other parts of the colony.

Some of the native names, however, are so formidable in pronunciation and appearance that even Mr. Kirk, with all his admiration for Maori nomenclature, is fain to suggest a compromise in the interests of those whose faith may be too weak to follow through these perils. For instance, he is willing to allow that "fuchsia" may advantageously replace "kohutuhutu"; and most of his readers will be inclined to meekly agree with him. He foresees the obstacles in the way of a general popular acceptance of the new system of naming suggested here; but these, he thinks, are sufficiently met by a suggestion that "if the proposed names are uniformly employed by the officers of the public works, survey, and railway departments they will speedily come into commercial use, and be generally adopted." This feature of the book, it will be seen, is an eminently practical one. The confusion of names under the present condition of things gives rise to endless inconvenience and trouble, often causing timbers to be employed for use for industrial and building purposes which have little or nothing in common with the kinds specified, entailing loss both of time and money to those concerned.

But all this, useful as it must prove, is merely incidental to the work itself. This is really a kind of dictionary of New Zealand forest trees and shrubs, profusely illustrated in each case with lithograph plates from careful drawings. Each species is treated by itself. The headline sets forth the systematic name, then comes the native name, or the common name in such few cases as it is considered desirable to retain it; then the tribe or natural order in which the plant is classified is given, with a reference to the plate accompanying each species. The text which follows gives such historical association as the plant may have, and other information of general interest. Thus, for instance, taking a species at random, we find it set forth that the toothed lancewood (Pseudopanax ferox) is a comparatively recent addition to the New Zealand flora, having been discovered by Mr. John Buchanan, F.L.S., in Otago, and erroneously considered by him to be the true Panax crassifolium of Decaisne and Planchon, and described by him in 1876 in the "Transactions of the New Zealand Institute" under that name. The appearance and habits of the tree are then described. The "karo" again (Pittosporum crassifolium) was discovered during Cook's voyage by Banks and Solander, who gave it the name by which it is known to systematists. In this part of his description Mr. Kirk gives the dimensions, character of growth and development, and a more or less detailed account of the structure of the flower and fruit, devoid of technicalities. Then comes a concise account of the properties and uses of the species, and in the case of those kinds of timber better known in industrial and commercial uses, we get descriptions of the mode of working the forest, conversion, commercial value, and other facts. In this connection the relative durability of these New Zealand woods is indicated, with the colour, markings, density, and adaptability to industrial purposes. Some of this information is minute and particular, and apparently well adapted for the use of the worker who may refer to this book for information which may be of some practical assistance to him in his work. What Mr. Kirk says of the "Papanma" in this connection may be taken as a sample of his method of treatment:—

"Owing to the crooked and irregular habit of the trunk it is rarely possible to obtain straight logs exceeding 12ft. in length, while those of the largest diameter are almost invariably hollow. The crooked habit detracts from the value of the timber for certain purposes, but renders it specially suitable for the purposes of the shipbuilder. It is of extreme durability, and splits with great readiness, notwithstanding its distorted habit of growth. It is much used for house-blocks, fencing-posts, sleepers, boat-timbers, and similar purposes, but has not been thought worthy the attention of the cabinetmaker except for inlaying."

This method of treatment, of which this extract gives an instance, will show the essentially practical character of Mr. Kirk's compilation, and the fidelity with which the design of the department in ordering the preparation of such a book was carried out. The fault of most books of the kind appears to the average reader to lie in the fact that the compiler is too hysterically anxious to show what he knows of the technics of his subject to have any time to spare for the practical wants of ordinary people. In some cases it would almost seem as though works of this kind were prepared rather with a view to running the gauntlet of other specialists' criticism than to meet the wants of working colonists eager to learn the exact value of the raw material that lies to their hands. Mr. Kirk has happily combined the practical with the scientific, however, and his book is one which should satisfy those interested in New Zealand economic shrubs and trees, whether their standpoint be a botanical or a practical one. Following the order of the book's arrangement, a brief statement is next given of the distribution of the genus, and a more detailed account of the distribution of the species, and the sketch concludes with a botanical description of the species and an explanation of the plate.

Some special reference is made here to the ascertained strength of New Zealand timbers, though Mr. Kirk tells his reader that the information on the subject is not so complete as could be desired, while in some cases it is even very defective. Up to very recently the only authority on this subject was a report prepared in 1865 by Mr. Nelville Balfour, marine engineer, on the result of certain experiments conducted by him on the strength of the timbers of the colony. In 1879, however, Mr. W. N. Blair, assistant engineer in the Public Works Department, published the result of experiments on Otago woods. But the most valuable information on the subject, we are told, is contained in the results of a series of experiments on kauri conducted by Mr. T. Laslett, timber inspector to the British Admiralty. Mr. Kirk does not give the date of these experiments, but it appears that the process of testing was very thorough, specimens being selected from logs taken from the base, middle, and upper portion of the tree, and from various places in each log, so that the sections tested represented all the stages between young and fully-matured timber. Mr. Kirk has used all these authorities, but he points out the absence of certain data that materially affect the value of their information. Thus he says that "no information is given, for instance, as to the age of the tree experimented upon, the time of the year at which it was felled, or the nature of its habitat, whether rocky or swampy, sandy or argillaceous, &c., yet these and other points are of great importance in determining the average strength of any timber." He goes on to explain that it was intended to carry out a series of experiments in this direction, but the design was frustrated by the abolition of the Forestry Department.

Enough has been said to indicate the character and scope of what ought to prove a valuable book. The full-page illustrations to this quarto volume were made by the draughtsmen of the Survey Department for the most part, a few being from the pencils of Mr. D. Blair and Mr. A. Hamilton. The work is well presented, and the arrangement of the letterpress and printing of this and the lithographic plates are creditable examples of the quality of the work turned out of the Government Lithographing establishment and Printing office. An appendix gives a synopsis of the characters of the orders and genera treated of in this book, and there are also a glossary of derivations and another of botanical terms.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

We have received from Messrs. Turner and Henderson, Hunter-street, some cards for the Christmas and New Year season. They are intended to serve as "Souvenirs from Sydney," with seasonable wishes, and the manner in which they have been got up makes them singularly appropriate to their purpose. They are photographs, very clearly and artistically executed, and tastefully mounted on gilt-edged cards, reproducing views of well-known places about Sydney or picturesque bits of favourite scenery. Those sent us consist of two large cards, one showing a view of the city taken from the Observatory, and the other a scene in the Botanic Gardens. Some smaller ones, cabinet size, give two very picturesque little views of the waterfalls at Mossman's Bay and Willoughby. In both these photographs the excellence of execution is well evidenced in the falling water, the falls at Mossman's Bay particularly, with their setting of rocks and trees, making a prettily romantic view. A view on the Hawkesbury River, in a setting of native wild flowers, is also effective, and another gives a glimpse of some of the statuary in the Botanic Gardens. Messrs. Turner and Henderson are to be congratulated on the happy design and artistic finish of these very well-chosen Christmas and New Year cards.

THE DEPRESSION AND ITS CAUSE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I crave your kind permission to add a few words more on the above, chiefly for the purpose of answering Mr. Thomas Peters, whose effusion appears in your issue of to-day. I think, Sir, you will admit that in a "free" country any man who has made his home in it has a perfect right to criticise the action of those in power, to point out the bad effects of their policy, and, if possible, to suggest means to improve the condition and general welfare of his fellow-men. And as every one of us has been endowed by the Creator with a certain amount of brain-power, it is evidently our duty to use it to the best of our ability. We should always remember that whatever we read is surely the result of one man's reasoning power, and as likely to be faulty as the conclusions the humblest amongst us may arrive at. Had Mr. Peters inquired into the merits of the rival policies, independently of the dicta of such men as Cobden, Bright, &c., there is no doubt whatever in my mind that he would be as earnest a protectionist now as he seems to be a freetrader, for the results and arguments in favour of the former are overwhelming. Freetraders persist in believing that their own theory cannot be wrong, and thus they build up all kinds of imaginary facts to support it. They prove, for instance, to their own satisfaction by statistics that this country is booming along in its prosperous career, quite oblivious of the fact that the figures are wholly unreliable, and, as has been proved, of no practical utility in comparing the progress of this and other colonies, even if the resources were equal. Let them go along George-street and carefully mark the notices appearing in every other window, such as "Selling off," "To Let," "Must be sold," and other signs of distress, which meet the eye on every hand, and they will require no statistics to prove that the prosperity and vigour which should always be found in a young country have for the present departed. There are premises in the centre of the city whose weekly rental has declined 50 per cent. during the last four years. Where is the progress when such facts are staring us in the face? The shopkeepers and tradesmen want customers, and where are they to come from when foreign workmen are earning the wages which in justice belong to our people?

There are several personal matters in Mr. Peters' letter which are unworthy of notice; but as to my experiences of droughts, permit me to state for his particular benefit that, without wishing to boast, I am certain there are few, very few, in the city who have passed such ordeals as I have; and no matter what the harvest returns were, I have good reason to remember the season '77-'78 as the most terrible during 30 odd years of active life passed mostly in the interior. And I beg, sir, to submit that personally I have little to gain in the struggle going on. It is, however, the sacred duty of everyone to assist the needy, and to try to make this a better and happier land for everyone in it; and thus I am supporting that policy which has proved itself of such immense benefit to the masses of the people in other countries.

Oct. 31. I am, &c., C. O. WALDOW.

THE DALLEY MEMORIAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—On the 28th October, 1888, at 18 minutes to 12, this illustrious gentleman breathed his last, regretted by all. Two days afterwards he was followed to his last resting-place by gentlemen of all denominations. On the 2nd November a meeting, presided over by General Richardson, was held, and it was decided a memorial tablet should be placed in St. Mary's Cathedral from the members of the Soudan Contingent. Sir John Robertson called a meeting which was held on 10th December, at the Royal Hotel, when Mr. Abbott moved, and Mr. O'Mara seconded, and it was carried, —"That a national monument should be erected." A strong committee was formed, secretaries and treasurers were appointed, and so far the matter ended, and now he is almost forgotten. What a contrast between London and Sydney, the former closing its subscription-list, having received all money required; the latter having done nothing, with the exception of Cardinal Moran at Liverpool the other day, paying a high tribute to the memory of the departed gentleman. Who is to blame? I am, &c.,

AN AUSTRALIAN.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

The Moorefield Racing Club provide an afternoon's sport at their prettily-situated racecourse near Kogarah to-day, and the management have made excellent arrangements for the comfort and convenience of their numerous patrons. The recent favourable weather has had a most beneficial effect on the course, which is in capital order, and the other appointments leave nothing to be desired. Complete arrangements have been made to have the results of the V. R. C. racing posted on the course directly after each event has been decided. In addition to the ordinary traffic to Kogarah special trains leave Redfern at 12.40 and 1 p.m., and a service of cabs and 'buses will be available to convey visitors to the trysting ground. The sport commences at 1.30 p.m., when the candidates for the Tramway Handicap will be despatched on their mission, and at the weights Cascade should give a good account of himself, while Manola and Pastmaster may be the most dangerous of the others. His victory at Warwick Farm on Saturday last renders Dolphin ineligible to start for the Kogarah Stakes; but Sydney, Black Demon, and Second Thought may furnish the winners. Nonsense heads the list for the Moorefield Handicap, but 8st. 4lb. should not prevent the daughter of Gainsborough from running well forward, while Sorella, Hester, and Cascade may fill the situations. Young Kingston, Manola, and The Felon may fight out the battle for the Auction Stakes; and Melissa, Hester, and Home Rule wear the most healthy appearance of those engaged in the Stewards' Mile. The programme to be played out on the occasion is given at length in another part of this paper.

The V. R. C. Spring carnival, which opens to-day at Flemington, promises to be as great a success as any of its predecessors, and, as usual, the mother colony will be well represented on the course and in the paddock. During the past week the exodus of New South Wales sportsmen by rail and boat has been very great, and most of the prominent patrons of the turf on this side of the Murray will be in evidence at the trysting-place on the banks of the Saltwater River to-day. With such equine heroes as Abercorn, Arsenal, Antæus, Cardigan, Dreadnought, Melos, Singapore, and Co. to do battle on our behalf, it is only reasonable to anticipate that a fair share of the good things to be distributed at the meeting will come to New South Wales. Elsewhere will be found anticipations of the various events by "Nemo," who telegraphs his opinions from headquarters. The list of horses engaged for the day's sport is published in another part of this paper.

The following scratchings were posted at the office of the Moorfield Racing Club yesterday:—Tramway Handicap: True Blue. Kogarah Stakes: Dolphin, Concordia. Moorefield Handicap: Moscow. Auction Stakes: Hoppicker. Stewards' Mile: Moscow.

Those interested should note that ponies and galloways engaged at the meeting of the Sydney Driving Park on Wednesday next, and not previously measured, must be in attendance at Moore Park on Monday, so as to pass under the standard.

Marsubra was struck out of all V. R. C. Spring engagements yesterday.

Acceptances for the Q. T. C. Brisbane Handicap and Welter Plate are due on Tuesday next.

Business at Tattersall's rooms on the V. R. C. Spring meeting was very quiet yesterday, and though in addition to the events on which speculation has been already in operation, books were opened on the Melbourne Stakes, the transactions recorded were few and far between. The following were the nominal quotations:—Melbourne Cup: 7 to 1 each v. Antæus and Melos (taken and offered), 8 to 1 v. Carbine, 10 to 1 each v. Cardigan, Singapore, Lonsdale, and Benzon, 100 to 8 v. Chicago, 100 to 5 to 100 to 2 v. any other. For the Derby, 6 to 4 was laid on Dreadnought, 7 to 4 wanted, 5 to 1. v. Richelieu, 7 to 1 each v. Dunkeld and Rudolph, 10 to 1 v. any other. 7 to 4 on the field was offered about the Maribyrnong Plate, Correze still holding the position of favourite. Melbourne Stakes: 7 to 4 v. Abercorn, 3 to 1 each v. Carbine and Antæus, 5 to 1 each v. Melos and Singapore, 7 to 1 v. Cardigan.

The Warren sportsmen hold their Christmas races on December 26 and 27, with Christmas Handicap of 25 sovs. and Warren Handicap of 40 sovs. as the leading items on the bill of fare.

The annual meeting of the members of the Junee Racing Club took place on Wednesday last, when it was resolved to hold the annual races on February 5 and 6. A programme was drafted for the occasion, with a prize list amounting to £325. The principal event is the Junee Cup of 75 sovs.

V.R.C. SPRING MEETING.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The weather has settled fine, the course is in splendid order, everything indicates a great day's racing tomorrow, and a numerous attendance is anticipated. Racing will open at 1 o'clock with the Maiden Plate, and Copenhagen, Tinlander, and Linburn may have the winner among them. The Melbourne Stakes will be one of the most interesting events of the meeting, as it will bring about a meeting of most of the cracks, and will give a welcome line about the other important races which are to follow. Antæus is most fancied to-night, but though he is as fit as hands can make him, it is doubtful if he will do more than fill a place; and as Abercorn is quite as fit as he was at Randwick, he should win, and be followed home by Carbine and Antæus. The Hotham Handicap is rather puzzling; but, unless Arsenal be asked to act, the places may be divided among Meteor, The Charmer, and Tartar, always providing that Singapore does not start. A great race is sure to be witnessed for the Maribyrnong Plate. Correze has greatly improved, both in condition and in temper, and will require a deal of beating; and Prelude is the only one likely to give it to him, though danger may be expected from King William, Hermitage, Utter, Wimberell, and Wilga. All considerations being equal, the places are likely to be occupied by Prelude, Correze, and King William, with Hermitage and Wilga to see them home. Dreadnought is so firm for the Derby that the race is called "Dreadnought's Derby." The favourite cantered this afternoon, and moved somewhat sorely. Rudolph is better than when at Randwick, but I think the stable has made a mistake in withdrawing Singapore, who, although he does not like the tracks, is in my opinion as fit as anything in training. Richelieu is in great form, and will be likely to more than trouble Dreadnought, and Dunkeld also looks as if he had a good race concealed about him. That it will be a great battle I am convinced, and opine that Richelieu, Dreadnought, and Rudolph will catch the attention of the judge as named; but it is a difficult race to handle, and is the most open Derby that has yet engaged attention. Sequel, Fishwife, and The Charmer will probably run forward for the Coburg Stakes.

The following is the bill of fare to be discussed at Flemington to-day:—

MELBOURNE TRAINING NOTES.

FLEMINGTON, FRIDAY.

Very little of interest was done on the track this morning. S. Cook had the Charmer, Dividend, Jebusite, and The Wild Oat down cantering; they all look well, as if they had done a lot of work.

Scobie sent Enuca a good gallop over five furlongs; he is a nice-looking colt, and gallops in capital style.

Melos ran a smart six furlongs, and Carbine swung along three-quarter pace; he bruised his heel rather badly in the last gallop at Caulfield, and will have to run to-morrow in a bar shoe.

Cardigan is looking very well, and spurted half-a-mile.

Dreadnought, Abercorn, and Singapore went brilliantly over the same distance.

Savanak galloped about a mile and a half, making a terrible noise.

FLEMINGTON TRAINING NOTES.

FLEMINGTON, FRIDAY.

Very little of consequence was going on at Flemington on the training tracks this morning. S. G. Cook had the Wild Oat, the Fortune Teller, the Charmer, Milton, Jebusite, Dividend, and Pioneer at work the first thing. His two-year-olds, the Admiral, the Harbour Light, The Spot, and The Crash were exercising after breakfast. The firstnamed contingent were restricted to gentle cantering. Montalto worked at half pace, after which Rosella and Bustle traversed five furlongs. Time, 1 min. 7½ sec., Carrington, Tinlander, and Burgoyne wound up with a brisk half-mile. Antæus kept up his reputation by running the mile in 1 minute 50 seconds. Manton went the mile, six furlongs of which were negotiated in 1 minute 22 seconds. King William spurted mildly, Correze taking matters quietly. Wycombe and Arsenal were not extended, but Melos swept home the last four furlongs in 57 seconds. Green Isle was given very serviceable work on the tan. Lovalstone created a very favourable impression by his free action, striding along two improving rounds on the sand. The two-year-olds of S. Gardener's string, Loiterer, Indolence, and Shade spurted ½ a mile. Cardigan, looking very fit, was swinging round at 15 seconds to a furlong. Singapore, who moved along with the utmost freedom, had the best of Abercorn. Dreadnought, in half-a-mile spurt, negotiated it in 54 seconds. Prince Consort, Victor Hugo, and Fishwife traversed five furlongs in 1 minute 8 seconds. Moorbank was given a fast mile. Carbine's mission was half-pace work, but he did not look as well to the eye as he did a fortnight ago. Moreover, he moved a bit tenderly. Richelieu patronised the tan for useful pacing.

MELBOURNE BETTING MARKET.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

There was a large attendance at the sporting clubs to-night, also in Bourke-street, and in the vicinity of headquarters of the betting market. For the Derby some good wagering took place, and fielders were strong against the favourite, Dreadnought, but at the close of the evening 65 to 40 on him was wanted. Richelieu was at 6 to 1, and Dunkeld 8 to 1, at which price he was backed for a moderate sum. 100 to 5, 100 to 6, and 100 to 7 was taken about Prince Consort, who was backed to win about 5000. Rudolph found friends at 10 to 1. Carrington and Loyalstone were neglected. For the Maribyrnong Plate, Correze was rather a better favourite than before, and all the 2's to 1 obtainable were taken, after which 7 to 4 was the best offer. Hermitage was not supported, and 7 to 1 was on offer against; but Utter at 8 to 1 was well backed. Riverina at 100 to 6 was backed for a fair sum. Prelude was at 10 to 1 offered. King William at 100 to 8, and Clare at 100 to 5 found supporters. Not much betting on the Melbourne Cup, but prices showed a tendency to lengthen in consequence of sweep money being brought into the market for hedging. An attempt was made to knock Carbine back, but finally 10 to 1 was wanted about his chance. Knight of the Garter was freely supported at 100 to 5, and £3000 was accepted about Chetwynd at 100 to 5; £1800 to £200 was taken about Melos. Cardigan was backed at 100 to 9 to win a fair stake. Antæus received further support at 100 to 11 to win about £2000. Prince Consort was backed at 100 to 3, a wager of £5000 to £150 being taken. Books were opened on the Melbourne Stakes, and Abercorn was a pronounced favourite, Carbine and Antæus being the only others backed.

Melbourne Stakes: 6 to 4 v. Abercorn, taken and offered; 5 to 2 v. Carbine, taken and offered; 4 to 1 v. Antæus, taken and offered.

Maribyrnong Plate: 7 to 4 v. Correze, taken and offered; 7 to 1 v. Hermitage, taken and offered; 8 to 1 v. Utter, taken and offered; 10 to 1 v. Prelude, offered; 12 to 1 v. Magic Circle, offered; 14 to 1 v. Riverina, taken and offered; 14 to 1 v. Clare, offered; 20 to 1 v. others.

V. R. C. Derby: 65 to 40 on Dreadnought, laid; 6 to 1 v. Richelieu, taken and offered; 8 to 1 v. Dunkeld, taken and offered; 10 to 1 v. Rudolph, taken and offered; 20 to 1 v. Loyal Stone, offered; 20 to 1 v. Carrington, offered; 14 to 1 v. Prince Consort, taken and offered.

Melbourne Cup: 100 to 12 v. Antæus, taken and offered; 100 to 12 v. Melos, taken and offered; 100 to 10 v. Carbine, taken and offered; 100 to 10 v. Singapore, offered; 100 to 10 v. Benzon, offered; 100 to 10 v. Cardigan, taken and offered; 100 to 7 Lonsdale, offered; 100 to 8 v. Chicago, taken; 100 to 5 v. Oakleigh, offered, 25 to 1 wanted; 100 to 5 v. Knight of the Garter, offered; 100 to 4 v. Pakeha, offered; 100 to 4 v. Chaldean, taken and offered; 100 to 5 v. Chetwynd, taken; 100 to 4 v. Richelieu, taken and offered; 100 to 3 v. Bravo, offered; 100 to 3 v. Prince Consort, taken and offered.

MELBOURNE GUN CLUB.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The ladies bracelet meeting was held at the Brighton grounds to-day. There were 98 nominations represented in the competition. The prizes were seven bracelets, first was valued at £100, second £50, third £25, fourth £15, and three at £10 each. The birds were exceptionally fine, and a strong wind was blowing from the shooters to the traps. Many of the birds went straight away with it, and were very hard to stop. The competition was narrowed down rapidly, no fewer than 35 out of the 98 nominators going out on the first bird; 19 more fell in the second round. At the fifth bird there were only 17 in, and six of that number only managed to grass the eighth bird. In the tenth round only four nominations were left. The finish was left to W. J. Bailes, and W. P. Daish. The latter killed his 15th bird, and won the first prize. Bailes missing, took the second prize. It was understood that the winner had accepted a sporting offer before the shooting commenced for a chance of winning on the particular nomination, upon which he won the bracelet. W. T. Coldham took third and fourth bracelets, with 13 and 10 birds respectively. R. Robertson was fifth with 9, P. Glenister sixth with 8, C. Frazer seventh with 7.

The Mayflowers were victorious by one game, the sets being equal. The scores were:—Mayflower L. T. Club, 3 sets, 27 games; Hydra L. T. Club, 3 sets 26 games.

AQUATICS.

DOUBLE BAY REGATTA.

The annual Double Bay regatta will take place this afternoon. This aquatic event is a very popular one, both among our rowing and sailing men, and consequently the entries for the various races are good, and a good afternoon's sport is anticipated. The programme consists of 19 events, viz., 9 rowing and 10 sailing. The ball opens with a race for all yachts, to start at 1.45 p.m., for which the following have entered:—Volunteer, scratch; Sirocco, 20 minutes; Iseu, 22 minutes; Iolanthe and Akarana, 29 minutes. It is, however, considered improbable that the Volunteer will start, she not being in readiness. The next race is for yachts not exceeding 2½ rating, the competitors being—Elf, Louelle, Jennie Wren, Sirona, Nellie, and Thisbe. This is the first race for this class of boat ever sailed in the harbour, and naturally a great amount of interest is taken in it. The rating of all these boats not being made up yet, the handicaps will not be declared till the start. Among the other sailing events is a race for local boats, half-deckers over 20ft. and 20ft. and under, open boats, hired boats, and three dingy races. The rowing events should all prove interesting. The Maiden and Junior Double Sculls have filled well, representatives from nearly all the clubs competing. For the Senior Double Sculls only two entries have been received, viz.: S. R. C., Messrs. Kloster and Kennedy; and G. R. C., Messrs. Robertson and Wilson. Other events are—All Comers, Manual Labour Amateurs, &c. The Newcastle S. S. Company's Sydney has been engaged for flagship, and should prove a very serviceable one. The steamer Pearle will convey visitors to the flagship, and will leave No. 3 jetty at 1.15 p.m. sharp. As will be seen by advertisement, other arrangements have also been made to bring visitors to the ship. The officers of the day are:—Sailing races: Starter, Mr. R. C. Oatley; judge, Mr. A. Dunn. Rowing races: Starter, Mr. J. E. Myers; umpire, Mr. A. Goodyear; and judge, Mr. K. Gilfinan. A meeting of the committee was held last night at the Council-chambers, Woollahra, Mr. J. Blackman presiding. It was decided that the steamer to tow boats down, coming from the vicinity of Balmain and Lane Cove, should leave Longnose Point at 2 o'clock sharp, and come round the southern end of Goat Island. It was agreed that Hordern's medal should go to the boy that steers the winning crew in the greatest number of races. A second prize of a pair of binoculars, presented by Messrs. Flavelle and Co., was added for the race for yachts not exceeding 2½ rating. It was also decided that all sailing boats and all competitors in the rowing races should carry their proper colours, otherwise they will be liable to disqualification.

TRADES MOVEMENTS.

Mr. J. Downing presided at a meeting of the cabmen last night, when the society's delegates were instructed to vote in favour of the appointment of a permanent secretary to the Trades and Labour Council.

A meeting of the Eight-hour Committee was held at the Trades Hall last night, Mr. J. M'Gowan presiding. The balance-sheet in connection with the late demonstration was received. It showed that the receipts had been £3024 17s. 6d. and the expenditure £2042 8s. 10d., leaving a balance of £982 8s. 8d. This will give a sum of £44 13s. to each society. It was reported that the banner had been spoiled, and it was decided to obtain a new one.

MR. DONALD LARNACH, OF LONDON, ON OUR POLITICAL POSITION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I enclose with this a letter I received yesterday from Mr. Donald Larnach, of London.

Mr. Larnach's letter is entirely upon the political position of New South Wales, and, I believe, will be read with marked interest by your numerous readers.

Mr. Larnach is a man of noted power and influence in the commercial and monetary circles of this country, as well as of London, and his words will carry weight wherever they are uttered. I am glad to think that I have always maintained that England's prosperity for the last 40 years was occasioned more by the gold discoveries of California and Australia than by any other cause, and I notice so profound a judge as Mr. Larnach is of the same opinion. During the period mentioned America, a protected country, progressed at even a more rapid rate than England, so that, from this fact, it will be seen that freetrade had absolutely nothing to do with the advancement of that country. Probably, on reading Mr. Lanach's letter, Sir Henry Parkes may be enabled to understand that there are other people, besides knaves and fools, upholders and advocates of the sound and righteous principle of protection. I am, &c.,

November 1. DAVID BUCHANAN.

"Bank of New South Wales,

"Old Broad-street, London, 27th Sept., 1889.

"My dear Sir,—I am duly in receipt of your valued note of the 15th June. I was on my back on its receipt, and for the past five weeks I have been in Germany, drinking the waters of Homburg, otherwise I would have replied long ago. I take the greatest interest in the politics and finances of all your colonies, but more particularly of your colony. I entertain no doubt whatever as to the enormous advantage of protection to all young countries. If you are to prosper, you should have free trade amongst your own colonies, but strict protection against the outer world. The people of this country have run mad on the subject of free trade, and insist that it is that policy which has made England so rich during the past 40 years. I combat that argument, and insist that our prosperity may be traced more to the discoveries of gold in California and in Australia. Cobden said, 40 years ago, that free trade was so grand a policy that within 10 years it would be adopted by every country in Europe. Whereas, on the contrary, it has not been adopted by one in the world, your own colony excepted. It often occurs to me that the prosperity of Victoria should have an effect on your colony. I think that Victoria has carried her protection too far, but you may depend that it is the duty of your statesmen to find employment for your own population, and not to import a single article that you can produce within your own borders. In this country we import, duty free, millions of things which we could and ought to produce ourselves, with the result that we have hundreds of thousands of our own people living in idleness and on the brink of starvation. I hope that you will do your best to keep your colony from over-borrowing money in England. Already the drain upon you for interest is great. I am an advocate for the gradual construction of railways, but they ought to be carried out slowly, and where they are likely to pay interest on the cost of their construction. You have been attempting to do in one year what ought to have been done in five. I look forward to your next general election giving you a protection majority. I agree with you, therefore, that you may do more real good to the cause in the Upper than in the Lower House. . . . . .

Yours, most truly,

"D. LARNACH.

"Mr. David Buchanan, Sydney."

THURSDAY, 14TH INSTANT.
FOR POSITIVE SALE. FOR POSITIVE SALE.
RAVENSWORTH, RAVENSWORTH, two miles from the Post-office, Goulburn.
The most ATTRACTIVE AND FINEST SUBURBAN PROPERTY in the suburbs of Goulburn.
To gentlemen desirous of securing a charming, healthy, and beautiful Country Residence in the suburbs of the City of Goulburn, RAVENSWORTH offers unmistakably the greatest attractions. The grounds are lovely, the situation enchanting. Every surrounding pleases the eye, and the very vigour of health must be retained and an impaired constitution restored by a residence at RAVENSWORTH. Therefore, as a FAMILY RESIDENCE OR SANATORIUM it cannot be excelled. There is no place, Bowral and Mittagong included, that can compare with it or can offer such beauty and varied scenery as RAVENSWORTH commands; and although the property originally cost a large sum of money, it is brought into the market for UNRESERVED SALE and at the buyer's estimate of value.
FINLAY and CO. have received instructions from the Administrator of the Estate to sell by auction, AT THEIR ROOMS, BELMORE-SQUARE, on THURSDAY, 14th INST., at 11 o'clock, THAT HIGHLY VALUABLE and ATTRACTIVE PROPERTY known as RAVENSWORTH.
The house is a fashionable and modern-designed Residence, built of brick, with all the latest and most complete improvements that taste and money could command. It is situated on, and was selected from the choicest site of the celebrated Kenmore Estate—about 2 miles from the city, and, with its grounds, gardens, lawns, shrubbery, orchard, and vineyard, covers an area of THIRTY-EIGHT ACRES TWO ROODS FIVE PERCHES (38a. 2r. 5p.)
The approach by the lodge is through an avenue of ornamental trees and shrubbery, and the house stands on a terraced plateau, taking in one of the grandest panoramic views that can well be imagined, city, plain, valley, and ranges all being in the near distance—a variety of scenery which is at once most pleasing and attractive.
The conveniences comprise—house with verandah and conservatories opening from rooms, wide entrance hall, drawing room with bay windows, massive marble mantelpiece in every room, dining-room, library with bookcase, bedroom with bay window, dressing-room, bathroom, hot, cold, and spray; pantry, storeroom, with fittings complete, servants' hall, kitchen, cooking range, boiler, copper boilers, five bedrooms on the first floor, bathrooms, electric and alarm bells, also wardrobes, clothes presses, &c.; water laid on throughout the house, which is supplied by several large tanks and 10,000 underground cemented tank—in all, about 30,000 gallons.
Four-stall stable, coachhouse, harness-room, groom's room, loft, cemented ash pit, fowlhouse, wood house, gasometer, with gas and chandeliers throughout the house, and branch fittings to all the rooms.
The Lodge is a beautiful two-storeyed Cottage, and all buildings are brick and modern. With the House will be sold a SMALL BLOCK of LAND, upon which is erected an Engine-house, with Engine and Gear for supplying Ravensworth house and grounds with water from the river; the garden throughout being laid down with pipes for irrigating purposes.
The Garden and Orchard covers about 6 acres, and contain a choice variety of fruit trees, 7 years old, and in full bearing. The vineyard, about 4 acres, laid down with the choicest wines; trenched, standard pipes in lawn, and water laid on. Excellent home paddocks, &c.
It is impossible to convey within the limits of an advertisement the completeness of everything in and pertaining to Ravensworth. No outlay will be required at the hands of the purchaser, and it is certain that the submission of this property will give to the purchaser a perfect country residence in the most healthy part of the colony, and in all probability at half its original cost.
An inspection is simply requested, and a sale must result. The auctioneers will gladly show intending purchasers over the property.
FARM adjoining, comprising an area of 42 acres 0. 7p., fenced in, a portion of the Original Kenmore Subdivision, has been under cultivation; lucerne grows freely and well; every inch is fit for the plough; good dam; and from its proximity to the city a farm of considerable value, and would make an EXCELLENT ADDITION TO RAVENSWORTH.
TERMS: One-fourth cash, one-fourth on execution of conveyance; balance may remain secured for a term of years if required.

THE SYDNEY MAIL.
THE LARGEST ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN AUSTRALASIA.
THE ISSUE FOR NOVEMBER 2 contains, amongst other illustrations, the following:—
PORTRAIT OF THE REV. J. G. FRASER, M.A.
This is a life-like portrait of the Chairman of the Congregational Union for the year 1889-90. It is from a photograph by J. H. Newman, of Oxford-street.
THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S ROSE SHOW.
One of the finest floricultural exhibitions ever held in Sydney was that of last week, under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New South Wales. Our artist has drawn a number of interesting and striking sketches of the Exhibition, the whole forming a very attractive picture.
THE BABY SHOW.
The great exhibition of last week, if not of the year, was the Baby Show. The gathering of something like 400 mothers with their offspring on exhibition, competing for prizes, was as novel as it proved to be a popular event. Our artist has by means of his pencil succeeded in portraying some of the leading incidents of the show in such a manner as to convey a graphic idea of what the whole thing was like. The names of the prize-takers will be found accompanying the picture.
THE NAVAL MANŒUVRES.
We continue our illustrations of the great naval demonstration which was recently made off the coast of England. Our pictures this week show the battle in the Atlantic ocean, and the enemy's fleet at anchor, coaling. They are both very fine engravings.
THE KING'S PALACE, HONOLULU.
We know a great deal about the Hawaiian Islands from report, and from the frequent communication between this city and Honolulu. But few persons are aware that the capital, Honolulu, possesses some very fine buildings. To such persons our engravings this week, of the King's Palace, one of the Churches, and the Royal Opera House, will surely prove of considerable interest.
THE TURPENTINE TREE.
Another of the economic plants of Australia is illustrated in this week's Sydney Mail—the Turpentine Tree. It is accompanied by an interesting explanatory article on the growth and use of the tree.

In another column will be found a statement explaining the present position of the women's college movement within the University.

The mining market was depressed yesterday, and business was also quiet in investment shares.

In the Import markets business was moderately active, the first of the month orders having come in to give a stimulus to trade. The month opens with the money market still stringent.

The case of Sarah Clifford, who was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment with hard labour the other day for pocket-picking, is the subject of comment in a letter published in yesterday's issue. The sentence has been reduced to one of light labour for a similar period, and our correspondent still seems to think it inordinately severe. He uses stronger language than that, however; he describes the case as a miscarriage of justice. He says we frequently hear of some scoundrel kicking a person to death, for which he gets but a few months' imprisonment. The sentence passed on the unfortunate creature in question is certainly a heavy one, if the charge and the trifling sum of money involved alone are considered. But our correspondent falls into the common mistake of looking at half a side of his subject. The report of the proceedings at the Central Criminal Court shows that a long list of previous offences was recorded against the prisoner, who was described by His Honor as "a scourge to society, and irreclaimable." The sentence was made a heavy one in the interests of the public, and to prevent this person preying any longer on society, as well as to act as a deterrent to those who have entered on the same career. Our correspondent loses sight of the principle that governs the sentencing of offenders, into which sentiment is not expected to enter. Scoundrels who kick persons to death are not numerous enough as a rule to be a scourge to society, fortunately, and it is not a peculiarity of this kind of offence to be continually repeating itself as soon as an opportunity offers. Crimes of violence that threaten to be epidemic are treated with long terms of imprisonment, and even with flogging, when the character of the offence is such as to make such drastic measures desirable in the interests of the protection of the public. In the same way habitual thieves, and those against whom so long a list of convictions is recorded that it is fair to assume they make crime the business of their lives, can only be kept out of mischief by being put under lock and key. It is the only way to protect the society they make it their trade to prey upon.

Not more than half the function of the Criminal Law is discharged when an offender has been punished. So far as the public is concerned, the most important effect of the sentences passed is still to come. Sentences are deterrent as well as punitive, and for offences that are in vogue, and not merely exceptional outbreaks, the former is the more important part of the business of criminal courts. The effect of a sentence is calculated not only for the offender, but for the whole of that portion of the criminal class addicted to the commission of the kind of offence of which he has been convicted. A man may even cause the death of another, and not be so great a menace to the peace and well-being of society as the fripon who has been detected in the theft of half-a-crown, but whose whole life is known to be passed in the exercise of his profession as a thief. It is the custom of British justice to visit crimes against property, on the whole, much more severely than crimes against the person, because, looking at the question broadly, the one is part of a systematic danger to the orderly life of the community, while the other is the accident of temperament, events, or the fleeting circumstances of the moment. Laws are made to regulate society, and not to hold the balance of moral justice. The law must always be more or less mechanical in its operation so long as existing principles continue to govern it, and abstract equity is a thing that is not always practical enough to adapt itself to the requirements of social self-defence. When a person arrives at the stage when his very existence is only continued at the expense of society he becomes a common pest and a common danger, and it is necessary that he be promptly removed out of the way.

The logical consequence of all this is clear enough. If it is right to lock a person up for ten years as an irreclaimable thief, though on the last occasion the offender may have only filched a purse, consistency would seem to require that such an individual be locked up altogether. The objections to a life sentence all apply to one of ten years, the difference being merely one of degree. An incorrigible offender is sent to gaol for a long term of years to protect society, to offer a wholesome example to other offenders, and to save expense in the long run. Each of these ends could be better secured by shutting the criminal up altogether, as is actually done in the cases of twice and thrice convicted offenders in certain States of the Union. It is not altogether certain that something of the kind would not be the best thing not only for society but for the offenders themselves, if the sentence could be carried out under suitable conditions. The British mind moves slowly on such matters as the treatment of criminals, and there is more of the rule of thumb than of scientific method about prison discipline. But there is no reason why this matter should not be approached in a spirit of inquiry as well as any other, and the whole question of crime and its punishment treated ab initio, after the manner of almost everything else in these days of critical analysis and return to first principles. In some parts of the world thoughtful persons are recommending to treatment for neurosis people who would a little while before have been executed or imprisoned for life. Some authorities are beginning to recognise that certain kinds of crime are diseases and disorders of the mind rather than deliberate abuses of the will. It is a theory that may be carried to an extreme, as LYTTON has done in "The Coming Race;" but it is a fact all the same that men whose opinions are entitled to respect are out of sympathy with that kind of penal discipline which would treat criminals much as lunatics were treated, as CHARLES READE describes it in "Hard Cash." Sickly humanitarianism on such a subject as this has driven us to the opposite extreme, perhaps; but it seems reasonable that if the habitual thieves in the community, like the unhappy woman sentenced the other day, could be separated altogether from the rest of the population in a place apart under appropriate treatment, it would be all the better for society and for themselves. Failing that, the administrators of the law are driven back upon the next best thing, and it is to be expected that the only course left open will bear now and then rather hardly on the individual.

It is easier to deal with the raw material out of which criminals are made than with the finished article. All careers of crime begin with a first offence, and it is out of badly managed first offenders that confirmed criminals are made. This is a matter that cannot be too often insisted upon, because it lies at the root of the criminal problem. Yet it is said to be impossible to separate first offenders in our gaols from hardened criminals, or to counteract the unwritten law which says that every person once convicted can only be rescued from a criminal career by something little short of a miracle. It must be clear that the state of things which makes this necessary is radically defective and wrong, yet nothing practical is done in the matter. The juvenile probation measures in use in Queensland and New Zealand are found to work well as far as they go, but even these are so far unknown here. The figures in last year's Statistical Register show that a large proportion of the crime of the State is due to frequently-convicted prisoners, and the process of their manufacture is continually going on. The average of previously convicted persons in relation to the total convictions has risen from less than one-fifth in 1879 to considerably more than one-fourth in 1885, the proportion being about one-fourth again last year. The return for each year shows that the system is in this way regularly feeding itself. So long as nothing is done to counteract this state of things, any attempt to interfere with the course of justice in such cases as that of SARAH CLIFFORD is to approach a difficult question at the wrong end.

The little breeze between Mr. REID and Mr. BUCHANAN over what the latter gentleman appears to regard as a mere punctilio, suggests a nice point in connection with the meaning of plain words and the tactics of party warfare. In his speech at Waverley the other night, Mr. REID complained that some remarks of his about the effects of protection and the condition of farmers in the States had been met with the reply, "You're a liar!" This is a kind of argument that we are becoming accustomed to in the fiscal controversy of late, and the public ear is so case-hardened to this sort of thing that it is only when someone makes a personal matter of it that the circumstance gets any notice at all. In Wednesday's issue, however, we published a letter from Mr. REID's opponent in which he gives what may perhaps be called an explanation of this particular occurrence. The statement is denied, and the writer goes on to make a correction. It does not mend matters very much. It appears that Mr. BUCHANAN merely said that "Mr. REID was an adept at misrepresentation, and that almost everything he said about America was untrue." This is possibly as neat an example of a distinction without a difference as one might wish to see. A lie is a wilful perversion of the truth, and untruths about America or anything else uttered by an adept at misrepresentation certainly suggest something like a wilful exercise of the ingenious faculty credited to Mr. REID. To the mind of the casuist there may be a difference between calling a person a liar in one word, and in saying the same thing in half-a-dozen words. There may be a certain gain in elegance of expression. But to the individual concerned the difference is merely a question of artistic finish, one might naturally think, and the insulting expression is as offensive in the one form as in the other. When the coloured person in the negro farce calls his opponent an adept at misrepresentation or an unscrupulous perverter of the veracities, we know very well that he means "You're a liar!" all the same.

It is possible to offend a person by an insulting name much more severely than by the direct use of the term which it is sought to fix. There are euphemisms and polite periphrases which convey a great deal more than a crude epithet could possibly do, and a verbal fencer accomplished in the use of this sort of edged tool can inflict a very ugly wound by an expert riposte where circumstances do not admit of the direct passade. The honourable gentleman who assures his Parliamentary opponent that he would not hesitate to call him an atrocious miscreant did the forms of the House permit, has sacrificed very little by his thoughtful reticence. In the same way it would be hard to find any very material difference between an open charge of lying, and a tortuous accusation in reply to the argument of an opponent that he is an adept at misrepresentation, and that all he says is untrue. On the whole, indeed, the latter way of putting it is merely a sacrifice of force without a corresponding gain in artistic finish and we can scarcely give the phrase the same amount of admiration that we might be prepared to offer for a well-cut Chesterfieldian refinement of abuse, which would have hidden its crudity under some polished epigrammatic glitter of its own. It is, of course, purely a matter of idiosyncrasy whether a person so abused will take umbrage at the insult or not. A person afflicted with that "superfine refinement of conduct that characterises Mr. REID" may have very strong views on a matter that a rougher specimen of humanity can afford to overlook. But even superfine persons are entitled to their little affectations of refinement if they have a taste for that kind of thing, and after all it really rests with a man himself whether he likes to be called a liar or not.

Perhaps it does not matter very much whether a political opponent is called a mere adept at misrepresentation or something else, but it certainly matters a great deal that the decencies of public controversy should be maintained. People who engage in controversial flights are apt to get excited sometimes, and in that condition they use language of which they, or at any rate their friends, are afterwards ashamed, and of which they are sometimes over-ready to offer lame and halting explanations that explain nothing. But meanwhile the mischief is done, and these undisciplined controversialists by their wild abuse raise a whirl about the subject under discussion that obscures the real question at issue. This personal abuse is the curse of colonial politics, and the thing that scares decent men out of the cockpit of public life. So long as the individual feels that by taking part in a public discussion he will be subjecting himself to the risk of coarse personal insult and abuse, so long will the finer spirits in the community hesitate before unbosoming themselves of their views on platforms. It may be said that the exigencies of party politics require this kind of thing. That is as it may be. But it is quite a certain thing that in the old duelling days, when party feeling in England ran at least as high as ever it has done here, many a fine gentleman has been left "quivering on a daisy," as practised duellists used to say, for calling an opponent a liar in a much less patent way than in some instances that have come under observation of late.

Personal abuse is always to be strongly deprecated in public life. Gentlemen can box without verbal knuckle-dusters of this kind, and the people who use them take a mean advantage of the rules of the ring. Unsportsmanlike is not the word for it; it is something a good deal worse than that. But when a party to a controversy resorts to weapons of this kind to defend a rotten cause, and from motives of self-interest rather than of self-defence, the case is worse still. Yet this is something like the state of things the free-trade party have to contend against. Their opponents have not only shown themselves incapable of fighting a fair battle, but they have added ignominy to their defeat by the use of the Chinese weapons they have had recourse to in their rout. The arguments of facts and figures put forward by the advocates of an effete policy have been so often pulled to pieces that scarcely a rag of reason is left them to flutter in the wind. Under the circumstances they seem to turn naturally to abuse, and under cover of a dust-cloud of assertions and arguments that are at least courageous if they are not sound, they seek to distract attention from the real question in which the country is interested by Mohawk-like tactics that are almost bad enough, if such a thing were any longer possible, to discredit their hopeless cause. An honest fighter respects a gallant opponent who stands up boldly before him, and fights according to the rules of the ring. It is possible to take hard knocks with a certain sense of pleasure under such circumstances, suggested by a sense of the fact that the enemy is worthy of his best efforts, and that the battle is a fair one, fought out in the open. But there is neither honour nor pleasure in a conflict with a Parthian foe who flings misrepresentation and abuse at his opponents as he flies.

A short time ago there was a discussion upon the inconvenience and waste of time too often caused by the undue multiplication of public holidays. It was pointed out that when a public holiday was proclaimed by the Government the effect was not felt simply at the Government offices, but also at the banks. And although the issue of the proclamation has not the effect of a compulsory law upon the managers of private establishments, the latter did not lie beyond the range of its indirect operation, and the ordinary routine of private business was, therefore, subjected to much disturbance and dislocation. The discussion was not without interest, and there are now some indications that it was not altogether unprofitable. The City authorities are proposing to celebrate the opening of the Town Hall on the 27th of this month in a demonstrative way, and it seems to have been thought that the various trade associations might wish to participate in the movement. It has generally been supposed that they are fond of bands, and banners, and processions through the public streets, with an admiring public on the footpaths to watch them on their way. The matter was officially brought under the notice of the Trades and Labour Council at its meeting the other night; but it seems that after a lively discussion, in which the declaration of a public holiday was deprecated, it was resolved to inform the MAYOR that the Council could not see its way clear to organise a demonstration on the day in question. May this expression, of opinion and the action accompanying it be welcomed as the triumph of a principle which has in the past been too frequently propounded in vain? It has been contended that in a free country like this, if a section of the community want a holiday they can generally take it. If they want to march in procession they can generally do so in an orderly manner. There is nothing to prevent them, and they can go their ways in peace. But from that very liberty in these respects arises the right of all other people to be equally free to go about their business without hindrance or interruption, and to be protected against any direct or indirect compulsion to take part in the demonstration, or to submit to interference by reason of it. Arguments of this sort have not always hitherto received the attention that was their due. It is pleasing, therefore, to observe that their justice is now admitted by so influential a body as the Trades and Labour Council; and many people will look forward with interest to the practical application of the same principle when the day for the next Eight-hour Demonstration arrives.

On the Fourth of July last four new stars were added to the national flag of the United States in anticipatory recognition of the admission of four new States to the Union. On the same day Conventions assembled in the four North-Western territories of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington to frame constitutions for those territories upon their acquisition of the new and higher status. Now we learn by telegram from London that in Dakota 100,000 people are threatend with famine in consequence of the failure of the crops. The rainfall there is rather deficient than superabundant, but there are other circumstances which generally counteract the effects of deficiency, and the country is of good value both for agricultural and pastoral purposes. The production of wheat is usually large. This season, however, circumstances have been adverse, and from some cause which the telegram does not set forth the crops have so far failed as not only to stop exportation beyond the limits of the new State, but also to make the position of its inhabitants embarrassing. It is hardly to be supposed that they are in serious danger from shortness of supply, because help would be obtainable from other parts of the Union or from the adjacent Dominion of Canada. But a community relying greatly upon the abundance of its harvests can hardly fail to experience a check when such a disaster as a general loss of crops occurs. If the good people of Dakota should suffer from temporary depression in consequence, we hope that it will not be said that the season was in no sense a cause of the difficulty, although that is the line of remark that may possibly suggest itself to the minds of some of our protectionists. It may, however, be said in good faith that should the importation of grain from abroad become necessary to avert a famine, the means of obtaining relief will not be facilitated by the existence of a heavy tariff. It is a remarkable coincidence that in a telegram of the same date we should hear of an immense loss of sheep in the Argentine Republic. In a country so largely dependent for its prosperity upon its flocks, the death of 20,000,000 must inflict a staggering blow. If the report be true, we should be well able to appreciate its importance. Last year the number of our sheep was upwards of 46,000,000; and we can imagine, therefore, the effect that would be produced by the sudden loss of nearly half of them. There was a drop here in 1883 from 37,000,000 to 31,000,000, which, added to the loss of the natural increase, was a very serious matter. But our disaster was far less than that which has been suffered by our energetic rival in wool-production, if there be no exaggeration in the story.

THE Minister for Public Instruction, Mr. Carruthers, is expected back at his office to-day, after his tour through the Southern districts of the colony. During Mr. Carruthers's absence the business of his department has been attended to by Mr. Gould.

A FEW days ago the Postmaster-General visited Watson's Bay to inquire into an application for additional facilities there in connection with his department. He has now caused the following letter on the subject to be forwarded to Mr. R. J. King, M.L.A., who was present on the occasion referred to:—"Sir,—With reference to the visit of the Postmaster-General to Watson's Bay on the 24th October, I am directed to inform you that he has decided to invite tenders, which will be received up to the 25th November, from persons willing to let premises at that place from 1st January next. In the event of suitable premises being secured, an official post and telegraph office with which will be combined a money order office and Government Savings Bank will be opened therein, under the charge of the telegraph operator now employed at the signal station. I am further to state that Mr. O'Connor is disposed to grant a second delivery of correspondence by letter-carrier at Watson's Bay if the same can be effected at moderate cost, as to which inquiries are now being made. I have the honour to be, &c., S. H. LAMBTON, Secretary."

SOME time ago a petition from the residents of Wollongong and the Illawarra district was presented to the Minister for Justice, asking for the removal of the local police magistrate, Mr. W. H. Thomas. The petition, which was signed by about 800 persons, gave the following reasons for asking for Mr. Thomas's removal:—1. That he was over the age prescribed by the Civil Service Act. 2. That he was incapable of administering the law, having shown on several occasions his inability, incapacity, and incompetency. 3. That in consequence of his tyrannical decisions, the justices of the peace for the district had refused to sit on the bench with him. 4. That his decisions had caused a feeling of hostility in the minds of the people, and if he were not removed, it was feared that the peace of the people would be broken. In view of these serious charges, the Minister appointed Judge Backhouse to hold an inquiry into the matter. Judge Backhouse, after full and exhaustive inquiry, during which he examined 64 witnesses, has now reported to the Minister that all the charges made in the petition are entirely without foundation, with the exception of the paragraph relating to Mr. Thomas's age. The Judge further states that some of the signatures to the petition were found to be forgeries, and the circumstances under which the petition was signed were such that the statements contained in it could not be taken to represent the opinion of any considerable portion of the residents of the district. Mr. Gould, in a minute, has expressed his satisfaction at the charges against Mr. Thomas having been proved to be utterly groundless.

As the result of the Postmaster-General's recent visit to Moss Vale, the Public Works Department has been asked to place a sum of £1500 on the next Estimates for consideration, for the erection of a new post and telegraph office there. The local Municipal Council was at once informed of the decision, and it has sent a very courteous reply to Mr. O'Connor, thanking him for his prompt action in the matter.

THE removal of the tram starting place from Bridge-street to Bent-street, was brought into force for the first time yesterday, in accordance with the decision recently arrived at by the Railway Commissioners. The change caused a certain amount of inconvenience, owing to the public not being fully aware of the fact that the new arrangement had come into force, and a good many people went at first to the old starting-place at Bridge-street, only to find that they had to walk on to Bent-street. In a few days, however, when the public gets accustomed to the new order of things, these mistakes will be avoided, and judging from the manner in which the trams ran yesterday, the change will enable the tramway officials to conduct the service in a much more punctual and efficient manner.

WITH reference to the correspondence in our columns respecting the extension of the tram to the Waverley Cemetery, a letter has been addressed to a member for the Paddington electorate (Mr. J. H. Want) from Mr. Barling, Under-Secretary for Public Works, stating that he was directed by the Secretary for Public Works to inform Mr. Want that it has been decided to proceed with the work at once, on the route recommended by the Railway Commissioners, and that instructions have been given accordingly.

As the result of a conference between representatives of the wool-buyers and wool-sellers, we understand there is a good prospect of a settlement of the difference between them.

THE president, Mr. Lloyd Tayler, Mr. W. N. Billing, hon. secretary, and Messrs. Purbrick, Tappin Allan-Smith, Watts, and Gibbs, Fellows of the Royal Victorian Institute of Architects, arrived by express yesterday, as guests of the Institute of Architects of New South Wales. They were welcomed at the station by Mr. P. Fletcher-Watson, secretary. On Monday they will commence a series of visits, which, while affording the visitors information of the intellectual resources of the capital—its University, its architecture, and its chief engineering wonders—will also embrace the picturesque in a trip to the Hawkesbury River. The whole arrangements are being taken up by the president, council, and Fellows of the Institute of New South Wales. The festivities will commence by a formal reception in the rooms of the Institute at 10 o'clock, a visit to the Mayor at the Town Hall, and terminate with a banquet on Thursday, and a complimentary return lunch offered by the visitors on Friday.

THE German warship Alexandrine, which arrived yesterday, reports having hoisted the German flag at Ysabel, in the Solomon Group, and at Howe's Group. The German protectorate covers Choiseul, Bougainville, and Ysabel and the British Malayta, San Christovm, and Guadalcanar. During the cruise of the Alexandrine one of the villages was fired in the German protectorate, as satisfaction for the murder of a trader, and an alleged murderer was taken to German New Guinea to be tried.

LIEUTENANT MAX PALESKE, of the German man-of-war Alexandrine, died of fever while his vessel was at Howe's Group, in the Solomon Islands. The death occurred on October 22, and the burial next day. Captain-Lieutenant Paleske was a midshipman on board of the King William in the Franco-Prussian war, and had gained distinction in the service. He joined in 1870.

A DECISION which will prove interesting in more respects than one to magistrates and justices of the peace, was given yesterday by the Full Court, consisting of the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Windeyer, and Mr. Justice Foster. The immediate matter under consideration was merely whether certain justices at Tuena had or had not given an erroneous decision in a summons under the Landlord and Tenants Act, and the persons to whom the finding of the justices was adverse appealed to the Full Court, when it turned out that not only had no depositions been taken, but no minute or note had been made showing the nature of the order. The Chief Justice expressed a very strong opinion, in which he was supported by his colleagues, that in cases of summary conviction the magistrates or justices were guilty of a "gross dereliction of duty" in not seeing that the depositions were taken fully and properly. The Bench also intimated that in future, if a prohibition was asked for on the ground of the non-existence or insufficiency of depositions, the offending magistrates would be ordered to pay the costs.

A RATHER novel point was brought under the notice of the Full Court yesterday in regard to the conviction of a man named Lyons, who was recently convicted and sentenced at Inverell for larceny in removing several mares from the custody of the sheriff's bailiff, who had seized them on behalf of an execution creditor for a debt due by Lyons. The prisoner, it appeared, had gone secretly at night, and after removing the animals from the yard in which they were confined he drove them away to a considerable distance. Objection was taken by his counsel at the trial that he could not be convicted; but the Judge directed the jury that if Lyons removed the mares with a dishonest intention and without a claim of right he was guilty of larceny just as if he had no property whatever in them, because he was not justified in depriving the execution creditor, represented by the sheriff's bailiff, of his rights. The jury adopted this view, and the Court yesterday confirmed the conviction.

CONSIDERABLE progress was made with some of the small cases in the calendar of the Central Criminal Court yesterday, and it may be remarked of two of them that they were very small cases indeed. In one the charge involved stealing two pounds of cheese and some other commodities; and in another, a charge of attempting to steal 4s. 9d. was inquired into. The first case, however, reached the Court because a charge of breaking and entering a dwelling was included in it. James Devine was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for uttering a valueless cheque; George Henderson, to two years' imprisonment, for stealing a handbag and contents from the carriage of Mrs. J. Kidman, outside Farmer's, in Pitt-street; Kate Smith pleaded guilty to a charge of theft, and was sentenced to one month's imprisonment; Henry Barnes, for attempting to commit suicide, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, the prisoner putting in a statement disclosing a number of circumstances of a pitiful character. George Jones was acquitted of an attempt to steal 2s. 9d. The trials of August Wells and Ellen Batts, against whom there are capital charges, were deferred to next week. It is understood that on Monday the charges of conspiracy arising out of the Kunstmann case will be investigated.

AT the Water Police Court yesterday, Edmund Henry Taylor, of the firm of Starkey and Taylor, accountants, appeared in custody in answer to a charge of obtaining £1000 from the manager of the National Bank of Australasia by means of a false pretence. Detective Hinds, who arrested accused in Ceylon, gave formal evidence, and the case was remanded till Thursday next. Bail was refused. Hinds and his prisoner only arrived from Melbourne yesterday morning.

OWING to some remarkable seizures which have recently been made, a good deal of attention has been drawn of late to the smuggling traffic in cigars, tobacco, opium, &c., which is constantly going on, and which all the efforts of the Customs officers cannot entirely check. It does not seem, however, that smuggling of this kind is much on the increase, for the number of seizures of contraband goods has varied but little during the past two or three years. In 1887, 73 seizures were confirmed, 65 being from steamers, two from persons on shore, two from sailing vessels, and two on the colonial border. During this year there were seized on board the Chinese steamboats, 1259lb. cigars, 582lb. tobacco, and 59lb. opium. On board the San Francisco boats, 90lb. of cigars and 309lb. tobacco were seized. From the German steamers, 222lb. of cigars and 25lb. of tobacco were taken. The penalties imposed amounted to £86, and the proceeds of the confiscated goods to £828. In 1888 there were 48 seizures, 45 of which were from steamers, two from persons on shore, and one on the colonial border. From the China boats, 340lb. cigars, 138lb. tobacco, and 89lb. opium were removed, and from the San Francisco boats only 3lb. of tobacco. From the German boats 46lb. of cigars and 5lb. of tobacco were taken. The penalties inflicted amounted to £58, and the proceeds of the goods sold to £488. During the six months ending June 30th, 1889, 48 seizures were confirmed, 44 being from steamers, 3 from persons on shore, and one on the border. The penalties inflicted during this period amounted to £246, but the goods seized have not yet been sold.

THE bazaar and sale of fancy work in aid of the Bexley Church fund has since its opening been a financial success. The schoolroom behind Bexley Christ Church has been utilised, and added to which is a large marquee, which is very prettily hung with boughs of evergreens, flannel flowers, flags, and festoons. At the entrance to the marquee is the refreshment stall, presided over by Mrs. Milsop, assisted by the Misses F. Leeder, Buchard, and Cartright. This stall has been well patronised. The next stall is the Multum in Parvo, presided over by Miss Saxby. In the schoolroom, the display of fancy goods is exquisite, the stalls being: Nonpariel, presided over by the Misses F. Clayter, E. Kinsela, and assisted by other young ladies. The stall named Matchless has also been well patronised. The fancy lamps hung at intervals give the stall at night a pretty effect. Doll Stall is presided over by the Misses Preddey and George Clayton; the feature of this stall is a very large slipper worked with pink satin, and filled with dolls for sale. The other stalls are presided over by the Mesdames Tidswell, Preddey, and Chapman, and Miss Cannon, the assistants being the Misses Milsop. The enthusiasm exhibited is great, and the bazaar bids fair to return a sum which will help considerably to work off the existing debt upon the church.

THE Centenary Hall, York-street, was last evening fairly well filled with an attentive audience, the occasion being the annual public meeting in connection with the mission in operation under the nomenclature of "Our Rescue Work." The several branches of this undertaking are the Home of Hope for Friendless and Fallen Women, the Open-all-Night Refuge for Women, and the Discharged Prisoners' Mission. In the report submitted the numbers of men, women, and children who had during the past year received assistance in the form of sleeping accommodation, meals, or clothing, were recorded by the thousand. As to the financial position of the movement at the close of the year, it was stated that the liabilities amounted to £1400. As against this, the value of assets was about £1000, which left a deficiency of £400. A collection taken up in the course of the evening realised £151 12s. 8d. A committee of management for the ensuing year were appointed, and towards the close of the meeting Mr. G. E. Ardill, the director of the movement, was presented with a dressing-case and letter by one of the clergymen on the platform, acting on behalf of some of the former inmates of the Home of Hope.

THE principal object of the New South Wales Railway Tourists' Guide, which has just been issued, is to afford those travelling over the railways of the colony some idea of the character of the country through which they are passing. The limited size of the work, rendered necessary by the low price at which it is sold, with a view to an extensive circulation, has prevented much of the information being so full and comprehensive as would otherwise have been the case, but sufficient has been given to awaken some amount of interest in the localities described. The work is divided into two sections, the price of which is sixpence each. The first section, which has an illustrated wrapper representing some of the beautiful scenery in the National Park, is devoted to the southern, Illawarra, suburban and branch lines, and contains fine maps of the leading coaching routes from the various railway stations in the colony, and of the intercolonial railway routes, a plan of the National Park, and views of the Fitzroy Falls, National Park, Bulli Pass, and Kiama Blow hole. The second division, the cover of which is adorned with a fine engraving of Govett's Leap, is devoted to the western and northern lines and their branches, and contains maps of the railway route across the Blue Mountains, and of the routes to the Jenolan Caves, a plan of the caves and views of Katoomba Falls, Great Zig Zag, Jenolan Caves, Hawkesbury Railway Bridge, and Lake Macquarie. At the end of each division is a list of townships, &c., accessible by coach or otherwise from the various railway stations, showing the distances and modes of conveyance.

AN increase of business has necessitated alterations in the establishment of Messrs. Farmer and Company, of Victoria House. Until recently the office was in the compartment flanking each side the main entrance. This section of the establishment has been removed to the right, in the centre of the building, and its former location is now utilised as a display department for parasols, umbrellas, basketware, and a well-selected assortment of Japanese goods. The former fancy room situated at the rear has been transformed into a dress goods department, and as it is spacious and well lighted, the dress fabrics, large in number and various in shade, are now seen to the best advantage.

MESSRS. HARDY BROS., the well-known jewellery firm of Hunter-street, have made an important enlargement of their spacious showroom. Formerly this room measured 60ft. by about 25ft., and in it numerous show cases contained a large and varied assortment of the most expensive kinds of jewellery. This room has been extended by an additional 40ft., making the whole about 100ft. in length. The entire room is handsomely furnished, excellently lighted, and well mirrored. In the new extension there is on view a magnificent display of presentation and costly silver work. Above this department there is another floor, which is utilised as a workroom, thus affording long needed convenience in the manufacturing department.

YESTERDAY was a gala day for the children attending the Leichhardt Superior Public School. A few weeks ago the headmaster, Mr. A. Smith, B.A., convened a meeting of parents with a view to arranging for an outing to the scholars. The affair was carried to a successful issue yesterday, when upwards of a thousand children assembled at the school, and with bannerettes flying, and headed by a band, paraded the main streets of the district, and finally enjoyed an abundance of amusement in the Leichhardt Park. All manner of games were promoted by the committee, which consisted of parents and teachers, while the inner requirements of the ever-hungry juvenile was plentifully satisfied. Messrs. J. S. Hawthorne and J. Garrard, M.L.A., visited the ground during the day, and took part in the proceedings. There was also a large attendance of adults. In the evening the children were again marshalled, and cheers having been given for the headmaster, the teachers, and the Queen, a return was effected, without any mishap having to be recorded.

YESTERDAY morning, Gertrude Kehoe, residing at the Roman Catholic Convent, Pitt-street, discovered a well-clad male infant lying on the steps of that institution. A card was pinned to the clothing of the infant, which read "In great distress, can't help doing this." The police were communicated with and the child removed to the Benevolent Asylum.

TOUCHING the question of musical examinations, "Acoustic" writes—"Now we have to hand the results of the late Trinity College Musical Examination, which show a marked improvement on every year's examination, why not have yearly examinations at the University, also evening lectures for young musicians who are unable to pay large fees for first-class instruction? There are plenty with the ability, but unable to study for want of sufficient means."

THE following is the order of the musical service at St. Andrew's Cathedral to-morrow:—Morning: Te Deum, Dyke's in F; anthem, "The Lord is great in Zion" (Best). Afternoon: Services, Stainer in B; anthem, "Send out Thy light" (Gounod); Litany, Tallis.

IT will be seen from announcement in another column that the Rev. Dr. Bevan, of Melbourne, will preach in the Centenary Congregational Church, Harris-street, Pyrmont, to-morrow evening.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

At a special meeting of the Port Phillip Stevedore Labourers, which was held to-night, the president alluded to employment of non-union labour in unloading certain vessels up the river, which he termed "town labour." It had increased year by year, and should be stopped at once. The secretary said that a number of vessels were being worked by sailor labour, engines and tackle being supplied by the Victoria Stevedores Company; and resolutions were carried viewing with disfavour the action of the Victoria Stevedores Company in employing town labour on vessels with foreign cargoes, and asking that the men be replaced with association men, and also that the matter be placed before the company with the request that all sailor and town labour be withdrawn by Monday.

THE CRUISE OF THE ALEXANDRINE.

HOISTING THE GERMAN FLAG IN THE SOLOMON GROUP.

PARTICULARS OF A MURDER.

On boarding the German warship Alexandrine yesterday the following particulars of her cruise were gathered:—The Alexandrine left here on July 24 last, and taking a pilot at Treasury Island, arrived at Carola Harbour, in the German protectorate, of the Solomon Group. In this group Malayta, San Christoval, and Guadalcanar are the recognised islands under the British; Ysabel, Choiseul, and Bougainville, the northern part of the group being under the German protectorate. On August 5 the Alexandrine arrived at Carola, and on the 8th left for Matupi, in New Britain, where the manager of the German trading Company was taken on board. After cruising amongst the group and various islands, Nusa, on the coast of New Britain, was touched at on September 4, and it was here learned that two German traders had been murdered. The murder was stated to have occurred at Kapsus, on the New Ireland coast, and the name of one of the victims was said to be Mr. Hoppe. The other name could not be gathered. It was found that the murders were committed by natives in the employ of the victims, and said to have belonged to the Solomon Islands. Having ascertained that the murderers had gone to a village called Laguliman, a boat's party landed there from the Alexandrine. The village was deserted, and as no satisfaction could be obtained the village just named was fired. A German trader, Mr. Bohlsen, was met with, and landed at a place called Lasua, where, with some of his own native employees, he succeeded in capturing one of the alleged murderers. The other had decamped from the village, after being in conflict with one of the kanakas of the place. The Alexandrine proceeded thence to Matupi, arriving September 8, and thence to Finschhaven on September 18. The various harbours on the German New Guinea coast were visited, and the tobacco and cotton plantations were found to be in a very prosperous way. After making another attempt to capture one of the Solomon Island boys charged with the murder of Mr. Hoppe and his comrade, the Alexandrine proceeded to Ong Tong, Java (Howe's Group), situate in 159·10 E. and 5·24 S. Here the German flag was hoisted and the proclamation read by the captain of the warship. A similar ceremony was gone through at Ysabel. The native captured in connection with the murder before referred to, was taken on to Finschhaven to be tried.

A meeting of the Marine Board was held to-day. The Board entirely exonerate Captain Morris and Pilot Binstead, and consider great credit is due to them for the manner in which they acted. The vessel was brought to Keppel Bay and beached there. The object of this large reservation of paid-up shares is to provide in the first instance for the possible demands of the original vendors, who were to receive as part payment for the Raub concession, 250,000 fully paid-up shares in the company, which the syndicate are bound by the terms of their contract to form by October next year. This preliminary company is not the company specified in the agreement, but in case the vendors elect to take their shares in the present company, the necessity of floating another company will be avoided. It was decided to name the company the Raub Australian Syndicate, Limited.

A warrant was issued to-day, at the instance of the British-India and Queensland Agency Company, for the arrest of Ernest Lochlein, lately cashier at the Brisbane office, on a charge of embezzlement. The Assembly adjourned about 4.30 this afternoon, after sitting continuously since Monday afternoon. Stonewalling was continued throughout last night and to-day, and up to the usual hour for the Speaker taking the chair this afternoon there was not the slightest sign of the deadlock being brought to an end. After some unimportant business had been transacted Mr. Groom, one of the leading Opposition members, suggested that a conference between the Ministry and the Opposition be held, the same as took place in 1872, with a view to effecting a compromise. Mr. Macrossan, who was acting as leader of the Government, said that he would be pleased for such a conference to take place, and he moved the adjournment of the House for the purpose of giving members an opportunity for expressing their opinions on the matter. Sir Thomas M'Ilwraith spoke at length on the financial position of the Government, and said that he approved of the conference between the two parties. Sir S. THE MINISTER FOR MINES IN THE NORTH.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN REPORTER.)

TAMWORTH, FRIDAY.

The Minister for Mines (the Hon. Sydney Smith), who is on a visit to the Tamworth district, arrived here by mail train this morning. He was accompanied by Messrs. H. Levien, W. S. Dowel, J. See, and Wyman Brown, Ms.L.A., Messrs. J. H. Reed, J. G. Barron, H. Hudson, S. Gainford, and a number of gentlemen interested in mining matters. Mr. Smith is visiting this district for the purpose of making himself better acquainted with its mineral resources. The Mayor of Tamworth (Mr. C. H. Veness) and aldermen met the Minister at the station and welcomed him to the town, and the party subsequently breakfasted at the Royal Hotel. Afterwards the party were driven round the town. They were greatly pleased with the thriving appearance of the place. Later still, the Mayor of Tamworth and several other gentlemen assembled at the Royal Hotel, where champagne was opened. The Mayor proposed the "Minister's Health." The people of Tamworth had, he said, intended offering a suitable reception to the Minister on Monday afternoon; but as Mr. Smith had to return to Sydney before that date they had thought fit to assemble together to drink his health. He had to apologise for the absence of a number of leading residents of Tamworth who were unable to be present owing to the hurried nature of the proceedings. He wished the Minister a pleasant journey to Nundle.

The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, and "three times three."

Mr. SYDNEY SMITH was received with cheers on rising to respond to the toast. He thanked the Mayor for the kind words he had uttered regarding himself, and the company for the enthusiastic manner in which they had received the toast. This was the first official visit he had paid to Tamworth. He was greatly pleased with what little he had seen of the town and district. The only regret he had was that there was so much good land locked up in the neighbourhood of Tamworth, land which should now give employment to and be used by the people. (Applause.) He also thought more attention should be paid by the people of the district in this magnificent season to the question of preserving the grasses and vegetation now growing so luxuriantly on every hand. (Applause.) In England and other countries, great attention was being paid to the question of ensilage. In 1882 there were only about 12 silos in existence, whereas at the present time, so great had been success of the system, there were more that 2500 silos. (Hear, hear.) This fact alone proved the advantage of the ensilage system. Therefore, he thought it would be a good thing for the people generally to look into this matter, and do what they could to preserve some of the grasses flourishing everywhere. He was not going to speak on political matters, but would content himself by saying that all this country required was good government and honest legislation. (Applause.) He felt sure that if they paid due attention to the natural advantages this country possessed they would have nothing to fear in the future. He hoped his visit would prove advantageous to the mining interest generally. (Applause.)

Mr. J. K. DOYLE proposed "The Parliament of New South Wales."

Mr. JNO. SEE, M.L.A., in responding, said that the Opposition were desirous of assisting the Government in passing what they considered to be useful measures.

Mr. W. T. DOWEL, M.L.A., proposed "The Health of the Mayor of Tamworth," speaking in eulogistic terms of the good service Mr. Veness had rendered to the municipality and district. He was pleased to see that the Minister for Mines showed a desire to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the resources of this great district, which would receive some consideration from him in the important measures he was about to introduce into Parliament.

The toast was received with cheers.

The MAYOR replied in suitable terms.

The Minister and party, escorted by two mounted troopers, left Tamworth in carriages for Nundle at 10 o'clock. The Minister was accompanied by, in addition to the gentlemen already named as forming his party, the Mayor of Tamworth and Mr. L. B. Hyman.

NUNDLE, FRIDAY.

The Minister for Mines and party arrived here this evening after a drive of 40 miles. Half the distance was passed through a heavy thunderstorm accompanied by driving rain. The Minister stopped at Woolomin, where he visited the Public school, a weatherboard hut 18ft. long by 15ft. in width by 9ft. in height, constructed of slabs and roofed with iron, a structure totally unfitted for the purposes of a school building. The average attendance of children is 33. There are no proper conveniences for the scholars, all that has been provided for them being merely a log hut. Several of the visitors characterised the building as a disgrace to the department. Mr. Smith promised to bring the condition of the Public school of Woolomin under the notice of his colleague (Mr. Carruthers). The scholars were granted a half-holiday.

On arriving at the Peel Inn, Nundle, the Minister experienced a cordial reception from a number of the inhabitants, among those who welcomed him to the township being the Hon. P. G. King, Messrs. J. L. King (mining warden), F. Payne, J. Stanning, W. Hanley, and M. Isaacsohn. Mr. Stanning, on behalf of the residents presented the Minister with the following address:—"To the Hon. Sydney Smith, M.L.A., Minister for Mines for the colony of New South Wales. Sir,—We, the residents of Nundle, Bowling Alley Point, and Hanging Rock, who are interested in mining, beg most respectfully to tender to you our hearty welcome on your first visit to this old, but important, field. At the same time we desire to assure you of our warm appreciation of your services in passing through Parliament the Mining Act of 1889, and of your able administration of the department over which you preside. This field has in past years yielded great quantities of gold. We believe its mineral resources are unbounded. By the aid of improved methods of mining and gold-mining appliances we look for a very prosperous future, and trust that ere long we may be honoured with another visit from you. We hope that you will be interested and pleased on the present occasion, and that your presence will be conducive to our best interests." The address, which was beautifully illuminated and enclosed in a silver oak frame, was signed by 11 of the leading residents of Nundle.

Mr. SMITH, in acknowledging receipt of the address, expressed the pleasure it had afforded him to visit the locality. In alluding to the prospects of the Nundle district, he said he knew from past experience it had been a very prosperous one. He might say that from what he had heard he believed there was a great future before it. He thought it was the duty of the Ministers to visit the various centres of population, in order to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the wants of the people, and in order to better understand how to legislate for the general good of the community. (Applause.) He referred to the intention of the Government to bring in a mining bill, which would have the effect of giving greater encouragement to bona-fide miners. It would also have the effect of localising as far as possible and bringing about a more speedy settlement of mining disputes. (Applause.) He had already instructed the engineer for water conservation to visit certain mining centres, with a view to ascertaining how far water could be brought on to some of the mining lands in order to carry on sluicing operations, and he believed if this system were carried out it would have a very beneficial effect, and give employment to a large number of miners, and thus increase the general welfare of the community. They had thanked him for his action in passing the Mining Act of 1889, which opened up to the miners large tracts of country suitable for mining thereon, and thus contributed to the general interest of the mining community. He could tell them that, if this Act had not been passed, a large number of miners would have lost their claims at the end of the present year, notwithstanding the fact that they might have spent much labour and considerable sums of money in endeavouring to develop those claims. This was the first step to mining on private property. The Government intended to go still further, and to bring in a comprehensive measure to deal with this vital question, so that under certain conditions private property would be available for mining purposes. By giving encouragement to mining enterprise, the Government felt that they were not only enhancing the value of their own estate, but further, they were enabling to arrange for a number of deserving persons to settle on the land and make homes for themselves such as he had seen at Nundle and in the mining districts in the different parts of the colony. In conclusion he again thanked them for their kindly feeling towards the Government and himself. (Loud applause.)

The Minister will be present at the official opening of the Mount Sheba hydraulic gold sluicing mine to-morrow.

THE GOULBURN CATHEDRAL DISPUTE.

LITIGATION TO BE RESORTED TO.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

GOULBURN, FRIDAY.

At the anniversary of the congregation worshipping at St. Saviour's Schoolroom, held last night, steps were taken with the object of endeavouring to bring about a definite settlement of the Cathedral difficulty. The Rev. A. T. Puddicombe, incumbent, presided. In his remarks he gave figures showing the progress made by the congregation, and said that in November, 1887, it was decided to use the schoolroom under protest as their parish church, until an opportunity might offer for a better arrangement. He had been happy in their quiet protesting condition, but there had been a growing feeling everywhere that mere passive acceptance of the scandalous schism which still existed was not right. Some determined effort should be made to put an end to it.

Alderman Gannon (Mayor) moved,—"That it is absolutely necessary for the credit and well-being of the Church of England in Goulburn that a determined effort be made to bring about a final settlement of the question which has so long divided the congregation of St. Saviour's, by procuring the decision of the Supreme Court as to which building is the legal successor and representative of the original Church of St. Saviour alluded to in the Crown grants of 1842 and 1843, and by obtaining a constitution for St. Saviour's, the Cathedral Church to be based on such decision, which shall recognise the rights of all parties, and be legalised by Act of Parliament; and that with this object an effort be made to raise £1000 to defray the expenses of such legal and Parliamentary proceedings as may be necessary; or, if the matter can be settled without legal proceedings, or at any less cost than any portion of such sum which may have been raised, or any, the balance thereof to be equally divided between the Cathedral building fund and some parochial object." In moving the resolution Alderman Gannon said he was no partisan in this movement. Opposing parties could join. If the Cathedral party refused to coalesce, or affected to be indifferent to the meeting, or to despise the movement, the other party ought not to be particular; in the choice of weapons with which they must carry on the struggle; they must strike a death-dealing blow to those who could not be convinced by reasonable means.

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Whitlow, sen., and carried unanimously.

Mr. R. Connolly moved,—"That, for the purpose of forming a committee to raise the sum mentioned in the foregoing resolution, and to expend such sum or any portion thereof in the manner mentioned in that resolution, a meeting of all persons interested in the settlement of the cathedral dispute be held on the 15th instant."

This was seconded by Mr. A. Lansdowne, and carried unanimously.

BROKEN HILL, FRIDAY.

Another important feature was disclosed in the Central mine. In the main north drive the third level has for some time past been going partly through country rock and partly through low-grade galena. On Thursday night galena suddenly gave place to high-class oxidised ore carrying native silver, assaying in bulk 137oz. A width of 3ft. is now exposed in the face of the drive, but the true width is quite unknown, as the west side of the drive shows a solid mass of the same class of ore, which may extend to a great breadth. The point where rich ore came in is 385ft. north from the main shaft. The drive is bending to west. This development proves that oxidised ore occurs below sulphide ore, and may be found at any depth. Three winzes are being sunk below the third level all in good ore. The depth of the main shaft is 388ft. Other works are going on.

CARCOAR, FRIDAY.

At Trunna the Mount Maid Gold-mining Company struck a new reef in the 80ft. length tunnel, showing gold freely. In boring No. 1 south struck a reef 35ft., the length of the drive, being driven from the hill. The Handy Andy Sluicing Company's machinery is completed, and they have started working, everything going satisfactorily at the present.

PARKES, FRIDAY.

At Alick's Flat, Ben Morgan and party, north of the prospectors, yesterday obtained 150oz. from 144 loads. Water for washing purposes is exhausted, and it is estimated that from 800 to 900 loads are on the surface ready for washing. The dirt yields from poor to an ounce per load. Things generally are quiet. There is nothing fresh here from Peak Hill. Reports agree that the place is much overdone, and that only a limited number are getting anything payable, though the reefing prospects are looked on favourably. Numbers have already left, and others are coming. As at Alick's Flat, want of water is a source of trouble.

THE ABSCONDING BANK TELLER.

HIS ARREST IN MELBOURNE.

The detective police yesterday received an official notification in confirmation of the information published in yesterday's issue of the Herald that Tregonwell A. W. Thomas, the second teller of the Sydney Branch of the Bank of New Zealand, who disappeared suddenly on Tuesday, had been arrested upon the Konoowarra when that vessel reached Melbourne. He was travelling under an assumed name, but when apprehended admitted he was Thomas. On being searched he was found to possess £700 in notes and gold and a six-chambered loaded revolver. He was arrested upon a provisional warrant for having obtained £7000 from Robert James M'Kenzie, broker, by means of false pretences. Yesterday he was brought before the Williamstown Police Court and remanded for a week, so that an officer from the Sydney police may go to Melbourne.

The warrant which has been issued against the man is for obtaining £7000 from a sharebroker. It is alleged against him that by representing himself to be the custodian of the funds of a syndicate, and by leading Mr. M'Kenzie to believe that moneys amounting to £7000 had been paid to the credit of one W. Thompson, in the Bank of New Zealand, he obtained from him cheques for £883 9s. 7d., £987 10s. 2d., £1323 8s. 6d., £1128 10s. 9d., £1243 5s. 6d., and £1433 15s. 7d. It is understood that these moneys were used by the accused for operations in the share market, as he has been deeply involved in mining speculations. At the bank he was credited with being a smart officer of exemplary conduct, and the discovery of his flight and his defalcations came as a great shock. When he left the bank after lunch on Tuesday, ostensibly for a few minutes only, there was not the least suspicion of anything being wrong, but as he had not returned to his post at half-past 3 o'clock, the accountant instituted some inquiries as to why he had gone out. Learning, however, that Thomas had complained of being ill, he took no further action for another hour. He then notified the manager. Inquiries were immediately made at the missing man's lodgings in Victoria-street. The bank officials then learnt that about 3 o'clock he had driven home in a cab, seized his Gladstone bag, and departed again with the cab in great haste. His cash was then checked, and a deficiency of £13,464 discovered. It was known that the absconder had dealt largely with several mining brokers, and these gentlemen were questioned regarding his transactions. As a result, scrip to the value of £7000 was recovered.

When the fact of Thomas's disappearance was notified to the police, telegrams were forwarded to the police of all the neighbouring colonies describing the man and the nature of the charges made against him. Detective Hoskinson was one of those entrusted with the case, and by his agency the cabman who drove Thomas from his residence was discovered. The cabman informed the detectives that he had driven Thomas to Messrs. Howard Smith and Sons' wharf, and as the steamer Konoowarra had left from that place shortly afterwards, it was considered certain that the fugitive was on board the vessel. A telegram to that effect was sent to Melbourne, with the result already known. Thomas is 27 years old, a single man, and a native of Victoria, where many of his relatives reside. He had been employed in the bank for five years, and he was once connected with the Commercial Bank of Australia in Victoria.

LECTURE.

"Man and his Standing" was the title of a lecture delivered in the Newtown Congregational Church last evening by the Rev. Dr. Bevan, of Melbourne. A large congregation assembled, and the Rev. W. Davies, M.A., provided over the gathering, while supporting him at the rostrum were the Revs. T. E. Owens Mell, R. Dey, and R. T. Hills. The character of Dr. Bevan's deliverance is better expressed in the words of the secondary title—"Boots, Shoes, and Naked Feet." His lecture upon this quaint topic was full of "Crispin lore." Just as few classes of men present more interesting objects of study than the makers of boots, so in the boot shop the contemplative mind of Dr. Bevan found many suggestions and profound lessons of the mysteries of life; and even the boots and shoes themselves furnished him with thoughts to meditate upon. The utterances of the rev. gentleman were both interesting and brimful of humour. Anecdote and story, with word pictures of phases of social life, kept the attention of the audience, and paved the way for many homilies. In fact, the lecture was a homely talk, in which the lessons of boots and shoes, their "fit, durability, elasticity, and polish," were the pegs upon which much good advice and counsel were held up. The morals pointed by "naked feet and dead men's shoes" were not the least forceful. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Dr. Bevan at the close of his lecture.

ARTICLED CLERKS' ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the association was held on Thursday evening last in their meeting-room, corner of Pitt and Park streets, there being a large attendance of members. Mr. George Colquhoun, one of the vice-presidents, took the chair in the unavoidable absence of Mr. B. R. Wise, also a vice-president. In pursuance of a motion passed at the previous meeting the acting-secretary reported on behalf of the committee that it was practicable that a course of law lectures for the final and intermediate examination be held under the auspices of the association, and that Mr. W. P. Cullen, LL.D., barrister-at-law, had undertaken to deliver the same if the committee could make the necessary arrangements. The subject for the evening was a lecture by Mr. A. G. Ralston, barrister-at-law, on "Divorce Law and Practice," which proved most instructive, and was highly appreciated. At the close of the lecture Mr. Howarth moved, and Mr. R. R. Garran seconded, that a hearty vote of thanks be accorded the lecturer, who in acknowledging the same stated that he hoped to continue his lecture on the 28th of November. The remainder of the evening was devoted to impromptu speeches, Messrs. Stinson, Russell, Bloomfield, Ash, Howarth, Garran, Abigail, Robertson, Stirton, Gee, Garling, P. B. Colquhoun, and Dobbin being the speakers. An address was delivered by Mr. George Colquhoun on "The elevating influence of Music and Poetry." It was announced that the mock trial was definitely fixed for Thursday, December 5. Mr. Dobbin was nominated leader of the Opposition. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman, moved by Mr. H. A. Russell, seconded by Mr. J. W. Abigail, and carried by acclamation, brought the meeting to a close.

Some of the latest Indian journals give the following as the imprint now in use in books printed in Cabul:—"Praise and gratitude are due to God that in this auspicious moment, by the gentle and odoriferous spring breezes and the Pearl of the Ocean of Grandeur and Good Fortune—namely, Amir-ibn-al-Amir, Ibn-al-Amir, Amir Abdur Rahman Khan, Bahadur (may his prosperity and kingdom be permanent)—this book, which is unanswerable, designated — —, has been approved for the guidance of the Mohtasibs of the God-granted kingdom of Afghanistan; and it was printed by Abdur Reazak Beg, of Delhi, at the Cabul Printing Press, on the 7th of Shawal, 1336 A.H."

THE AUSTRALASIAN.

Messrs. Dalgety and Co., Limited, have received a cablegram advising that the steamship Australasian left Aden, homewards, on the 31st October. She has on board 13,000 bales wool for the sales, and is making a fast voyage. She left Adelaide on the night of the 8th ultimo, and was only 22½ days out when leaving Aden.

THE ARCADIA.

Early yesterday morning the P. O. Company's steamer Arcadia, Captain W. B. Andrews, made the port and was berthed at the Company's wharf. The vessel is to be turned round and leave on the 11th instant for London, so that all arrangements were made for rapid despatch by the agents here. Particulars of the steamer's arrival at Adelaide and her fast steaming have appeared in these columns, so that the following particulars will be a sufficient account of her admirable performance on the voyage. The Arcadia was loaded at Southampton, and left that port for Australia at 5 p.m. on the 21st September; was off Start Point at midnight of the same day, and arrived at Gibraltar at 4.30 p.m. on the 24th, doing the distance in 64 hours, the fastest on record, her average speed being 16 knots per hour. Leaving Gibraltar the same evening, she was at Malta on the 27th instant, having met with moderate winds and fine weather throughout since leaving the Channel. After taking in a large supply of coal, she left Malta the following day, and reached Brindisi on the 29th, where she awaited the arrival of the overland mails. The Indian mails were received on board at 2 a.m. on Monday, and at the same time information was received that, through some mistake, the Australian portion of the mails had been despatched to Naples, and would not, therefore reach the ship until the following day, consequently the ship was obliged to remain until 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning, the 1st October, when the mails arrived. The steamer left for Port Said, having been delayed 30 hours over her time. From Brindisi to Port Said strong head winds were encountered for the first part with light airs and fine weather for the second, the latter port being reached late on the night of the 3rd and after coaling, the ship entered the Canal shortly after midnight of the same day, and made a good passage through, leaving Suez for Aden on the following evening at 10.30. The passage down the Red Sea was marked by moderate winds and fine weather, the ship arriving at Aden on Friday morning, the 8th instant, at 9 o'clock. After transferring the Indian portion of her mails to the Company's steamer Siam for Bombay, and those for Queensland to the B.I.S.S. Aramac, for Brisbane, the Arcadia left at 5 p.m. for Colombo, where she arrived at daybreak on Monday, the 14th instant having experienced moderate winds and fine weather in the run across the Indian Ocean. The mails for China were here transferred to the Company's steamer Coromandel, and after taking in coal and water and a large amount of cargo for Australian ports, a departure was made at 1 a.m. on Tuesday, the 15th. Light winds accompanied by much rain were met with to the line. Thence to the Leuwin moderate head winds and fine weather. Albany was reached at 6 a.m. on Tuesday, the 24th, and left again at 2 p.m. same day. Between Albany and Adelaide a fresh gale was met with from the S.W., accompanied by a high sea, but the ship behaved admirably. Cape Borda was passed at 1.40 a.m. on Sunday, 27th. Although, since leaving Aden, the Arcadia has, so to speak, not been driven, she has nevertheless made very good running throughout, and but for the detention at Brindisi would probably have landed the mails at Adelaide on the Friday afternoon. Her best runs during the voyage were 411, 398, 394, 383, 381, 380, 379, 378, 374, 373, &c. During the voyage the athletic sports proved a great success, as did also an entertainment given by the ship's company under the management of the chief officer. After discharging mails and cargo the Arcadia left at 5.10 p.m., passed Cape Otway at 7.30 p.m. 29th, entered the Heads at 1 a.m. on 30th, and anchored at Williamstown at 5 a.m.; fine weather with heavy swell. The ship continued her voyage at 1.15 p.m. on the 30th, clearing Port Phillip Heads at 4.15 p.m.; passed Gabo Island at 1 a.m. October 31, and entered the Heads at 5.30 a.m. on November 1; hazy with light winds and smooth sea.

THE THERMOPYLÆ.

One of the best-known ships in the Aberdeen White Star line—the Thermopylæ—made the port yesterday, and Captain Jenkyns reports:—Left the East India Docks on August 6, and brought up in the Downs same day, blowing hard from the westward. Thursday, the 8th got under way, and proceeded down Channel, strong W. and S.W. winds all the way. Landed pilot off Dartmouth on the 10th, at 5 p.m. Had light winds from Channel to 26° N., from there to 13° N. fresh trades, and well northerly. From 13° N. to 1° N. moderate and fresh S.W. monsoons. Got the S.E. trades in 1° N., and crossed the Equator in 27° W. S.E. trades moderate, and well easterly, sighting the Island of Trinidad. Lost the S.E. trades in 18° south, and from there to the Cape, passed in 42° S. on 30th September, light and variable winds. Made easting in 42° S., and experienced the usual north and south winds up to Cape Leuwin, 19th October, 41° S., which was passed on the 65th day out. From Cape Leuwin to Cape Otway, which was passed on October 27, at 11 a.m., light easterly weather, and overcast. Strong S.W. gale from Otway to Wilson's Promontory, 28th October, 3 a.m. Light and decreasing breeze from Promontory to Howe, Tuesday, 29th, 5 p.m. Light airs and heavy rain up to Montague Island, N.E. wind for four hours, and showery. Passed Jervis Bay at 11 a.m. on Thursday last, and southerly to arrival.

RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The railway authorities appear to be making a large bid for popularity just now. But if they really want to command the confidence of their customers they will have to improve their suburban time-table. Much has been written this week about a rapid run that was made from Tenterfield to Sydney on Saturday last, one of the stages—Singleton to Newcastle (49 miles)—having been got over in 72 minutes. Very good this, I dare say, for those who enjoyed the luxury, but I know that on the same day it took me and some others six minutes longer than that to get from Hunter-street to the Croydon station, a distance of 7 miles! We were at the Hunter-street waiting-room three minutes before the 7.45 tram was timed to leave Bridge-street, and we got by that tram to the Redfern station just two minutes too late for the train we wanted to catch (8.5 p.m.), and then we had to wait half-an-hour, all but two minutes, before we got another. But, having done the first mile of our journey in 48 minutes, including stoppages, we did the other six miles in a little over the appointed time—26 minutes. So you see, sir, it took us 78 minutes to do seven miles, which contrasts somewhat unfavourably with the 49 miles in 72 minutes above referred to. But the holidays are again coming on. How are they going to treat us during these? They made a few extra pounds by charging the ordinary instead of "holiday excursion fares." People, with what they supposed to be the proper change in hand, made their way with difficulty to the ticket office, and then, in the midst of a terrific crush, had to fumble in their pockets for the extra amount demanded of them; and some of them afterwards found, to their cost, that others besides the ticket-sellers had been making free with their purses. Now, sir, it seems to me to be utterly unworthy of a great Government department to lend itself to a "catch" of this sort. Let them charge "holiday excursion fares" on all proclaimed holidays, or give some indication in their books of the exceptions.

As to the suburban time-table, that, it seems to me, is about as unsatisfactory as anybody could wish it to be. Two trains an hour, running at the rate of 14 miles an hour. Surely, sir, if Strathfield requires them trains an hour, the nearer suburbs have a right to four, instead of two, as at present. How easily this could be done. How many people would be benefited by such an arrangement. How much time would be saved on every journey if trains were run, say, every 15 minutes, one stopping at Eveleigh, Newtown, Petersham, Summer Hill, Croydon, and Strathfield; the next at Macdonaldtown, Stanmore, Lewisham, Ashfield, Burwood, and Homebush. We have a right to look for something of this sort, and I hope it will not be very long before we secure our rights.

I am, &c.,
WM. PRATT.

At a special meeting of the Mercantile Bank of Sydney, held to-day, it was resolved that the capital of the bank be increased by £200,000, by the issue of 66,666 new shares of £3 each, 60,000 of which are to be immediately offered to the shareholders now on the register at a premium of 10s., the amount of the premium to be carried to the reserve fund. The amounts of the shares will be payable in three instalments,—the first of 30s., being 20s. for capital and 10s. for premium, payable on the 30th November next; the second of £1 on 30th June, 1890; and the third of £1 on the 31st December, 1890. A counter proposition to issue the shares at par was negatived.

Our London commercial cablegram shows an increase in the Bank of England reserve from £11,700,000 to £12,078,000, the ratio of reserves to liabilities having risen from 36½ to 40¾ per cent. New South Wales 4 per cents. are 10s. lower, and Victorian 4's are down 5s. Queensland 4's, 20s. cheaper, and Queensland 3½'s, 5s. lower. West Australian 4 per cents. have fallen 10s. Chili copper has advanced 30s., being quoted at £44 10s. Tin has gone up 70s., Australian being quoted at £96 15s. Pig iron has risen from 55s. 9d. to 59s., the market being active.

In the Import markets to-day business was moderately active, the first of the month orders having come in to give a stimulus to trade. The month opens with the money market still stringent, and two or three small traders have had to arrange with their creditors. Flour in steady request, the market being firm. Quotations—South Australian and Victorian, £12 10s. to £13 5s.; New South Wales, £12 5s. to £12 10s.; stone makes, £11 10s. to £11 15s.; New Zealand, £9 5s. to £10 15s. South Australian wheat, 5s. 3d., scarce; Californian, 4s. 8d.; and New Zealand, 3s. 8d. to 4s. There is a moderate demand for tea, the market generally being firm for all qualities. Indian and Ceylon teas have been selling more freely. Coffee is moving off at 12½d. for No. 1 Ceylon Plantation. Barry's chicory, 2½d. Epps' cocoa, 1s. 5½d.; Fry's on the spot and to arrive, from 1s. 4d. Condensed milk, 6s. 6d. to 7s., according to brands. The sugar market is without change. Good colonial whites, £25; grainy yellows, £23 10s. to £24; soft yellows, £22; browns from £19. The quantities moving off are small, duty only having been paid on 226 tons during the week. From the Northern rivers the quantity received amounted to 3692 bags and 1369 mats. Bonded stocks to-day amounted to 5525 tons, against 4242 tons last week. Our London cable news reports an advance of 3d. in German beet, the quotation being 11s. 6d. Wednesday's Brisbane Courier thus refers to the condition and prospects of the market:—

"Sugar in the local market, though weakening in price, is yet above what may be deemed the export level. The planters who held any stock over and obtained the benefit of the big rise a few months since were unfortunately few, speculators having secured the best of the market; but a good many have been able to get the new sugars in early, and for a fair proportion of their crop have obtained really good paying prices. As the season advanced, however, and stocks came forward, prices receded to about £23 for best whites, at which figure they remained for some time, the deliveries having been checked by the suspension of work at some of the mills. This suspension of work was owing to the low density in the cane, the late rains having kept anything like a fair growth back until the usual crushing time was well advanced. The market was also aided by a good demand in the Southern capitals and the lateness of the Mauritius crop. During the past week the mills have resumed work, and crushing everywhere is in full swing. Deliveries are now above requirements, and as the local price is up to the present better than that in Melbourne or Sydney, planters' stocks have been allowed to accumulate. The position indicates lower prices here, not necessarily as low as in recent years, for the Southern demand increases, as also does local consumption, and the production is less; but we must come to the export level. The position may be explained from a careful statistical approximation. The yield for the year is estimated thus:—Maryborough, 2000 tons; Bundaberg, 9000; Rockhampton, 200; Mackay, 12,500; Burdekin, 3000; Ingham, 5300; Geraldton, 6000; miscellaneous, 500: Total, 38,100 ton. The export, based upon that of previous years, may be stated at 14,000 tons, and some 6000 tons will be dark sugar. So that the quantity available within the colony will be, say, 18,000 tons. The home consumption equals about 17,000 tons per annum, and as the next year's crop will be in early in June, only nine months' supply need be provided for. This will take, say, 12,750 tons, and there will be a surplus left in hand of, say, 4250 tons. We have calculated the production upon a basis favourable to present holders of sugar, and it will possibly be found that we are quite 1000 tons under the mark. Unless the European and American markets improve, of which there is no present prospect, and foreign shipments are diverted from Australia, there is no probability of an advance. Locally, therefore, present rates can scarcely be expected to hold, and distributors, as well as speculators, seem to be aware of it, for the latter are not operating at all, and the former are booking only sufficient to meet requirements. At present the principal sugar sales are of qualities worth from £19 to £20, but first whites may be had at £22."

In dried fruits we note sales of currants, fine old fruit, at 4½d.; new, 5d. to 5½d.; elemes, new 6d., old 5½d. to 5¾d.; sultanas, new, 5½d. for prime old, and 6½d. for new; new figs from 6s. 8d. to 6s. 9d., according to sample and weight. Bonded stock of dried fruits amount to 1,841,885lb., a reduction of 38,871lb. on the week. Coarse salt, from 80s.; fine, from 95s.; rock, from 80s. Rice is firm at £18 for fine table and £13 to £13 10s. for the lower grades, £12 10s. being accepted for forward delivery. Bonded stocks are 585 tons, against 647 tons last week. Sago, 3½d.; pepper, 8d. for black and 1s. 1d. for white. Champion's vinegar, in bulk and case, noticed at agents' quotations. Pickle and salad oils are unaltered on the week. Candles are moving off rather more freely at 5½d. to 5¾d.; colonial Sunbeams, 5½d. There is not much movement in hops or malt. Tasmanian hops, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3d.; English, from 1s. 6d. Malt is selling at from 6s. 6d. to 6s. 9d. Liquids in moderate request, though little beyond business of a trade-order character came under notice. Hennessy's brandy, 35s. to 48s. 6d., single star and three star respectively. A parcel of Bisquit Dubouche was placed at agents' prices. The advance in price of rum seems to have checked business; Lowndes' may be quoted from 3s. 10½d. to 4s.; Twiss and Browning's noticed at current rates. The demand for geneva is trifling; 12s. 3d. is the quotation. Burnett's Old Tom, 11s. 9d. Some little business was done in Usher's whisky. In metals, there has been rather more inquiry for fencing wire; £11 10s. and £12 5s. for Nos. 8 and 10 respectively are firm quotations. Pig iron is more firmly held, owing to the advance in the home rates. The rise in asking quotations of galvanised iron has checked business; £22 to £23 are still current rates; 19s. required for I. C. Coke tinplates. Muntz metal is firm at 7½d, the market being still bare. In drugs there is nothing of importance to note, though on the whole there is a slight improvement in the volume of business. Blasting-powder of leading brands held for 6d. A good trade continues to be done in dynamite at convention prices. Kerosene oil is quoted from 10½d. for low test; from 12½d. for high. Bonded stocks are further reduced, now standing at 45,459 cases, against 48,074 cases last week. Castor oil is firm at 3s. 11d. to 4s. China is dearer, and selling at from 4s. to 4s. 1d. In jute goods woolpacks are nominally quoted at 1s. 10d., there being scarcely any demand; cornsacks to land ex Victory sold at 5s. 7½d.; bran bags, 4s. 10½d. to 5s. In lumber we note some large sales to the trade at late quotations. An entire shipment of redwood ex Alexander Mackennal has been sold to arrive on private terms: 18s. 6d. to 19s. is the current range of prices. Baltic is steady at late rates. A shipment of Scotch-dressed Baltic ex Firth of Clyde has been purchased to arrive. Cement is selling from 16s., according to parcel.

A conference has been held between representatives of the wool-buyers and the wool-sellers, and as the result of it we are glad to say there is a good prospect of an immediate settlement of the dispute between them. In consequence of several of the wool-buyers being away in Melbourne for the Cup meeting, the associated wool-selling brokers have decided upon holding no sales of wool during the next week.

At the wool sales to-day business was brisk. A considerable quantity of wool was sold at full prices, according to the following reports, which have been supplied:—

Goldsbrough, Mort, and Co., Limited, to-day offered at their second sale this week, and sixth auction since the commencement of the season, 609 bales of wool. The attendance was good, and competition brisk, previous rates being fully maintained. Five hundred and sixty bales were sold under the hammer, and 97 privately—total, 657. Greasy, of which the catalogue was almost entirely composed, realised from 7½d for inferior, to 10½d for good; 11d being obtained privately for 43 bales W&E of the well and favourably known RR conjoined over bar clip, from the Young district. As showing the range of values, the following may be mentioned:—Greasy, F over Alvany, from Gunbar, 17 bales; H&E, deep grown, light, and generally attractive, lot at 10½d; H—C, from Monteagle, Young, 58 bales fine, sound, good combing wool at 10½d; IC over Dunmore, from near Jerilderie, 18 bales HW&E, sound, free, and well-grown at 10¾d; GP over Cooba, from Cooba Creek, 8 bales H&F, light, sound, and grown, slightly burry in the skirts, at 10½d; C&O over D, from Cootamundra, 5 bales sound, free, but irregular in growth, at 10d; JK over Wallandool, 7 bales at 9½d; M, washed fleece, CNC over Barraba, brought 13½d; the other lots selling at proportionately satisfactory prices.

Messrs. J. H. Geddes and Co. report that they submitted an attractive catalogue to a representative attendance of buyers to-day, and the keen competition evinced stamped the sale as the most successful held by us this season. The offerings of the greasy wools embraced some fine bright sound wools, which, however, being somewhat skirty and uneven, failed to attract the attention due to their quality, and although realising light rates, did not command any extreme prices. The RL over NSW, however, was an exception, and no better classed or more creditably got up clip was placed upon the market; the yolky condition, however, slightly militated against price, which is quoted at 10¾d. The Curraburrama wool, 200 bales, from the Southern district, light, bright but uneven and somewhat skirty, realised up to 10d per lb.; and 15 bales WC over H over Oakwood, a bright fine shafty wool, reached 10½d, while 300 bales of representative samples sold from 9d to 9½d. No exceptional lines of scoured or washed wools were offered, the best being AE over star in block, a bright sample, but rather burry, 19d, while washed wool and medium scoured ranged from 13½d to 17¾d. The principal lots sold were:—Coorabarrama, 142 bales at 9½d to 10d; WC over H over Oakwood, 15 at 10½d; RL over NSW, 9 at 10¾d; BY over Wongo, 5 at 9d; WE, 5 at 8½d; AR, 11 at 8½d; D in diamond, 47 at 8½d to 9d; HQ over half-circle, 5 at 9½d; H Ashcroft over A over half-circle, 14 at 9d; C, 6 at 8½d; Bell in block, 12 at 9½d; JE, 5 at 9d; WW over Moreton Bay, 6 at 8d; JP in block, 90 at 5d to 9½d; H in circle, 8 at 8d; JC, 9 at 7½d; JE over B, 7 at 8½d; THM over Mudgee, 18 at 9½d; WD over Mut, 16 at 9½d; CN, 9 at 8½d; CC over MF, 11 at 9d; Myanblar, 40 at 7½d to 9½d. Messrs. Jno. Bridge and Co. report:—We held our fourth sale to-day, submitting a catalogue of 1750 bales, which attracted the fullest degree of attention from the usual buyers, who assembled in full numbers, and judging from prices realised—in many instances ⅛d to ¼ per lb. over owners' limits—the market may be considered to be at its best. Greasy merino reached 10½d, at which figure the well-known JH (conjoined) C clip, 73 bales, from Killanea, near Burrowa, was placed; the Crown over Rudd clip, from Urana, 181 bales, was sold at 10½d; the AN clip, from Hay, 10 bales at 10½d; scoured reached 19d for the GWD clip, from Gundagai. PRODUCE MARKET.—FRIDAY.

This morning a moderate supply of forage, consisting of 23 trucks, together with ample consignments of wood, were submitted at the Darling Harbour railway terminus. The auctions, especially the forage sales, were thinly attended by the trade. Respecting forage, the demand was very slack for all descriptions and there was no improvement in prices. As regards wood the inquiry was also weak. At the wharfs fair shipments were received from the various Northern rivers, Southern ports, and Victoria. Trade was restricted to lines for the day's requirements. Potato market remains unsettled. Good sound maize rather scarce. Onions very quiet. Poultry was in better supply. At Darling Harbour sales the following figures were obtained:—

Wood.—Fairly large market. Business was again on a limited scale. Billet, 7s to 10s per ton; bundle, 8s to 12s 6d; foot, 7s 6d to 12s; bakers', 8s to 11s.

Hay.—Twelve trucks were forward, principally of medium kinds. Sales were characterised by dulness at low prices. Oaten, in bundles, 3s to 3s 5d per cwt.; good coloured new wheaten, in bundles, 3s 6d to 4s; other kinds, 2s 10d; bales, 3s 7d; oaten and wheaten, in bundles, 4s.

Straw.—Three trucks of clean wheaten, in bundles, received, which realised 2s per cwt.

At an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Big Oakey Gold-mining Company held at No. 300, George-street, yesterday, the resolution unanimously passed on the 17th October,—"That the company be wound up voluntarily, and that Joseph Page be, and he is hereby appointed liquidator to wind up the same, with power and authority to sell all the property, assets, and goodwill of the company to a new company to be formed and registered under the name of 'The Big Oakey Gold-mining Company, Limited,' in the terms set out in an agreement in the form of a draft already prepared and submitted to the meeting, and which draft is marked 'A' and identified by the endorsement of the names of Harold Maclean and Whittingdale Johnson, two of the directors, and to carry the same into effect, and also to consent to the registration of such company under the name of The Big Oakey Gold-mining Company, Limited," was confirmed.

The hon. secretary Sydney Stock Exchange received the following telegram from the British Broken Hill Silver-mining Company, Port Pirie, South Australia, yesterday:—"643 tons smelted 94 tons bullion, containing 11,212oz."

In the article on "Mining in New England," in yesterday's issue, a printer's error occurred, which completely altered the sense of the conclusion arrived at by the writer. The report reads: "Much depends on management; but I do not think that even with ordinary skill Webb's mine will show good results." The word "not" should be omitted; the correct sentence being, "I do think that, even with ordinary skill, Webb's mine will show good results."

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

Broken Hill South Silver Mine, October 26.—No. 1 shaft, 200ft. level: Here the north drive has been extended a further distance of 27ft. The winze from the 200 to the 270 ft. level has been cut down 8ft. No. 1 trial shaft, 170ft. level: The south drive has been driven 5ft. The crosscut west at No. 3 winze has been driven 5ft. At the 230ft. level the north drive has been driven 16ft., and the south drive 3ft. Throughout the above workings the ground has been of a similar character to that previously reported on. Engine shaft: As intimated by wire, a tender at £5 18s per foot has been accepted for the further sinking of this shaft. Preparatory to sinking, the old timber at the bottom of the shaft has been taken out and new timber put in, and the pumps taken off to the back of the plat. The contractors started work on Sunday night. At the 250ft. level two men have been employed driving on the east side, preparatory to putting up a rise. No. 6 block: The crosscut east at the 150ft. level has been driven 6ft. for the week, being now in a distance of 25ft., the ground being hard. All other surface work is proceeding as usual. During the week 27 tons 15cwt. ore were despatched to the Dry Creek Smelting Works.

Broken Hill South Block 5 Mine, October 26.—No. 1 shaft is now down 164ft., 5ft. having been sunk during the week. The ground continues very favourable for sinking. The influx of water is, however, rather greater. No. 2 shaft has been sunk 6ft. for the week and is now down to a depth of 170ft., the ground continuing without any change. The engine and boiler houses are now well on towards completion.

Central Broken Hill Silver-mining Company, Limited, by wire, November 1.—Improvement in face of north drive, 300ft. level. The ore struck is entirely oxidised, consisting of carbonate of lead and kaolin; can tell better in a day or so. Later.—Carbonate ore struck in drive north 300 level; ore is over 25oz. silver per ton bulk sample. Native silver and kaolin containing chlorides in quantity on west side about 35oz. silver per ton bulk sample.

Thames Mining and Prospecting Company (otherwise known as Crawford's Special Claim), Thames, New Zealand, October 31.—(By Cablegram)—"Great progress being made with the 'Rise.' Mr. Moore, mining manager of the Maritoto mine, has visited the property, and reports that the ground is situated on the 'run of golden country' between the Moanataiao and Karaka creeks, the spurs on each side of which have produced the bulk of the gold obtained on the field. His impression is that the reefs running through this ground, although comparatively poor on the surface, will be found to contain rich deposits as depth is attained upon them, in furtherance of which opinion he would instance the City of London and Queen of Beauty claims, which are situated close to the boundary, and the reefs of which must run through the ground. He considers that this area is one of the best and most legitimate that has been worked on this field for years, and that it will ultimately repay many times over the capital required for development. The works at present under way are the best that could be devised for opening up the ground."

Adeline G.M. Company, Fairfield, Limited, October 30.—Lode in bottom level is improving in quality. Assays last week, 2oz. per ton. Have not been able to do much this week. Tributors have about 50 tons ready to crush.

Upon reaching the junction of the new line, the train proceeded very cautiously, whilst Mr. Halliday, who was stationed on the front of the engine, made a careful inspection of the line. The distance from the junction to the pit is 2½ miles, and the line (which is the work of Messrs. Johnson and Billings) appears to have presented few engineering difficulties, for with the exception of the bridge over Cockle Creek and a few small culverts, the track is as level and unbroken as a tramline. The party having arrived safely at the terminus, at once proceeded on a tour of inspection. Those who had not visited the spot during the past 12 months expressed their surprise at the remarkable changes which energy and enterprise had worked in the scene before them. Certainly the enterprising promoters of the new company have wasted no time since they commenced to sink the shaft nearly two years ago. What was then a wilderness of blue gum and stringy bark is now a busy scene of commercial industry. Buildings have sprung up around the pit like magic, and many more are in course of erection. There are two hotels close to the pit, The Miners' Arms, kept by Mr. Thomas, and The Young Wallsend Colliery Hotel, owned by Mr. Turnbull, which with a few general stores, a butcher's shop, and a substantial looking residence occupied by the company's manager (Mr. A. Fairley), form quite a thriving looking township. The property is in the very centre of the coal country, being surrounded by the West Wallsend, Minmi, Wallsend, Central Wallsend, Newcastle Wallsend, and Black's properties. No expense has been spared to make the plant one of the best in the district, the machinery is perfectly new, and all the latest inventions have been introduced.

The new main winding engine, by Wilkinson, of Wigan, is of 80-horse power, with a 4ft. stroke, and a pair of 26in. cylinders. The three boilers are of steel, 36ft. x 5ft. 6in., and were made by Messrs. Morison and Bearby. The sinking engine at present in use, and which has done all the work on the main shaft, will be shifted to the site fixed upon for the air-shaft, which, according to the Mining Act, must be sunk within 18 months from the time of starting work in the mine. All the bricks used in the shaft and in the building of houses on the estate were made in the works close to the pit, where are at present 30,000 in the kiln. There are blacksmiths' and carpenters' shops on the ground; all the work that could possibly be managed in them was done on the spot. The engine-house, when finished, will be a fine brick building, 41ft. x 33ft. The cages, skips, kick-ups, &c., are all completed, and so far as can be judged, the engine-house and the brickwork around the boilers are the only jobs to be finished before starting work below. By courtesy of Mr. Fairley, one of the pleasantest officials we have come in contact with, we were allowed to inspect the work done below. Stepping into the bucket, we soon found ourselves at the bottom of the shaft, 330ft. below the surface. The main pit bottom is driven 33 yards on either side, north and south, and is 7ft. 6in. high, and 5 yards wide for the three roads on the bottom. Going up to the north end we found that headings 7ft. x 7ft. had been driven in a distance of 20 yards east and west. At the south end the headings were the same size, and driven the same distance. The pit bottom is all secured with 12 x 12 timber, and 4ft. centres in the main bottom. The sumph is 15ft. deep for standage for water. The main pit bottom is ready to receive the cages when put in, as well as the slides in the shaft. Standards have been driven 250ft. up the shaft to catch all surface water; but when the pump is set there will be little or no water in the bottom. All the work has been done under the supervision of Mr. Fairley, and the result is certainly creditable. The lower seam of coal, upon which it is intended to start work, is 6ft. 2in., and as the shaft is sunk right on the dip of the coal, very little haulage will be required for some time to come. The top seam, which had been driven 20 yards each way for the purpose of proving it, is 10ft., with 6ft. 6in. of workable coal, of a quality that will compare favourably with any in the district. The pit is ready to receive 36 men, and it is hoped that work will be started on the coal early next year. About 30 men and boys are already employed about the works, and Young Wallsend has every appearance of soon being in a position to make considerable additions to the present staff.

After everything that was to be seen had been duly inspected, the company adjourned to the manager's office, which had been converted into a temporary refreshment room. Champagne having been opened, a little speech-making was indulged in.

Mr. Alex. Brown, M.L.A., rising to propose success to the Young Wallsend Company, spoke at some length upon the combination formed by the older collieries, and the futility of a young company attempting to lower the price of coal in order to attract business. He believed the cessation in the coal trade was only temporary. It frequently happened that better opportunities offered abroad for the placing of vessels, and when that occurred they would not come to Newcastle for coal freights. He advised the new company not to trespass too far on the forbearance of older companies, and pointed out that it would not be wise for them to provoke the associated collieries by reducing the price of coal below 11s., which just left a margin of profit for the proprietors and investors. He thought that the promoters of the new company could not have sunk less than thirty or forty thousand pounds in the enterprise, and he wished them every success. He had much pleasure in drinking to the Young Wallsend Company, coupled with the name of Mr. J. C. Bonarius, a man of great enterprise and ability, whose career as a citizen was one that every young man may well aspire to.

Mr. J. C. Bonarius, in responding, said that when he started that morning he thought he was coming out in a very quiet way to see what work had been done at the mine, and certainly had no intention of being called upon to say a word. However, being called upon, he would remind them that there was a time when it was supposed that all the coal in the district was enclosed within the A. A. Co.'s fence, and anyone who had the temerity to look for coal outside that fence was liable to prosecution. As a matter of fact, one person was prosecuted for that crime. However, things had changed, and he was happy to say that the Young Wallsend Company had now as good a coal as any in the district, 12 miles from the A. A. Company's fence. A lot of hard work had been gone through since they started sinking the shaft on the 17th December, 1887. At 514ft. they had passed five seams of coal. They had their bords ready for 30 to 40 men, and all this had been done in less than two years. The directors had spent no idle time, and had worked manfully. The balance-sheet showed that less than £34,000 had been expended. They had purchased the freehold as well as the mineral, and hoped that the surface would pay large dividends to the shareholders. They had sold only 11 acres out of the 840 they possessed, and the profits on those 11 acres had paid one 5 per cent. and two 10 per cent. dividends to the shareholders. The land they had bought for £15 per acre they had sold for £200 per acre, and the sale of the balance of the land must pay large dividends. He had had 30 years' experience of the coal trade, and could remember when it was sold at 7s 6d and 8s per ton. (A Voice: And 5s 6d.) When that was the case everyone was poor. No money could be earned, for the coal was given away. In 1874, when the first move was made to raise the price to 14s, more coal was sold at that price than was sold before, and the district began to prosper. It was only when there was a fair margin for profit, that the district prospered, and it would be the company's aim to keep the price of coal up, to sell at the same price as the older companies. He thought they had as good a future before them as any company in the district. They had come out to see the line, and had arrived without any broken limbs or bandaged heads, thanks to Messrs. Robinson and Halligan. He thanked the company for the kind manner in which they had drunk his health. (Loud applause.)

Captain Cross having been called upon to propose the health of the visitors, said he was a visitor himself, and the chairman (Mr. Alex. Brown) had made a mistake. However, he begged to state that in his opinion the Young Wallsend mine was "a plum," and that the appearance of the empty bottles testified to the visitors having enjoyed themselves.

The Rev. S. C. J. Grimes responded on behalf of the visitors.

Mr. W. B. Anderson proposed "The Health of the Colliery Officials," which was responded to by Mr. Archibald Finley.

Mr. Brooks proposed "The Railway Officials," which was responded to by Messrs. Robinson and Halligan.

The last toast, "The Press," was proposed by Mr. Baker, and responded to by Messrs. Davidson and Leitch (Herald) and Mr. H. H. Clark (Daily Express).

The party then returned to town, well satisfied with the trip.—[ADVT.]

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1.

In Banco.—(Before their Honors the CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice WINDEYER, and Mr. Justice FOSTER.)

THE QUEEN V. LYONS.

Mr. Harris, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared for the Crown in support of the conviction. There was no appearance on behalf of the prisoner. The point submitted was contained in the following case, stated by the presiding Judge. The prisoner Bartholomew Lyons was tried before Judge Murray, Chairman of Quarter Sessions, at Inverell, on the 9th September last, on an indictment charging him with stealing mares, the property of Charles Egan. The mares in question had been the prisoner's property, but were at the time when he was charged with stealing them in the lawful custody of Charles Egan, as District Court bailiff, having been seized by virtue of an execution against the prisoner's goods. Before evidence was called Mr. Foster, who appeared for Lyons, contended that larceny could not be committed by a judgment debtor of his goods in the custody of the sheriff or bailiff under an execution. His Honor held that the taking of his goods out of such custody by the judgment debtor in such manner as would constitute larceny if the goods were another's was larceny, and he afterwards directed the jury accordingly, telling them that the taking to render the prisoner guilty must be with a dishonest intention and without claim of right. The evidence pointed to the conclusion that Lyons had secretly and at night broken open the gate of the yard in which the mares were confined and had driven them away to a distance. The jury convicted the prisoner, who is now under sentence. The question was whether his Honor's decision was correct.

Mr. Harris submitted as was laid down in the Queen v. Wilkinson, 2 Russell on Crimes, that the sheriff's officer was rightly in possession of the goods, as against the judgment debtor, and was entitled to keep them.

The CHIEF JUSTICE: Is it not an ordinary case of rescue?

Mr. Harris submitted not, especially as the jury found that it was a larcenous taking. An ordinary rescue would be where a man openly asserted a claim of right and honestly believed in his right to take his goods away from the custody of the Sheriff; but here the man's actions showed that he had a dishonest intention, as he went secretly into the yard, broke open the gate, and drove the animals away to a distance. There was no doubt that all the actions of the prisoner showed a secret intention, and not an intention to assert a claim of right, and after the direction of the Judge, who told them that the taking to render a prisoner guilty must be a taking with a dishonest intention, and without claim of right, the jury, by their verdict, must be assumed to have distinguished this case from one of ordinary rescue. In Stephens' Digest of the Criminal Law, article 301, it was laid down that a larceny might be committed by the general owner of chattels of which there was a special owner; and that appeared to cover this case exactly.

The CHIEF JUSTICE (Mr. Justice Windeyer and Mr. Justice Foster concurring) said he was of opinion that the conviction must be sustained. It appeared to him that his Honor correctly laid down the law to the jury in this matter. It was quite clear that the property remained in the execution debtor—that was to say in the prisoner—but there was a special property remaining in the Sheriff or his officer, and the question which his Honor left to the jury was whether the Sheriff was deprived of that special property by the prisoner with a dishonest intention, and without a claim of right. The jury in finding the prisoner guilty must be taken to have found that he took the property with a dishonest intention, and without a claim of right. In the case of Wilbraham v. Snow, Saunders' Digest, page 47, it was distinctly laid down that the sheriff might maintain an action of trover or trespass against any person who took away goods which he had seized in execution under a writ of fi. fa. If he could do that there must be, in order to maintain that action, a special property in him. The general property remained in the execution debtor, and it might be that he could sell the property seized, but subject to the rights of the execution creditor. In Woodland v. Fuller, 8, Adolphus and Ellis, page 359, it was laid down as undoubted law that an execution debtor might sell his property in the goods, but not the property. The defendant might sell subject to the right of the execution creditor, and when the property was vested in the sheriff for the execution creditor that position entitled the sheriff to maintain an action for trespass or trover. These mares were taken distinctly out of the Sheriff's special property, and therefore he was deprived of the special property which the law assumed the sheriff to have. Under these circumstances the prisoner was properly convicted of larceny in having taken the goods improperly without a claim of right, and that being so the conviction must be confirmed.

Conviction accordingly confirmed.

RE JAMES JONES; CORK AND ANOTHER, CAVEATORS.

Mr. Lamb appeared for the applicant James Jones, who desired to bring certain land under the provisions of the Real Property Act, and moved that an order made by the Court on the 23rd May, 1888, at the instance of the caveators, to restrain the Registrar-General from proceeding, be rescinded. The motion was made on the ground that the application by Jones was filed in November, 1882; the caveat was lodged on the 2nd February, 1884; but that the caveators having taken no further steps until the 23rd May, 1888, the caveat lapsed.

The order was made as asked.

MORRIS V. SOLLING.

Mr. Pilcher, Q.C., and Mr. O'Connor, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen, appeared for the defendant, and moved for a rule nisi for a new trial. The action, which was tried on September 2, before his Honor the Chief Justice and a jury of four, resulted in a verdict being found by consent for the plaintiff, with £900 damages, upon the terms that all questions of law should be reserved for the consideration of the Full Court, who were to have power to draw any inferences from the facts stated. The action was one brought by Augustus Morris, as official assignee of the insolvent estate of Robert Pyers, to recover the value of the steamship Emma Pyers from the defendant, Maximilian Solling.

The rule was granted.

CREASY V. BROWN AND OTHERS.

Dr. Sly, instructed by Mr. J. M. Fall, appeared for the plaintiff, and moved to make absolute a rule nisi to set aside the verdict of Mr. District Court Judge Wilkinson. In April last, Isaac Creasy, a butcher, sued the defendants to recover the sum of £12 0s. 6d., the proceeds of some pigs sold by them on his behalf. The plaintiff, it appeared, became insolvent on the 7th June, 1888, and after that date he, in the course of his business, bought the pigs, and in November of the same year he sold them through defendants, and when he sued them for the amount they pleaded that they had paid the amount to the official assignee. Mr. District Court Judge Wilkinson held that an uncertificated insolvent could not sue, and this was held to be erroneous in point of law.

There was no appearance on behalf of defendants, and the Court made the rule absolute, and directed a verdict to be entered for £11 5s. 6d., with costs of the Court below and of this motion.

EX PARTE EDWARD WOOD AND WIFE.

Mr. Whitfeld appeared for the applicants, Edward Wood and Isabella Wood, and moved to make absolute a rule nisi for a prohibition directed to certain justices of the peace at Tuena and William H. Madew, to restrain them from further proceedings in a certain order made at the Police Court at Tuena. There was no appearance for the respondents. It appeared that in April last the applicants were summoned by Madew under the Landlord and Tenants' Act, and charged with being illegally in possession of certain lands and premises without having any legal authority from the landlord or his agent, and that being in such illegal possession they refused to quit or give up possession. According to the affidavits filed on behalf of the applicants, no depositions were taken, and Mr. A. M. Betts, solicitor, in his affidavit, said, "The exact nature of the evidence given at the hearing I cannot ascertain; for on applying to the clerk of petty sessions at Tuena for a copy of the depositions, he informed me that no depositions were taken, and consequently I have not been able to obtain a copy of the same. I have also been informed, and believe, that no note was made of the decision of the justices, and that there is no document, adjudication, or minute in writing of any kind signed by the justices showing the effect or substance of the order purporting to be made by them." The applicants were ordered to give up possession, and against this they appealed, on the ground that there was no proof of either the creation or determination of any tenancy between the parties, and that the magistrates had no jurisdiction.

The CHIEF JUSTICE said it was quite clear that the prohibition must go. There was nothing in the information to show that this was a proceeding under the Landlord and Tenants' Act, or to show that there had been a demand made for possession, or that a tenancy had existed and been determined. However, in this case the magistrates had taken no depositions; and not only so, but manifestly they had made no minute or order of the decision which they gave in the case, and though they stated in an affidavit that they had made a minute they did not say when it was made, nor did they say now what the minute was. Further, they had taken no depositions, so that it was impossible for the Court to say what was the evidence before them. It was the first and paramount duty of magistrates in this colony, when matters came before them in which they had to exercise summary jurisdiction, to take full and complete depositions, or to see that they were taken. He was aware that it was considered by some magistrates that because depositions were not necessary in England in matters of summary conviction, they were not necessary here; but it must not be overlooked that there was a great difference between the practice in this colony and in England. In England there was no such proceeding as that which was now before the Court. There was no proceeding in England by way of prohibition against magistrates, or by way of an order by the Full Court. In England in matters of summary jurisdiction the only course open to the parties aggrieved was either to move for a writ of certiorari, where the remedy was not taken away by statute, or to appeal to Quarter Sessions. The appeal to Quarter Sessions took the place of a prohibition here, but in an appeal to Quarter Sessions it was not necessary to furnish the depositions, as the whole case was gone into again. Here, the only things the Court could act upon were the depositions and minutes, and the statute which provided for summary proceedings also provided that the depositions should be taken. The first section which gave jurisdiction to this Court was the 12th section of 14 Vic., No. 43, which provided for the consideration by the Court "of the evidence adduced before the Justice or Justices." How was this Court without the depositions to consider the evidence which was before the justices, and make such order as they might deem fit? Then there was the 15th section of the same Act, which provided that in all cases of summary conviction before the justices the parties interested should be entitled to have a copy of the information and depositions. The 10th section of the 17th Vic., No. 39, provided that where the facts or evidence appeared by the depositions or in substance to support the decision of the justices, power of amendment was given to the Court. Now, these sections showed that it was the intention of the Legislature in passing the Acts to which he had referred, that the Court should decide appeals on the evidence which was adduced before the magistrates, and that evidence could only appear before them in the way of depositions. It became, therefore, the duty of the magistrates to take depositions. Some time after the passing of these Acts it was thought that the evidence which was given before magistrates might be supplemented, and that affidavits might be used by the parties to enable the Court on the affidavits to see something beyond what appeared in the depositions. That matter came before Mr. Justice Wise, than whom there was no Judge who had more completely within his knowledge the practice at Home, and in the case ex parte Ivell, 2 Supreme Court Reports, page 91, he gave a considered judgment. It appeared that the depositions were not full enough, and did not disclose all the matters that came before the magistrates, and the parties appealing were anxious to bring out the facts which they alleged came before the magistrates. Objection was taken, and his Honor held that the depositions could not be supplemented, and that in supporting a conviction the magistrates were bound to set out the whole evidence, otherwise a criminal information could be laid against them for neglecting their duty. In ex parte Morrison a further attempt was made to supplement the depositions, but the Court there refused to allow any affidavits, and ruled that the case must stand or fall by that which appeared in the record. In that case reference was made to the "gross dereliction of duty on the part of the clerk to the justices." It was necessary in the interests of justice and also of the parties that the depositions should be taken. The matter came again before his Honor Sir James Martin, when there was an application to amend under section 10 of the 17 Vic. No. 39, in ex parte Williams, on the 24th March, 1886. That case was not reported, but he found this entry in his Honor's own handwriting in his note-book:—"I decline to amend under the 17th Victoria, because there are no depositions. I think there ought to be depositions, and if their absence had been taken here as a ground for objection I should have held that objection to be fatal." In other words, if in this case it had been taken as a ground of objection that there were no depositions before the magistrates, the Court, following Sir James Martin's opinion in the case referred to—which, he thought, was entirely supported by decisions preceding it—and also following the words of the statute, would have been compelled to uphold the objection. He was of opinion that in this case the magistrates had neglected their duty, and if costs had been asked against them the Court would have been compelled to order them to pay the costs. Of course if magistrates merely made an error of judgment in construing the law, the Court rarely visited them with costs, but where there was—to use the words of Sir Alfred Stephen—a "gross dereliction of duty," they ought to be punished. After this warning he hoped that if any case came before the Court where there was a summary conviction and there were no depositions, or if the depositions were manifestly insufficient, and did not disclose the whole evidence given before the magistrate—and the Court felt that they ought to grant a prohibition on that ground, he had no doubt they would order the magistrate who so neglected his duty to pay the costs. He thought the prohibition must go with costs against the respondent Madew.

Mr. Justice WINDEYER said he was entirely of the same opinion, and it was not necessary for him to go through the cases as showing that it was the absolute duty of magistrates to take depositions in cases of summary conviction. The law was perfectly familiar to lawyers, and he had occasion to point out in a case which came before him a short time ago the great injustice that might arise in the failure of magistrates to take depositions. The case which came before him was one in which a party wished to use the depositions in a case of summary conviction, but they could not be used in consequence of the magistrate apparently not having signed them, and because, in point of fact, they were not depositions at all. In exparte Tranter 5 S.C.R., page 256, decided subsequently to the one to which his Honor had referred, it was laid down, "it has already been decided that evidence cannot be supplemented in order to show that there was evidence sufficient to sustain the conviction." In this case it was quite clear that the magistrates utterly disregarded the statutory duty imposed upon them to see that the depositions were taken in order that the person aggrieved might have a remedy which our Colonial Justices' Act gave him by way of bringing the matter before the Court upon prohibition. For these reasons, if a prohibition had been asked for on the ground that no depositions had been taken, it would be the duty of the Court to direct it to go; and he agreed with his Honor that if the justices would neglect their duty after this matter had been pointed out to them over and over again, in all probability the Court would subject them to costs for causing what might be a miscarriage of justice.

Mr. Justice Foster concurred.

Rule absolute for a prohibition with costs against respondent Madew.

EX PARTE JOHN RADESKI.

Mr. O'Connor appeared for the defendant, Georgiana Stenteford, in support of an appeal from the magistrate's decision in an action heard at Penrith, and which was brought against her by John Radeski under the Act providing against the fraudulent removal of goods to avoid distress. There were a number of grounds setting out that the decision of the magistrates who adjudicated was bad in law, but as Mr. Bateman, who appeared for respondents, pointed out, that before the rule nisi was taken out the decision was amended. The rule was discharged.

In Chambers.—(Before Mr. Justice FOSTER.)

M'LEAN BROTHERS AND RIGG V. NICOLL (B. B. NICOLL AND J. HALL, GARNISHEES.)

Mr. Cohen, instructed by Messrs. Levy, Helmsley, and Perkins appeared for the execution creditors and moved for an order on the garnishees for the payment of £295 1s. 4d. inclusive of £43 14s. costs and 7s. 8d. interest. The garnishee, B. B. Nicoll, had previously applied for the discharge of a writ of foreign attachment issued under the Absent Defendants Act, but the application was dismissed, and M'Lean Brothers and Rigg now applied for the payment of the amount stated out of the funds in the hands of the garnishees.

The application was granted.

LANGLEY V. SCOTT (WESTON GARNISHEE).

Mr. Edmunds, instructed by Mr. Sullivan, appeared for the judgment creditor, and moved for a garnishee order for the payment by the garnishee, J. J. Weston, of the sum of £71 13s. 6d. out of funds in his hands. Judgment was obtained on the 27th August last, and was still unsatisfied. According to the statement of counsel the defendant's wife prior to her marriage had mortgaged certain property to the garnishee. After her marriage the property being still in the hands of the mortgagee was sold, and realised some £300 more than the amount of the mortgage debt, and that amount was still in the hands of the garnishee, payable by him to any person named by the Court. The judgment was against the husband alone.

His HONOR: Then the question arises whether that money, being the proceeds of real property, is the property of the wife or the husband.

Mr. Edmunds said that the judgment was on the contract for the building of a house upon this very piece of land.

The application was dismissed with £2 2s. costs.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice OWEN, Chief Judge in Equity.)

NOBLE V. LICHTNER.

Mr. Walker for the plaintiff, and Mr. Lingen for the defendant. This was an application for the continuance of an injunction with regard to an explosive known as meganite. The plaintiff contends that the defendants are guilty of an infringement of his patent. Mr. Lingen said he would file an affidavit showing that the defendants were the agents for the consignors in England. He asked for four months in which to file affidavits and the full statement of defence. It was necessary to have fully that space of time in order to get the information from the manufacturers in Austria, and to have an analysis made in England. He asked for security for costs and damages.

His HONOR granted the injunction as asked, and made the order for the security of costs and damages against the plaintiff. The plaintiff to provide samples of the explosive for analysis.

MEANEY V. ALT'S BREWERY COMPANY.

Mr. Manning for plaintiff, and Mr. Walker for defendant. This was an application by Mr. Walker to be allowed to file two affidavits on behalf of the defendants.

His HONOR after hearing arguments refused the application with costs.

BREWER V. DELANEY.

Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Rich for plaintiff, and Mr. Manning for defendant. This was a motion for a decree, which was granted under the terms drawn up by counsel.

TUNKS V. TUNKS.

Mr. Walker and Mr. Coghlan for the plaintiff; Mr. Owen for defendants, H. Tunks, J. R. W. Tunks, F.

National Library of Australia http://nla.gov.au/nla.news-page1383076

Gates, and Phoebe Gates; Mr. Foster for G. Tunks; and Mr. Scholes for the other defendants.

After hearing the arguments, his HONOR held that the mortgages were to be paid out of the personalty, and failing that, out of the residuary estate, the stamp duty also to come out of the funds, and that there should be no adjustment of the payment among the beneficiaries. Costs as between solicitor and client to come out of the estate.

HAVILAND V. M'CLEARY.

Mr. C. J. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Lawrence and Rich, for the plaintiff. Defendant, T. D. M'Cleary, did not appear, but Mrs. M'Cleary appeared in person and submitted to the decree.

This was a motion on further consideration and directions.

His HONOR made the following orders and directions:—1, that certain promissory notes be handed over by the male defendant to the receiver R. J. M'Kenzie; 2, that the male defendant hand over to the receiver possession of certain houses at Port Macquarie; 3, that the male defendant hand over the two carriage horses or their value; 4, that the male defendant hand over the title deeds of such properties; 5, that the male defendant convey to the female defendant, or to any trustee to be appointed by her, the above properties; 6, that the male defendant join with the female defendant in signing re-conveyances of certain mortgages; 7, that any default in the defendants complying with the above orders within 21 days the Chief Clerk in Equity to transfer the properties in their names; 8, the male defendant to pay the costs of the suit; 9, the plaintiffs to be allowed costs as between solicitor and client out of the estate of Hugh Bridson, deceased, and recoup the estate such sum as may be required from the male defendant. The further consideration was reserved.

In Equity.—(Before His Honor Mr. Justice DEFFELL.)

RICKETSON V. BARBOUR.

The Attorney-General, Mr. Wise, and Mr. Walker, instructed by Mr. De Lissa, for the plaintiff, and Mr. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Abbott and Allen, for the defendants.

This suit arose through the alleged non-performance of a decree made in 1881 in connection with a conditional purchase. The decree was that upon the payment of £480 by the plaintiff to the defendant the latter should transfer or obtain a transfer of the conditional purchase standing in the name of D. Williamson to the plaintiff, so as to give him a good legal right to the same. The Master in Equity was appointed to settle the proper conveyance or transfer. Instead of proceeding on the decree and compelling the defendant to transfer the land, the plaintiff went behind the back of the defendant and obtained a transfer to himself from D. Williamson, who had come of age. The Lands Department refused to recognise the transfer, and it became necessary for the plaintiff to get a transfer from the defendant himself. The object of this suit was to get the transfer on paying the £480 mentioned in the first suit. Objection was taken that the proper course was to have proceeded on the decree in the other suit under which he could have got everything desired, and that he attempted to compel the defendant to comply with the original decree by paying a sum of money so as to bind the defendant.

The JUDGE held that the plaintiff had his full remedy under the first decree. He therefore dismissed the claim with costs.

Vice Admiralty.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER, Deputy Judge Commissary.)

KANAHOOKA V. CENTENNIAL (PART HEARD).

Mr. Want, Q.C., and Mr. Gerald Campbell, instructed by Messrs. Creagh and Williams, appeared for Frank Osborne, owner of the steamer Kanahooka; and Dr. Sly, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Hamilton, for J. C. Ellis, owner of the steamship Centennial. There were two claims involved in the action, which arose out of a collision on the night of the 23rd August last near Taylor Bay. The amount of damages claimed by the owner of the Kanahooka was £3500, while the claim by the owner of the Centennial (which was sunk) amounted to £10,000. On the last day of hearing the case was adjourned to permit of the return of a witness for the defence, who was absent from the colony, and it was now continued. S. L. Lewis, who was a passenger by the Centennial at the time of the collision, was called and examined, and this closed the evidence.

His Honor reserved his decision.

In Bankruptcy.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice DEFFELL.)

MOTION TO SET ASIDE NOTICE.

This was an adjourned motion to set aside a bankruptcy notice in the cause of the Australian Mercantile Loan and Guarantee Company, Limited, v. David Davis. Mr. Wise was counsel for bankrupt in support of Mr. Gregory Walker; and Mr. Knox appeared for the petitioners to show cause. After hearing argument, his Honor made an order setting aside the bankruptcy notice, with costs as between attorney and client.

Upon the consideration of the official assignee's report the application was adjourned to the 29th instant for the bankrupt to show why his certificate should not be refused or suspended upon the ground set out in section 38 as to misappropriation of trust funds, the bankrupt's affidavit in reply to the report of the official assignee to be filed within three weeks.

Re A. A. Wilson. This was also an adjourned public examination, and the bankrupt was sworn and examined by Mr. G. Sly for the Sydney Agency and Finance Company, proved creditors. Mr. Shepherd appeared for the bankrupt. The public examination was declared concluded.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—FRIDAY.

(Before his Honor Mr. Justice STEPHEN and juries of 12.)

Mr. J. L. Campbell prosecuted for the Crown.

CHARGE OF MURDER.

August Wells was placed in the dock on a charge of wilfully murdering Wilhelmina Wells (his mother) on September 22, 1887, at Holdsworthy, near Liverpool.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

In this case Mrs. Wells's dead body was found, dreadfully mutilated and with the skull split open, down a well at Holdsworthy. At the coroner's inquest a verdict of wilful murder against August Wells was returned, and he was committed for trial. A week later he became insane, and was committed to Parramatta Asylum, whence he was recently discharged as sane and returned to Darlinghurst gaol.

Mr. Nugent Robertson was assigned as counsel, and the trial postponed to a later day.

WOUNDING WITH INTENT.

Alfred Critcher pleaded not guilty to a charge of feloniously wounding Flora Critcher, with intent to murder her, on August 10, 1889.

Mr. Wilfrid Blacket was assigned as counsel, and the trial was postponed.

THE WOOLLAHRA BABY-FARMING CASE.

Ellen Batts was placed in the dock to answer a charge of having murdered Elizabeth Cohen, at Woollahra; but without being called on to plead, the prisoner was further remanded for trial, the probable day of trial being Wednesday next.

FALSE PRETENCES.

James Devine pleaded not guilty to pretending to Carlisle Wilson, of the Royal Arcade, Sydney, that a cheque of his (Devine's) for £4 15s. on the Bank of New South Wales, Burrowa, was good, and by means of such pretence having obtained a coat and pair of trousers, a vest, and 5s. Prisoner applied for a remand to the Quarter Sessions, where Mr. Slattery had promised to defend him. He had no funds available for his defence at this court.

His HONOR declined to entertain the application.

Prisoner had been an hotelkeeper in Burrowa, and sold out. He admitted having given the cheque, but in his statement to the jury explained that he had recovered several judgments against persons owing him moneys which were to have been paid in, and which would have placed his account at the bank in sufficient credit.

The jury found the prisoner guilty. Prisoner asked for the leniency of the Court, as he had a family of 16, and had been a colonist of 40 years.

His HONOR sentenced the prisoner to two years' imprisonment, with hard labour.

LARCENY.

George Henderson pleaded not guilty to stealing a handbag and contents, £10 19s. 6d. in cash, and a cheque for £35, the property of James Kidman, on September 20. Prisoner applied to have his case remanded to the Quarter Sessions, as his mother had sufficient money to pay for his defence there, but could not employ counsel at the Central Criminal Court.

His HONOR declined to postpone the trial on that ground alone.

The facts of the case for the prosecution were that, on the date mentioned, Mr. Kidman's coachman was driving up and down outside Farmer's, in Pitt-street. Mrs. Kidman was in Farmer's, and there was no one in the carriage. She had left her bag in the carriage. The attention of George Smith, Mr. Kidman's coachman, was called to the fact that prisoner had taken the bag. The coachman ran after him, and he threw the bag into the side entrance of Her Majesty's Theatre, over the fanlight. He was arrested, and said he had picked the bag up.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour.

BREAKING, ENTERING, AND STEALING.

Kate Smith and Alicia Smith were charged with breaking and entering the dwelling-house of William Henry Buckley, at Camperdown, and stealing 2lb. of cheese, 2lb. of flour, and 2lb. of bacon. Kate Smith pleaded guilty and Alicia Smith not guilty. The evidence was that Kate Smith, the elder prisoner's daughter, had opened the back window and got in and helped herself to the articles mentioned. The jury found Alicia Smith not guilty. His Honor sentenced Kate Smith to one month's imprisonment.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO STEAL.

George Jones pleaded not guilty to attempting to pick the pocket of William James Lodge and steal 4s. 9d. The attempt was alleged to have been made in an auction-room in George-street.

The jury found the prisoner not guilty, and he was discharged.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Henry Barnes was charged with attempting to commit suicide by cutting his throat. Prisoner pleaded guilty, and put in a statement, showing that he had had a sunstroke, been in a railway accident, had lost his wife when under chloroform, and had taken to drink, and, while under its influence, had attempted to make away with himself.

His HONOR said that he would take a merciful view of the case, and sentenced prisoner to three months' imprisonment.

JUROR FINED.

John Waverley Ellen, artist, 57, Womerah-avenue, was fined £2 for non-attendance as a juryman.

POLICE.

Mr. W. Johnson, S.M., dealt with the business at the CENTRAL POLICE COURT yesterday morning. Theresa Farrington was charged with being an idle and disorderly person. Accused was remanded a few days ago, in order that she might obtain witnesses, but failing in this she was sent to gaol for three months with hard labour. John Quinn, 45, a cook, was fined £2, with the alternative of 14 days' imprisonment, for using threatening language towards Thomas Ridgeway, whereby a breach of the peace might have been occasioned. A man named Francis P. Connors, described as a salesman, was charged with being the bailee of a silver watch, and that he did fraudulently convert the same to his own use. Accused pleaded not guilty. John Daley, manager for Murdoch and Co., salesmen, carrying on business at No. 456, Elizabeth-street, Sydney, said prisoner had been in the employ of the company as a salesman, selling on commission. On the 14th ultimo witness gave the accused a watch, which had been returned to the firm's business place to be repaired, to return to a Mrs. Upton, of 312, Crown-street, who had bought the watch a few days previously. Accused left the shop with the evident intention of delivering the watch, but this was never done. When asked a few days after why he had not delivered it prisoner said he had and that he would meet witness on a certain date at Mrs. Upton's house to confirm his statement, but he never put in an appearance. He was sent to gaol for three months with hard labour. John Solomon, 24, and Henry Wellington, 19, were charged with having stolen a quantity of jewellery, valued £10, from the house of John Glasgow, situated at No. 38½, Mary-street. Evidence was to the effect that the jewellery was taken from the house while its occupants were out, and that one boy saw the accused go into the house, and another saw one of the men inside. The accused were arrested by Constable Barnes, but no traces of the stolen property were found. Both men were committed for trial, bail being allowed in one surety of £80, or two of £40. Mr. Delohery, D.S.M., presided in the Summons Division, and dealt with upwards of 70 cases for the non-registration of dogs.

Mr. B. Lee, D.S.M., presided in the Charge Division of the WATER POLICE COURT and Mr. Addison, S.M., disposed of the business in the Summons Division. Charles Lambert, 32, and James Dillon, 46, seamen, charged with being absent from the ship Damascus, were sentenced to three days' gaol. George Cavanagh, a bus-driver, on M'Cauley's buses, was fined £5, with costs, in default one month's gaol, for using filthy language to a young lady passenger. Robert Thompson, 24, vandriver, appeared in custody in answer to a charge of embezzling £6 6s., the moneys of his employers, Sanders and Horne. Accused was arrested by Sergeant Taylor and Constable Darlington, in Johnston-street, Balmain. Mr. b. Sanders deposed that Thompson was employed as a collector; in 80 cases he had not given any account of the moneys collected; he had been in the employ of the firm for six years, and his character for honesty was not good; it was only for the sake of his wife that he had not been dismissed before. As this was the first conviction Thompson was sentenced to two months' gaol.

At the NEWTOWN POLICE COURT Mr. G. O'Malley Clarke, S.M., presided. Harry Waterhouse, 13, no occupation, charged with maliciously damaging a plate-glass window value £2 1s., the property of Charles Haddow, was fined 20s., and was ordered to pay the damage 40s., in default two months' gaol. M. R. Purdy was fined £5, with the option of seven days' gaol, for leaving a train on the wrong side. On a charge of travelling without a ticket he was further fined in a like amount. On a similar charge P. Reidy was fined £2, in default seven days' gaol. Edward Korner, for assaulting Laura Ryner, was sentenced to 48 hours in the cells.

Captain Fisher, S.M., disposed of the business of the BALMAIN POLICE COURT. Albert Foster and Bertie Napier, charged with having stolen vegetables, the property of James Hassal, were each fined 20s., and 20s. for damages done, with the alternative of two months' gaol. Arthur Goodwin and Albert Foster were each fined 20s., and 21s. for damages done, and one guinea complainant's costs, for a similar offence. James Challis, for illegally using water, was fined 40s., or in default 21 days' imprisonment. William Moss, for a like offence, was fined 20s. and costs, or be imprisoned for 14 days. Kate Honeyman, for using indecent language, was ordered to pay 40s., with the option of one month's imprisonment.

Messrs. J. Withers and H. Byrnes, Js.P., disposed of the business at the PARRAMATTA POLICE COURT. Mary Fitzgerald was fined 5s., or 24 hours, for drunkenness. David Fitzgerald, arrested on warrant for disobeying an order to answer charges of drunkenness and obscene language, at the Rosehill Racecourse, on the 7th October last, was fined 20s. or seven days for the former, and 40s. or 14 days for the latter offence. Herman Michaelis was ordered to pay the sum of 15s. per week towards the support of his four children, and to pay costs of Court. A. W. Gillies did not appear to answer a charge of embezzling certain moneys, the property of the Lord Clyde Lodge, Protestant Alliance Friendly Society, Granville, preferred against him by E. Kurtzman. A warrant for his arrest was ordered to issue.

ALLEGED FALSE PRETENCES.

At the Water Police Court yesterday morning, before Mr. Lee, D.S.M., Edmund H. Taylor, alias E. Thomson, alias Dr. Marsh, 35, accountant, was charged that he on the 13th December, 1887, did falsely pretend to James Balfour, the manager of the National Bank of Australasia, that upon certain of his lands situate at Auburn, title deeds of which land the said Edmund Taylor deposited with the said James Balfour, as such manager, as security for the repayment of advances to be made by the National Bank of Australasia, he had caused to be erected certain buildings, the contract price of which was £3000, and which buildings had cost him that sum, by means of which false pretence the said E. Taylor did cause the sum of £1000 of the moneys of the said bank to be paid on the 16th January, 1888, by the manager to the Bank of New South Wales on his account with intent to defraud.

Mr. Minter appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. M'Laughlin for the defence.

Detective Hinds deposed that he knew prisoner. He produced a warrant issued by Mr. Smithers in July last, also the endorsement of the warrant on the 24th September by the Chief Justice of Ceylon. He produced a warrant of the 10th October, under the hand of the Governor of Ceylon, also a certified copy of the depositions taken in Ceylon. The extradition warrant was also produced.

The case was remanded till next Thursday.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

The City Coroner Mr. J. C. Woore, J.P., held an inquest at the South Sydney Morgue yesterday morning, touching the death of a man named Robert Phelp, who was found dead on Thursday morning at the rear of 184, Elizabeth-street. Richard Jackson deposed that he resided at 184, Elizabeth-street, and knew the deceased, who a few months ago resided with him. He last saw deceased alive about five or six days ago; he then appeared to have been drinking heavily; at 6 a.m. on Thursday morning, witness went to the rear of his premises, where he saw the deceased, who he at first thought was asleep; witness endeavoured to arouse him, and then ascertained that he was dead; deceased had never told him that he intended to commit suicide; deceased was much addicted to drink. Dr. Milford deposed that he made a post mortem examination of the body of the deceased on Thursday afternoon; the body had been evidently dead about 12 hours; in the stomach he found about 2oz. of a grayish powder, which he was of opinion was a poison known as "Rough on Rats;" witness could not be positive as to what the poison was until an analysis had been made. The contents of the stomach were handed over to Constable Wilkinson, to be submitted for examination to the Government Analyst. Constable Wilkinson stated that at 6.15 a.m. on Thursday morning he went to 184, Elizabeth-street, where he found the body of the deceased, and thence conveyed it to the South Sydney Morgue. On the body he found a few papers, one of which indicated to his friends that he was about to end his life. H. R. Hickford, residing at Petersham, stated that deceased had frequently told him that he was tired of life, and that he would commit suicide; deceased also informed witness that he had on previous occasions attempted suicide, but had failed. The Coroner adjourned the inquest till Friday next.

An inquest was held at 2 p.m. yesterday afternoon by the City Coroner, Mr. J. C. Woore, J.P., at Brown's Sea View Hotel, Bondi, relative to the death of Florence Josephine Campbell, who was drowned in a cesspit on the previous day. Frederick Campbell, teacher, stated that deceased was his daughter, aged 1 year and 7 months. On Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, he missed deceased, whom he had previously seen going towards the back of the house. A search was at once instituted, and the body of deceased was found floating in a cesspit, which was about 6ft. deep. Every effort was made to restore animation, but without avail, and Dr. Smith was called in, but his endeavours were also in vain. As the medical testimony was not forthcoming owing to Dr. Smith's attendance being required at the Criminal Court, the inquest was adjourned till Tuesday next.

SCENERY ON THE RAILWAY LINES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In a sub-leader of October 29 you make mention of the scenery along different lines of our railways; but I notice with regret that you omit mention altogether of the Mudgee line. From Ben Bullen to Ilford, a distance of about 20 miles, the railway skirts the vast depression of the Capertee Valley, and as the train winds around the Crown Ridge, near Capertee Station, and further on by Carlos Gap and Brogan's Creek, the view is in my opinion unequalled on any line of railway in the colony. The tremendous masses of Hawkesbury sandstone, in many cases showing a perpendicular unbroken face of 300ft., towering higher and yet higher in the distance, until the Bulga Mountains overlooking Singleton can be distinctly seen, and the lofty cone-shaped Tiers Peak with its trigonometrical station at its summit, present in all weathers one of the finest spectacles of rugged mountain scenery in Australia.

To those tourists who are tired of the beaten track of the Blue Mountains, as represented by Katoomba, Blackheath, and Mount Victoria, I would recommend a visit to the Capertee district. There is an hotel close to the railway station, where good accommodation can be obtained. I am confident that the beauties of this place are but to be seen and explored to be appreciated, and I predict a future before it second only to Katoomba. To the geologist it presents special features of interest. At few places in New South Wales are there so many or such a variety of fossils and petrefactions obtainable. The late Professor Denton spent some little time at the place, and expressed great interest in all he saw. He gave it as his opinion that the vast depression was at one time one of the largest fresh-water lakes in the colony.

I am, &c., TRAVELLER.

DOG LICENSING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your to-day's issue, in referring to the summonses heard at court for non-registration of dogs, you state that many who had already registered were nevertheless put to the inconvenience and loss of time of attending court, as they had neglected to produce their receipts when called upon. When you advise, however, "that owners of dogs should see that their registration receipts are at all times handy for inspection at their residences," I think you are under some misapprehension of the tenor of the Act. The arbitrary powers of the police are already sufficiently great without straining the construction of any Act to increase them. Had the framers of the Dog Act deemed it desirable to give such power as the police are assuming to themselves, surely they would have added a clause to that effect, and we should have receipts bearing notice that they were at all times to be open for inspection, under penalty. In such a case it would be simple to frame and glaze them and hang them in our front windows.

Considering that our names and full addresses appear on our applications for licenses, is it unfair to ask that the authorities prepare lists showing all those who have registered within the time prescribed, and so save them from further annoyance? With greater facilities for registration—in England one can register at any post-office, and the majority of us visit that more frequently than the police court—there would be less liability to neglect registering. If a registered owner is suspected of keeping more dogs than he takes licenses out for, the visiting constable is hardly likely to elicit the information from him personally. Under the Act, I take it that the police have no more right, having the fact established in their own books that I have registered all the dogs I keep, to demand production of my receipts, than they can claim to see my Post Office Savings Bank account. If they wish to acquire the power they now illegally assume, let them constitutionally proceed to get the Act amended. I for one refuse to show my receipts, or "to take them down to the station-house to-night" under any threat of proceedings. Thanking you in anticipation for the courtesy of insertion of the above.

DO YOU KNOW LONDON?

"Where the streets are all paved with gold," so they say, but "as false as dicers' oaths." Did you ever ride in Rotten Row, or loll back in ease and elegance in your carriage, behind a pair of thoroughbreds, as you were driven along? Perhaps not. Possibly you have stood in that renowned thoroughfare and watched the people passing and repassing! It was a fashionable crowd, wasn't it? "Charming women and handsome men," and all that sort of thing!

DO YOU KNOW PARIS?

Its Boulevards, its Palaces, its Gardens, its Salons, its glorious Shops, its Bazaars of Splendour and Fashion? If not, next time you are that way look in; you'll find the game is worth the candle.

Meanwhile, and as there are sixteen thousand miles between you and those distant pleasures, try

OUR EVER-BEAUTIFUL SHOWROOMS

For an afternoon promenade, and a glimpse at

THE SUMMER FASHIONS

THE SUMMER FASHIONS.

Believe us your time will not be thrown away; you will be instructed, edified, educated, amused, and elevated in tone. Your eyes will be opened. Your senses charmed. You will be delighted with everything you come in contact with, and unless you have a heart as hard as your purse strings will be unloosed. But that won't matter, for although your expectations may run high in that direction, your investments will be of a paying character and represent

SUPERLATIVELY GOOD VALUE.

We have no time to-day, or space either, to recapitulate the many beauties of that part of our establishment which is reached from the ground floor of the main building by means of

THE GRAND STAIRCASE,

but would fain, in words as brief as brief can be, point out some few items in one or two of the many enticing corners with which our Show Rooms abound. Calling to our aid the points of the compass, we beg to direct our friends to the south-east corner, where is situated

THE MANTLE DEPARTMENT.

On your way thither from ascending the Grand Staircase aforesaid many pretty things will greet the eye, and it will be difficult to move on and pass by sundry temptations in the way of

FRENCH BONNETS and DAINTY PARASOLS.

Well, we have no objection, although our object to-day is to introduce some of the prettiest and most fascinating that ever delighted a feminine eye. Please note them attentively. Observe the prices. Are they not low for such loves of mantles? Come, confess it at once! Look at this one with the Beaded Shoulders and the delicate Network and the Rich Lace. You'll never have the chance again of such a bargain. Cast a critical eye over you pile. There are Visites quite the Mode. Only two months ago these very ones were the admired of Paris the Beautiful, and, believe us, it was only our great influence in the Fashion World that enabled us to acquire them and get them shipped to Australia. There are Silk Mantles in Richest Broche, striped and richly-trimmed Jet, Lace and Ribbons. Look well at this one, and don't faint with delight when you hear the price, which, even if you are of limited means, is quite within your reach. Then, there is another corner, in the south-west angle of the Showroom—yes, that's it; and here are

FRENCH LACE MANTLES

THE CHILDREN'S COSTUMES, BLOUSES, TUNICS, and DRESSES OF ALL KINDS.

The nearest thing to an angel is a pretty child, and one of the ways to enhance the beauty which Nature has bestowed, and to render the children fit, is to rig them out according to the latest mode. And we can make the operation an inexpensive one. Ever so cheap, believe us, and if you won't, let ocular demonstration convince you. For the infinitesimal sum of ONE AND NINE we can give you a

NICE ZEPHYR COSTUME for a LITTLE GIRL, and on your parting with THREE SHILLINGS and ELEVENPENCE added thereto, a delicious little costume of WHITE BISHOP LAWN fit for A LITTLE MAID, shall be yours. Or perhaps you would spring a little in the good cause. Well, then, here is a dainty dress of WHITE INDIAN MUSLIN to which you shall have a title as sound as Torrens' if you will only shell out to the tune of FIVE AND THREE.

What say you! Or perhaps there is a chubby boy in the question. If so, we can rig out his sturdy limbs in a SAILOR WASHING TUNIC for ONE AND ELEVEN.

You hesitate, then you are lost, or rather saved, and you will either take the parcel with you as a remembrance of a pleasant afternoon or have it sent home by

FUGITIVE NOTES.

Major Dave says that the Australian boy has not learned to think. Let the boys answer for themselves. Meanwhile we take note of a case showing that the girls have learned to think, and not too, to some purpose. A little boy in the country, named Rowen, is knocked down and held down by a falling sapling, which breaks his leg. His sister, twelve years of age, cuts him free, carries him home, catches a horse, informs the nearest neighbours, rides into town, a distance of fifteen miles, tells her parents, who are away from home, and goes for a doctor. What more could have been done at 22 instead of 12? Another point in the case is that the horse had only been ridden a few times before. An English proverb informs us that old heads cannot be put on young shoulders. In this land of reversed ideas, it is sometimes found that they grow there naturally. If that little boy—now, probably, in splints and reflection—does not learn to think, and to think great things of his sister, he will need, as the Major says, "to be shaken up." But it is not to be thought of.

* * * * *

The resolution of the City Council to the effect that the Agent-General be requested to ascertain the total cost at which Mr. Best, Mr. Hoyte, or any other eminent organist would undertake to come out here and give twelve or more recitals with a month on the new organ looks like a definite step towards doing business. It is a mistake to jeer at the alderman, or to cast doubt upon their willingness and ability to carry this matter through in the right way. It is better to hope and to believe that the majority, at any rate, will be found ready to dispose of it in a liberal spirit. There has been no lack of gratuitous advice from all sides: and the Council may be trusted to appreciate the importance of that bolder reasoning which would incur even a comparatively heavy expenditure in the purchase of success instead of risking an utter waste of money by paying a somewhat smaller price for failure. But the Council should not be worried.

* * * * *

It has been pointed out that under protection, in the United States and in Victoria, it is the few who derive direct profit from the system, while the many pay the cost of it. The fact is too obvious to be shut out of sight. The people who belong to the protected trades can be counted, and when counted they are seen to be only a fraction of the community that pays the taxes on imported goods, and the proportionately increased prices for local goods with which they compete. If it be so, says a protectionist, we must suppose that in Victoria "protection is the fiscal policy not because the majority, but the minority, endorse it." Here we have an enigma, indeed. Can such things be? Some years ago, the solution was anticipated by a protectionist of another sort, the recollection of whose candour has been a source of pleasure ever since. He told us that protection had been carried in Victoria because the manufacturers took the lead. They had organised the war, and conducted it, and found the funds, and they should be regarded here and trusted, as they had been there, as the natural leaders of the people. It was the manufacturers who stood to win by protection, and so they worked and won. But although the few won, it was by the help of the many whom they persuaded or cajoled. The minority succeeded by the support of the majority, although the majority had ultimately to pay the cost. It was the majority that "endorsed" the bill, and had to find the money when it matured. There is nothing "funny" in this. Many a man has been persuaded to endorse a bill when a right view of his interest would have stayed his hand. It may have been a joke to his persuasive friend; but to himself it was ruin, or a step that way.

* * * * *

Mr. Carruthers told the people at Milton, the other day, that "individually he was opposed to payment of members, but it was forced on the Government through the action of the Upper House." The Minister's imagination is surely developing at the cost of his memory. Was not the forcing altogether the other way? Did not the Council accept the principle of payment under the pressure of a conviction that the country was in favour of it? And did not the Council afterwards swallow a far larger leek and give authority to the unconstitutional votes by which members of the Assembly helped themselves, because the Government threatened it with a deluge? The business was transacted so recently that the time has hardly yet come for investing the reminiscences of it with a halo of romance. The fact is that the Council owned to the Assembly a way of escape from the commission of a flagrant breach of constitutional principle; and, instead of seizing the opportunity with a good grace, the Government eagerly identified itself with the cause of those who had till then been the leaders in doing the wrong, and made itself responsible for a violent assault upon both the constitution and the Upper House. It is understood that a history of the colony for the use of our Public schools is being prepared. Let us hope that in its veracious pages there will be a simple prose narrative of these scandalous proceedings.

* * * * *

Who can say what changes will be wrought in the social system within the next score of years? What with trusts, and rings, and corners, unions of employers, and unions of employed, federations of trades unions, the federation of labour, co-operation, land nationalisation and the single tax, and new laws to regulate the hours of work, the rates of wages, and the distribution of wealth, we may be even now approaching disturbances in the strata of the social world as extensive as those which are studied by the geologist in the records of the rocks. "X. Y." was remarking lately upon a new development, under which trades which were formerly kept separate are grouped together and carried on under one head. "H." follows, contending that the result must be to aggrandise the great men and crush the small, and generally to put a check upon healthy progress. But he does not stop there, for he says it will become "absolutely necessary to legislate so as to make it illegal for any man or firm to carry on more than one distinct trade." Who shall be pitied most—the legislator of the future or the people upon whom his experiments will be made? The one, it is to be feared, will be committed to a mortal contest with the forces of nature; the other will provide, during its continuance, striking illustrations of the tendency of those forces, when subjected to artificial re-train, to develope startling effects. How happy were our dusky predecessors on this continent in their freedom from dreams like these.

"Extremes meet" in Liverpool, if, as it is reported, there are some good people there who think it is a sign of backwardness to be introducing gas when electricity might be had, whilst there are others who would not, for any money, live near the gas works for fear that they might explode. What is the safe course for improvement in a place like that? How reconcile tradition with radical reform, the past with the future, the timid with the bold? In the happy medium between the dynamo and tallow dips to be found in the moderator lamp? As it is impossible to please everybody, the extremists may be left to themselves, and congratulations may be offered to the middle men who are about to enjoy the advantages of good street lamps and a better water supply as well. There must surely be some exaggeration about the report that the prospect of the water-mains has produced apprehensions of a flood. May Liverpool long flourish in the possession of sweetness and light! It was not always so distinguished.

THE RISING OF THE EUPHRATES.—Charles Marvin, in his account of a journey to the petroleum region of the Caspian, says:—"It was anticipating history a bit, but there is very little doubt that before long it will be possible to do the journey from London to the Caspian—a distance of over 3000 miles—in a week. Any medicines the traveller may require can easily be obtained at the chemists' shops in Russian towns. Above all, a few bottles of Enos's 'Fruit Salt,' perhaps the best medicine in the world for the Caspian region, where the heat and dust occasionally provoke symptoms needing a gentle and invigorating treatment." Examine each bottle and see that the capsule is marked "Enos's 'Fruit Salt;'" without it you have been imposed on. Sold by all chemists. Prepared only at Enos's "Fruit Salt" Works, New Cross-road, London, Eng., by J. C. Enos's Patent Apparatus.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

AFFECTATION.

If I were asked what I considered the most common failing in the feminine world, I should say affectation; a want of that simple "directness" of manner and action that draws us intuitively to a genuine nature, and inspires us with the conviction that we are in the presence of a person who strains after no effect, who is filled with no overweening desire to please, but is satisfied to live, rather than to demonstrate by any high-flown theories, the belief that animates his or her existence. Men, with all their faults, have less of this weakness; perhaps because from their childhood up they are trained to the knowledge that life for them means simply first, finding the key that is to unlock that particular door of knowledge or handicraft which to them is the entrance to success or failure; next, perseverance in using well the secret when it is acquired. Popularity, with them, may go for something; but skill or talent in their trade or profession is the main thing required. Let them only attain to excellence in what they put their hand to, and that "tide in the affairs of man, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune," will rarely play them false. Independence, study, and work, and for them the thing is done. But for women it is not so, except with rare exceptions. From the beginning they learn—or, indeed, they hardly need to learn, as they instinctively feel that their vocation, if they wish their career to be successful, is to employ all their arts and graces in "pleasing" somebody. In babyhood they learn that pence or shillings for dollies or sweetmeats are best obtained by hanging round father's neck, stroking his cheek, and wheedling him, by their infant coquetries, into subjection. A boy has less tact. He marches into the room, sticks his hands deep down into the pockets of his knickerbockers, and says "Father, I want sixpence, please." "What for?" very naturally asks the father. "Why, to buy a top—such a jolly one! Tommy's bought one, and I want one too." "Oh, you do—do you? Well, I'm busy now; run away, and I'll see about it." Whereupon, instead of trying a few blandishments like Polly or Nelly, the little booby spoils his case altogether by setting up a howl, and gets banished hastily from the paternal presence altogether. Perhaps, in the end, mother, recognising in the boy admiringly the masculine quality that wouldn't stoop to any roundabout means to gain a desired end, supplies the coveted coin.

Later on, at school, it is just the same. I remember, years ago, in England, how a very handsome and distinguished-looking French master, with an eyeglass and a small waist (some of the elder girls, in discussing him, whispered of "corsets") used to visit our seminary. I was only about 12 then, and the yearning desire to fascinate somebody was yet only in embryo; but I distinctly remember French days, and how the young maidens of 14 or 15 used to creep furtively down to the dressing-room, before the "modern languages" came on, to put on little bows of bright ribbons, and arrange more effectively the loose rings of hair straying round their foreheads. And I used to think it very unfair that one girl, a dreadful dunce, who said "Mong frère-er es-t bong" the last word going off with a snap and a rumble like the boom of a cannon should get off with only a smile and a gentle reproach, while I, sitting quietly in the corner, and thinking inoffensively enough of how I should manage to get the best place on the "see-saw" in the lunch hour should be darkly frowned upon for some slight mispronunciation, and almost annihilated with mortification by the words "Mademoiselle, je suis mécontent de vous; vous êtes paresseuse absolument négligeante." But when I looked at the dunce's pretty blue eyes, and saw how their owner bridled and smiled, and plumed up all her bewitching peacock feathers of girlish coquetry when the master looked at her; tears of rage and wounded feeling sprang to my eyes, and I thought that never, never would I be able to disarm anger by such telling glances, or learn such seductive, innocent-looking wiles. I felt like first Wurtz's naughty "Miles" when she gazes on the fair and virtuous "Clytemnestra," and if I had given vent to my feelings should have burst out into a roar, like "Miles" also, and sobbed and screwed my knuckles into my eyes, and shrieked, "How I do ha—a—te that girl!" Poor, little, passionate, demon-angel Miles! I love your pure, fierce, hoydenish simplicity now. Never envy Clytemnestra, with her rose "prunes-and-prism" mouth, her affected blushes and giggles, and her bloodless pulses. You live; she only plays at living. What a curious variety of forms affectation takes? I have met one young lady who, notwithstanding the advantage of a decidedly fine pair of eyes, and possessing the equally valuable attribute of a character far removed from weak, always thought it necessary to falter when addressed, especially when by a member of the male sex, and drop the before-mentioned orbs in picturesque confusion and maiden coyness, gazing up again sideways from under their lashes before replying, to see how it all "took," in a way that would have been aggravating if not so funny. I know another who wears collars up to her ears, and her hat on the back of her head, speaks in a loud strident voice, and gives your hand a grip that nearly dislocates the wrist—all with an air of "Yes, I'm here, and don't you make any mistake about it; and a jolly good fellow I am, if you only take the trouble to know me; and if you don't, well, it's all the same to me." And I may add that the young lady in question is without doubt a very "good fellow" indeed, with a warm, loving heart and a most kind and obliging disposition. I have come across, too, ladies who found it very agreeable to affect the invalid, who spoke in slow, languid tones, and liked to be escorted to the softest seat and have people rushing about here and there with fans, and cushions, and footstools, and smelling salts for them, but who in reality only needed the stimulating element of a little regular work and a short experience of that side of life where people do not "lie in the lilies and feed on the roses" to be just as well as anybody else. Then there is the worldly young person, who has decided that not the best-looking Romeo in the world shall induce her to marry under at least two thousand a year, and who abides faithfully by her decision, yet affects so naively and prettily the air of an ingénue, and talks about "love in a cottage" with such beautiful enthusiasm, that nobody finds her out until she has accepted her diamond engagement ring, thrown the last admirer over, and set about preparing her trousseau for her marriage with old Mr.—— with a bald head and a liver complaint, and ten thousand a year instead of two. Another very unpleasant affectation is that of a woman who, having garnered up a certain amount of information from books, and having heard people praise her cleverness in absorbing such knowledge, and giving it out, perhaps, in a new form, forthwith proceeds to pose as "intellectual." An appearance of profundity is easy to keep up, I do assure you. "Mother," said an observing boy, the other day, "I think Mrs. —— knows an awful lot." "Why, dear?" said she. "Oh, because, whatever you talk about, she just sits and shakes her head, and her eyes grow big, and she clacks with her tongue—so—and you feel, somehow, that she's heard it all lots of times."

More offensive methods of affecting cleverness than this lady's I may observe, but one and all equally fallacious. There is the woman who rattles away by the hour on any topic presented to her notice, and if she be young and good-looking, and her manner bright and sparkling, in nine cases out of ten she will get, among a certain class of people, a sort of reputation for cleverness, which she will feel it necessary to sustain by numberless little ruses and affectations. But she will lose dignity and force in the struggle. A few words delivered in a lecture given some nights ago in our town deserve to be written in letters of gold, for their truth, their earnestness, and their simplicity. Speaking of young women, to whom the lecturer was principally addressing himself, "Let them," he said, "above all preserve their dignity of character, their personal worth, and their social influence. Let them maintain a spirit of self-restraint. They were always strong in proportion as they were strong towards themselves. Let them not show all their wares in the window. There was a strength always in something kept in the back-ground. And, in conclusion, "Nothing," he said, "gives a woman greater dignity than to let people feel she knows more than she talks, and has a reserve fund from which flow springs which enrich domestic life." There is a fine ideal presented for our following here. We think, as we listen, of a woman simple and yet strong, loving and yet firm, seriously sweet and true. And thinking thus, we could not for one moment associate her with any of those little mannerisms and affectations which, small matters as they sometimes appear, yet seriously detract from the loveliness and dignity of her sex.

THOUGHTS OUTSIDE THE BABY SHOW.

By A WOMAN.

Forty-five thousand people at a baby show! Forty-five thousand hours—eighteen hundred and seventy-five days—five years of human life—spent in gazing at three hundred and sixty mothers who each thought her goose a swan—in watching the same number of unfortunate babies who would have been much more comfortable at home! Truly we are a foolish people. Two or three men who wish to make money have only to offer a golden bait, and hundreds of fond mothers rise, willing to submit themselves and their offspring to inspection for the chance of a nibble, while thousands are anxious to pay for looking at a few of the little creatures whom they may see everywhere. Surely it is time that we questioned the real value of some of our competitive amusements. Almost all exhibitions have a reason for existence. A show which by offering rewards may improve the breed, and thus increase the usefulness of our domestic animals, or an exhibition which by instituting competitions will stimulate the industry and ingenuity of our labourers, amateur or otherwise, must be a benefit to the community. The ignorant may learn, the idle be shamed, by the sight of the finished labours of their fellows. But a show of babies! Will any foolish mother be wiser, any dirty nursery the cleaner, any suffering baby better handled for it? A show of nursemaids, with prizes for tidiness, cleanliness, &c., and a special £100 for the patient girl who could for the longest time keep a fractious youngster quiet, would at least have had the plea of usefulness; but this has none. It is an object lesson on the advantages of over-feeding, and a straightforward avowal that physical beauty is to us, with all our higher training, a most desirable possession. This teaching is so utterly wrong that every Australian mother should raise her voice against it. The fattest baby is not always the healthiest or strongest. The food which produces fat is often mere starch, having none of the bone and blood forming qualities which should be principal parts of good food for infants. A baby nourished by it may be a picture of white rotundity who will succumb to the first infantile ailment, while one fed by wiser hands may make a poorer appearance, and lie at the same time a little treasury of bone and muscle, containing the healthy foundation of a stalwart frame. Notwithstanding, the fattest baby takes the prize, especially if to her plumpness is added beauty. Every mother knows that pretty babies seldom fulfil the promise of their babyhood. If the features are so well developed in an infant's face as to make it remarkable for its symmetry, they will probably be too prominent when the roundness of childhood has given place to the harder lines of later life. But if this were not so we might still ask whether physical beauty is a desirable possession. Has mortal creature ever been truly happier or better for having a prettier nose or a shapely mouth? Is it our common experience that the people on whom nature has bestowed the gift of external beauty have a corresponding beauty of mind and heart? If it were possible to collect opinions worth having the answer would be an unmistakable negative. Only man, the inventor of shams, the propagator of delusions, works from the outside in. The intelligent mind may produce an expression that will make the most homely features beautiful, but never did a life grow purer because its owner had a pretty figure. The loving heart may pour its radiance through the eyes, and make them blue, grey, or brown orbs of beauty to a friend or lover, but never was a girl more loving because her eyes were bright.

A thing is beautiful only when it is seen to be fulfilling its manifest destiny as truly and as gracefully as our highest intelligence demands. A lighthouse, however skilfully fashioned, would be unappreciated and only half admired if it did not fulfil the wish of its maker, and pour its radiance over earth and sea, for it was built to be more than a graceful column. More, much more, than mere external beauty is demanded of men and women. Beauty without its internal correspondence should offend by its incongruity more than it pleases by its fleeting gratification of the desires of sense.

We need no shows to teach us to value the external things of life. We value them too much already. If we must have competitions let them be such as will make us cultivate not only health and strength, so necessary if we would lead good and useful lives, but also their inner correspondences—the manly strength of mind, the womanly sweetness of temper, the earnestness and moral courage, the love of truth and right, the steady resolve to be pure in heart and life, that we and our children need, if this Australia of ours is ever to become the great nation we hope to see.

14½ ACRES at £15 per acre, having two sides frontage to the same creek, with deep waterholes. Only two sides of this block would require fencing. It is all cleared and stumped, well-grassed meadow land, with the exception of clumps of shade trees alongside the creek. FOR IMPERATIVE SALE.

By Order of the Trustees of the Will of the Late Hon. HENRY MOORE, M.L.C., to close the TRUST ACCOUNT.

The following Valuable Property, in Two Lots, viz.—
MOORE'S WHARF and STORES, MILLER'S POINT.
STORES and LAND fronting CRESCENT-ROAD, MILLER'S POINT.

Titles unquestionable. Reference may be made to Messrs. HOLDWORTH and EVANS, of Pitt-street, Solicitors to the Estate.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH, Limited, have received instructions from the Trustees of the Estate abovementioned to sell by public auction, at their Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 15th NOVEMBER, at 11 o'clock.
The above important freehold properties, of which the following are bare outlines of their particulars:—
LOT 1.—MOORE'S WHARF, MILLER'S POINT.
This well-known extensive waterside property is approached by a wide road of easy gradient known as Moore's-road from ARGYLE-STREET, MILLER'S POINT, and contains an area of land within its boundaries of about 1 acre 1 rood 15 perches, as well as an additional area 2 roods 30 perches by wharf frontage and jetties, making the total area of the property 2 acres 0 perches 3 roods, or 88,485 square feet.

The water frontage may be classed as undermentioned, viz.:—
Substantial wharf platform 180ft. long.
Two Jetties of the following dimensions, viz.:—
No. 1 has berth accommodation of 352ft. 8in. long on its eastern side, and 182ft. on its western side.
No. 2 has 183ft. 6in. long on its eastern side, and 156ft. on its western side.
These frontages give berth room for three large vessels to be loaded or discharged at the same time, while there is also ample space for lighters or smaller vessels, to lie alongside them.
The jetties are of the most substantial description, their width varying from 40 to 25 feet. They are comparatively new, having been erected only a few years. Forming the south boundary of the property is a range of
FOUR STRONGLY-BUILT STONE STORES
of three floors each, having an estimated carrying capacity of 5500 tons. The stores can be worked either together or singly from the front, and also from Crescent-road running at the back of them. They are divided one from the other by fire-proof doors, this giving an advantage for insurance rates.

Adjoining this range of stores are the offices containing two apartments, while on the eastern side of the property is another range of stores and wooden sheds.
On the wharf there is a long range of wooden buildings, containing manager and storekeeper's residence, sheds for merchandise, &c., the rest of the property is open space.
As a whole property it is compact and easy to work, its access is unsurpassed by any of the neighbouring wharfs, or by any others lining Darling Harbour, and its access and get away for shipping is all that can be desired.
The depth of water alongside is equal to floating the largest merchant steamer trading to Port Jackson.

This property, so far as wharfage rates are concerned, is in agreement with the Wharf Association, which may be retained or discontinued at the option of the purchaser at the sale. Full particulars concerning this agreement may be obtained from the Auctioneers.

LOT 2.—BLOCK of LAND, fronting CRESCENT-ROAD, immediately at the back of MOORE'S WHARF and STORES. It has a frontage of about 285ft., by a depth of about 85ft. On it are some old-fashioned two-story stone stores, &c. The rest of the land, about 110ft. frontage, is vacant.

with 22,800 SHEEP.

DOUGHARTY, SON, and PARKER have been instructed to sell by auction to the highest bidder, on FRIDAY, 6th December, at Scott's Hotel, Collins-street, Melbourne, after the sale of the Mooloomoon Estate,
ORIENT, which is situated in the Warrego and Gregory South districts, about 40 miles from Thargomindah, surrounded by some of the choicest stations in Queensland, and only 100 miles from Hungerford, on the New South Wales border. The station comprises eight blocks, about 410 square miles, part consisting of rich flats and mulga ridges, the balance (the larger area) of open rolling downs, well grassed with Mitchell grass, cotton bush, and salt bush, and is fine fattening country. The stock consist of about 22,000 sheep, 15,000 of which are ewes.

ORIENT is watered by dams and waterholes on the creeks running through the station. Buildings and stations all in good order, and in all respects suitable for requirements. The carrying capacity of the station (with further improvements) is moderately estimated at 70,000 sheep. The annual rent is only £194, and railways are being pushed out in that direction, so that wool and all other produce will be conveyed to Brisbane or the banks of the Darling in New South Wales. We earnestly recommend men of moderate capital to inspect ORIENT, as it is for positive sale, and will surely enrich whoever buys it. All particulars further from

There is a good Dwelling-house situated on the Gwydir River, with good fruit and vegetable garden, with all necessary outbuildings attached, also new woolshed for 16 shearers, huts, cattle and sheep yards, &c., &c.

27 MILES FROM GOULBURN
and
WITHIN 12 MILES OF CROOKWELL,
Where railway communication will soon be established, the estimates for same having been passed, when the property must really become a very valuable one.

This splendid property comprises in all an area of
TWO THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED AND EIGHTEEN ACRES THREE ROODS AND SIXTEEN PERCHES, being
933a. 3r. 16p. FREEHOLD and 1985a. 3r. CONDITIONAL PURCHASE, and in addition 330a. C. LEASE.

FINLAY and CO. (Goulburn) have received instructions to sell by auction, at their Rooms, Belmore-square, Goulburn, on THURSDAY, 14th instant, at 11 o'clock,
This splendid DAIRY, AGRICULTURAL, and PASTORAL PROPERTY, held by the family for over forty years; is the pick of the celebrated Wheeo district; one of the richest and most fertile farms within 30 miles of Goulburn. Every acre must soon double itself in value, as a matter of two years must bring it in touch with the Crookwell railway.

Every acre can be made to produce crops and cereals of all kinds, and that without the aid of costly irrigation, as the country throughout is splendidly watered, while for dairying purposes it cannot be excelled, except upon lands on the coast, valued at £30 per acre. One remark may be here interjected—"Why give coast prices when you get at times such land as we are describing at from 25s to 4s per acre?"

The property is entirely fenced in and subdivided into eight paddocks. There is a good cottage residence on it and other improvements. From 300 to 400 acres have been under cultivation, and there is any quantity available for like purpose.

The road from Goulburn is excellent, and the distance to the Post-office and Public school is within three miles.
The Crookwell railway, now a certainty, will bring this property within four hours of the city of Goulburn and nine of Sydney, which means no waste of time in sending to market and making convertible into hard cash everything that can be produced on the farm.

As the sale is peremptory and the time short for inspection, intending purchasers would do well to inspect at once; every facility for so doing upon application to the Auctioneers, where plan of estate may be inspected.

TERMS OF SALE: One-fourth cash, one-fourth at 6 months; balance may remain secured for a term of three years.

Note.—All conditions of c.p.s. have been complied with. The country is magnificently grassed.

GOULBURN.

THURSDAY, 14th instant.

NARRAWA, NARRAWA,
FISH RIVER,
30 miles from Goulburn (west).

The property of the late Dr. Gibson, and for sale under the trusts of the will.

FOR POSITIVE SALE.

THE CELEBRATED OLD SHEEP HOMESTEAD.
The best watered and soundest piece of country in the River District.

One day's drive from Goulburn over a splendid road.

FINLAY and CO., Goulburn, have received instructions to sell by auction, at their Rooms, on THURSDAY, 14th instant, at 11 o'clock,
The original Narrawa Homestead, held by the family of the late Dr. Gibson for half a century, and now brought into the market for POSITIVE SALE to close the Trusts of the Estate.
The property comprises an area of THREE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED and EIGHTY ACRES, 3280 ACRES,
being 2960 acres Freehold and 320 acres C.P., splendid pastoral and agricultural country, fenced in and subdivided; the fencing is principally 7-wire sheep-proof and 5 wires and top rail. Cottage, Store, excellent Woolshed, and other conveniences, and portions partially ringbarked.

There is probably no better known pastoral property than the NARRAWA or FISH RIVER, and there certainly is no sounder or better piece of country, a fair portion of it being suitable for agricultural purposes. The country is magnificently grassed and watered, and it would be difficult to overstock it at present.

The special features of and recommendations to the "Narrawa" Property are:—
First—That the area brings it within the reach of the man of moderate means.
Second—That it is as perfect a piece of grazing country as can be obtained so close to one of the best markets in the colony (30 miles), at a price very much below what may be termed suburban value.
Third—That a property so close to market, Goulburn, Crookwell, and Burrowa, obtainable under suburban value (4s to 5s an acre grazing rent value), must surely be the best kind of investment and leave a larger profit to the investor.
Fourth—That the property is fenced, subdivided, sheep-proof, requires little outlay, and the evidence of its having been secured 50 years ago, and held for that period, is proof beyond doubt of its excellence; and, last, that it is for positive sale on the most liberal terms—
ONE-THIRD CASH; BALANCE at 3 YEARS at 6 PER CENT.

Note.—Those interested will gain much information from the agents, and every assistance will be given to inspect the property.
Plan on view at the Rooms, Belmore-square.
A special feature omitted is that this property will be brought into very close proximity to the Crookwell railway in a very short time, when the value must be doubled.

GOULBURN.

RAVENSWORTH.

RAVENSWORTH.

Two miles from the Post-office, Goulburn.

THE MOST ATTRACTIVE and FINEST SUBURBAN PROPERTY in the suburbs of Goulburn.

To gentlemen desirous of securing a charming, healthy, and beautiful country residence in the suburbs of the City of Goulburn, RAVENSWORTH offers unmistakably the greatest attractions. The grounds are lovely, the situation enchanting. Every surrounding pleases the eye, and the very vigour of health must be retained and an impaired constitution restored by a residence at RAVENSWORTH. Therefore, as a FAMILY RESIDENCE OR SANATORIUM
it cannot be excelled. There is no place, Bowral and Mittagong included, that can compare with it or can offer such beauty and varied scenery as RAVENSWORTH commands; and although the property originally cost a large sum of money, it is brought into the market for and at the buyer's estimate of value.

FINLAY and CO. (Goulburn) have received instructions from the Administrator of the Estate to sell by auction, at their Rooms, Belmore-square, on
THURSDAY, 14th INSTANT,
at 11 o'clock,
THAT HIGHLY VALUABLE and ATTRACTIVE PROPERTY known as RAVENSWORTH.

The house is a fashionable and modern-designed Residence, built of brick, with all the latest and most complete improvements that taste and money could command. It is situated on, and was selected from, the choicest site of the celebrated Kenmore Estate—about 2 miles from the city, and, with its grounds, gardens, lawns, shrubbery, orchard, and vineyard, covers an area of
THIRTY-EIGHT ACRES TWO ROODS FIVE PERCHES
(38a. 2r. 5p.).

The approach by the lodge is through an avenue of ornamental trees and shrubbery, and the house stands on a terraced plateau, taking in one of the grandest panoramic views that can well be imagined, city, plain, valley, and ranges all being in the near distance—a variety of scenery which is at once most pleasing and attractive.

The conveniences comprise—House with verandah and conservatories opening from rooms, wide entrance hall, drawing-room with bay windows, massive marble mantelpieces in every room, dining-room, library with bookcases, bedroom with bay window, dressing-room, bathroom (hot, cold, and spray), pantry, storeroom with fittings complete, servants' hall, kitchen, cooking range, boiler, copper boilers, five bedrooms on the first floor, bathrooms, electric and alarm bells, also wardrobes, clothes presses, &c.; water laid on throughout the house, which is supplied by several large tanks and 10,000 underground cemented tank—in all about 30,000 gallons.

Four-stall stable, coachhouse, harness-room, groom's room, loft, cemented ash-pit, fowl-house, wood-house, gasometer, with gas and chandeliers throughout the house, and branch fittings to all the rooms.

The Lodge is a beautiful two-storied Cottage, and all buildings are brick and modern. With the House will be sold a SMALL BLOCK OF LAND, upon which is erected an engine-house, with engine and gear for supplying Ravensworth House and Grounds with water from the river; the garden throughout being laid down with pipes for irrigating purposes.

The Garden and Orchard cover about 6 acres, and contain a choice variety of fruit trees, 7 years old, and in full bearing. The Vineyard about 4 acres, laid down with the choicest vines, trenched; standard pipes in lawn, and water laid on. Excellent Home Paddocks, &c.

It is impossible to convey within the limits of an advertisement the completeness of everything in and pertaining to Ravensworth. No outlay will be required at the hands of the purchaser, and it is certain that the submission of this property will give to the purchaser a perfect country residence in the most healthy part of the colony, and in all probability at half its original cost.
An inspection is simply requested, and a sale must result.
The Auctioneers will gladly show intending purchasers over the property.

FARM adjoining, comprising an area of 42a. 0r. 7p., fenced in, a portion of the Original Kenmore Subdivision; has been under cultivation; lucerne grows freely and well; every inch is fit for the plough; good dam; and from its proximity to the city a Farm of considerable value, and would make an excellent addition to Ravensworth.

TERMS: One-fourth cash, one-fourth on execution of conveyance; balance may remain secured for a term of years if required.

VALUABLE CATTLE STATION in NORTHERN QUEENSLAND, with 10,000 MIXED CATTLE.

PITT, SON, and BADGERY, Limited, have received instructions from Messrs. THOMAS HUNGERFORD and SONS to sell by auction, at the Exchange, Sydney, at an early date, 1000 miles of their well-known Dunbar station, with 10,000 head of well-bred shorthorn mixed cattle, situated on the Mitchell River, county of Cork, Northern Queensland.

The Mitchell River country is well and permanently watered, and admirably suited for cattle. The proximity of this station to the Croydon, Table Top, Etheridge, and Charters Towers Goldfields is of great advantage, the fat cattle being always saleable at good prices. The prospective value of this run is assured, for Northern Queensland gives unmistakable promise of being the great gold-producing country of Australia, and there can be no question of the ultimate worth of stations so well situated as Dunbar.
The rainfall is so reliable that the proprietors estimate the run will carry, one year with another, from 25,000 to 30,000 head of cattle.

Each paddock is securely enclosed, well watered, well sheltered, and well improved; is admirably suited for cultivation, dairy farming, or fruit culture, and at present is splendidly grassed.

No. 2 paddock contains a natural deposit of OXIDE OF IRON, extending over an area of 3 acres. From half an acre alone 900 tons of this valuable article of commerce have been removed and disposed of in the market at 25s per ton.

The whole of the unsold portions of this magnificent estate, being conveniently situated to the town of Kiama. THE NOTED WIDGEEGOARA STUD.

TO BE CLEARED OUT.

PITT, SON, and BADGERY, Limited, have received instructions from Messrs. E. and J. Bignell to sell by auction, at BOURKE, on SATURDAY, 23rd November next, at 11 o'clock, 93 pure pedigree cattle, from Widgeegoara, consisting of—
91 females, aged 18 months to 6 years, about equal proportions, served by Brunswick Lad, Lord Churchill, and Grand Duke of Waterloo, and 2 stud bulls.

The auctioneers desire to call special attention to this sale, for the following reasons, viz., the entire stud is to be cleared out. There are few, if any, studs to be compared with them. Such cattle must increase in value, and those who purchase will have the benefit of half a lifetime spent in building up these cattle to their present excellent standard. The Messrs. Bignell are acknowledged judges, and have taken advantage of an intimate knowledge of the best herds in Victoria and New South Wales, by securing cows and bulls from those who had the very highest quality, viz., the Messrs. Morton, Mount Derrimut; Robertson Bros., Colac; Gardiner, Bundoora Park; C. B. Fisher, Maribyrnong; M'Culloch, Glenroy, and other noted breeders.

Queenslanders know the value of Bignell blood, as is testified by the fact that for the last four years the bulls from 10 to 18 months old have averaged by auction at Cunnamulla from 14 to 16 guineas per head. This opportunity should not be lost sight of by large or small holders.

Catalogues with extended pedigrees are in course of preparation, and can be had on application to the Auctioneers, Sydney.

NEW SANATORIUM and SUMMER RESORT.
ST. HUBERT'S ISLE, beautiful in itself, and situated in the heart of the lovely scenery of Brisbane Water, has now been thrown open as a Sanatorium to a limited number of holiday-seekers—those who wish to enjoy rest and quiet, as well as a complete change of air.
Shooting, fishing, boating, &c., can be enjoyed to the full, while the oyster-beds surrounding the island provide that delicacy in all its freshness.
As there can only be a limited number of guests at one time, the thorough quiet and repose which cannot be obtained at our more crowded health resorts can here be secured.
Those who have not before visited the Island or the lovely district of which it forms a part will be charmed with the scenery and will appreciate the quiet that prevails.
Boats from the Island wait on either train or steamer, according to arrangement.
For all information intending visitors are requested to apply early either to A. J. CORMACK, solicitor, 288, George-street, Sydney; or to

TO OUR FRIENDS AND ADHERENTS IN THE COUNTRY.
Ladies and Gentlemen,
We now take up our pen to write you a few lines, hoping they will reach you in the enjoyment of good health and stout pockets, and we wish to tell you that we are opening our new Stock of CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR CARDS, and that, if you would like to be first in the field, the sooner your kind favours are sent along the better we can serve you. In a whisper we tell you SEND YOUR ORDERS EARLY.

A CONVINCING TESTIMONIAL.

PERSONS interested in the TYPEWRITER are requested to specially note the following testimonial, which, coming from a perfectly unbiassed source, is of ten times more value than the puffing statements of interested agents of Typewriters.

St. Philip's Grammar School, Church Hill, Sydney, 31st October, 1889.

Messrs. Stott and Hoare, Shorthand and Type Writers, 1 and 6, Victoria Arcade, Sydney.

Dear Sirs,—In reply to yours asking particulars of our Shorthand and Typewriting Department:—

About two years ago I began teaching Shorthand as an ordinary subject, and there are now 70 boys learning. I find it practicable to embody in the shorthand instruction, lessons in Scripture, English Grammar, and Composition, Spelling, Dictation, the memory work of Elocution, and Commercial Correspondence, and hope soon to apply it, more or less, to French, Latin, Elementary Science, &c. As, in order to get up speed, these lessons are written from dictation generally 20 or 30 times, it will be understood that information thus acquired is well impressed on the memory.

With regard to TYPEWRITING, I formed a class at your suggestion in September of last year. It now numbers 30, including 8 of my boarders, who have the use of the machines in transcribing their night work. We have now 6 Remington Machines going all day, and I have been surprised at the progress of the more apt pupils, one having attained a speed of 50 words per minute in a fortnight; another 50 words per minute in a month. I am informed that a number of the boys will shortly have machines for home use, which will enable them to do much of their home work in about one-half the usual time. We find that the machines, from the admirable strength and simplicity of their construction, stand even the rough usage of school boys, and I am assured that in careful hands your REMINGTONS may be kept in constant work for years without the necessity for repairs.

I am gratified to find that your anticipations of the ease with which well-educated youths, who are also expert Shorthand Writers and Typewriters, obtain superior appointments has been fully realised. I hope to have 6 or 8 others ready in December for the places you name.

I remain, Dear Sirs, Yours truly, A. B. DIMELOW.
